Go Get 'Em, Flying Jets!

All Adams county (except a few sour-grape losers) will be cheering for the Adams Central Flying Jets in Saturday's regional contests.

This is really the first year, not only for Coach Vernon Zuercher, a home-town boy who has made good in his first year at home, but also for the Flying Jets themselves. While there was a Greyhound team before, which in 14 years was unable to win a sectional, the new Flying Jets, with all the fine basketball spirit of its many predecessors — Pleasant Mills, Monroe, Kirkland, the Greyhounds, etc. — have come up with a real winning combination. Gary Clouse, formerly of Pleasant Mills Spartans, is one of the first-team members of the new team.

Adams Central has made a fine mark in scholarship and music, living up the heritage of its past, and now it has done it in basketball. We understand that almost the entire town of Monroe is closing Saturday at 10 a.m. for the trip to Fort Wayne.

The new spirit is partly due to the combination background of the teachers who make up, and have made up, the present school system, and its predecessors. This spirit, as important in scholarship and music, has come to the fore this year in athletics, which will undoubtedly bubble over and affect all of the fans as well.

While many of us feel that basketball is overemphasized (we could send no one to cover a governor candidate because he was speaking the first night of the sectional, and all of the editorial side was needed to cover the games) it does serve the useful purpose of rallying the people behind the school.

Education is fast growing in importance in our lives, and fine new school units like the new Adams Central Community Schools will play an ever increasing part in our lives. While basketball fans may have been one of the major former obstacles to prevent growth of school systems, with the new systems, fans will insist on ever-better schools so their children can compete with big - city young people.

So, go to it, Adams Central Flying Jets!

Prove that a "country" school is just as good as the biggest in the cities! Carry our county's banner through the regional, and as far as you can! On to state!
