Enjoying Life

Have you ever noticed the difference in ways that some people advance through life? Some seem to really enjoy it, and have a good time; others always look on the dark side of life, and grow old and grumpy.

We have lots of good examples right here in Decatur. A good example are Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Archbold. "Archie," our former county agent, has been retired now about five years.

He and Mrs. Archbold could just have sat at home, and grown older and older, and finally rusted out. But they are not doing that.

As county agent, "Archie" had to stay pretty close to Adams county most of the time. But he decided that since he was retired, he would travel around, and see some of the rest of the world.

Every fall the Archbolds visit their children, and then head for Texas, where they stay through most of December. Then they decide where to go.

One of "Archie's" dreams has been to see the Maya ruins on the Yucatan peninsula, far down in southern Mexico. The Maya had a marvellous civilization, with temple cities, paved roads, advanced mathematics and calendars, fine clothes, farming techniques, and other "modern" things 500 years before Columbus discovered America!

Until recently, there have been on paved roads into the Yucatan area. The Archbolds travel with a small trailer, but they decided to leave it, and drive without it—and were very glad they did. They had to make seven fords by boat—and on one they had to back off the boat. The roads were rough and narrow too.

Archbold was quite astonished at the condition of the soil. Although tropical in nature, the ground was so leached out and poor that only brush and scrub growth, thick but undernourished, could get a start. The limestone rolling ground leached away moisture in a hurry.

The small, bowlegged native Maya can still be seen in the area, but poor farming methods have left them starving.

The Archbolds had a wonderful 18 days seeing old ruins and new sights; Mrs. Archbold ranks this trip with one they took a few years ago through northern Canada and back through New England.

You see, a lot of life is who you do with it—you can go and enjoy life—all of it—or you can sit home and mope. Think of the wonderful life the Archbolds have made for themselves after some people have "retired"!

Vote In Primary

To The Editor:

In the interests of Democratic party harmony I urge you to vote May 5. The primary is your party convention insofar as your congressman is concerned. Please be a registered delegate and prove you are interested in choosing a responsible representative on Capitol Hill. A responsible two-party system requires each of us to be a delegate helping to choose a responsible delegate. Let your special interest be choosing someone to represent the 4th district, someone who urges a unified approach to government by local, state, and national governments. Your congressional representative must concern himself with all these problem areas of responsible American government. Show your concern as a delegate May 5.

Robert E. Ahang,
Candidate for Congress
4th Indiana District
