Robt. Kennedy Pays Visit To West Germany

BONN, Germany (UPI) — U.S. Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy arrived in West Germany today to retrace the steps taken by his late brother during the president's triumphal visit to Germany one year ago.

Kennedy arrived by air in Frankfurt and proceeded to Bonn, the West German provisional capital, by helicopter. He said he was bringing a personal message from President Johnson to Chancellor Ludwig Erhard.

At every stop, Kennedy took time to shake hands with small crowds of Germans and Americans who cheered and chanted, "Bobby, Bobby."

Between Frankfurt and Bonn, Kennedy stopped off at Friedberg to join U.S. armored maneuvers. He rode an M60 tank a few miles.

Riding with him, on top of the turret, was the Army's newly appointed vice chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Creighton Abrams.

After the ride, Kennedy shook hands with the tank crew. They were Staff Sgt. James C. Davis of Waynesboro, Ga., tank commander; Spec. William C. McKenzie of Cincinnati; Spec. 5 Francis E. Halbach of Fort Dodge, Iowa, and Pfc. Stanley J. Jacques of Minneapolis.

Friday, on the first anniversary of the late President Kennedy's emotion-packed visit to West Berlin, the attorney general will unveil a plaque to his brother's memory.

"Ich bin ein Berliner," the President had said to that vast crowd in front of the city hall, and West Berlin had responded to a foreign head of state as it never had before. Now the square in front of the city hall is named "John F. Kennedy Platz."

It was there, too, on the night of Nov. 22, 1963, that many Berliners assembled once again — this time spontaneously — to mourn for the fallen President who was assassinated while on a trip to Texas.

The plaque recalls both occasions: the jubilant appearance of June 26, 1963 and the sad day five months later.

Gov. Scranton Takes Campaign Into Ohio

MIAMI (UPI) — Gov. William Scranton of Pennsylvania took his campaign for Republican convention votes to Ohio today after outlining a Cuba policy here that calls for arming exiles for guerrilla warfare against Fidel Castro.

Scranton, accompanied on a six-state campaign swing by his wife, three of their children and a large following of newsmen, left Miami aboard a chartered airplane at 7:39 a.m. EST (8:39 a.m. EDT). He was scheduled to arrive in Cleveland shortly after 11 a.m. EST (noon. EDT).

The Pennsylvania governor, an 11th hour entry into the Republican race for the presidential nomination, could look on his overnight Florida trip as a successful first foray into the South.

He picked up at least some of Florida's 32 unpledged delegates to next month's GOP convention in San Francisco. Scranton said, although he had been given little chance of winning any.

He spelled out for the first time a Cuban program going further than the present one in its action proposals, but still staying short of the proposals of Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona, the leader by a wide margin in the race for the nomination.

He got in some good licks both at the Johnson administration for "a paralysis of leadership" in Cuban policy, and at Goldwater for a doctrine of "naked power."

In a news conference, Scranton flung statistics from political polls at newsmen which he said are "tremendously overwhelming" against Goldwater's chance of winning the presidency in a general election campaign against President Johnson, and which indicate Goldwater "would not carry even a majority of the Republican votes."

Beauchamp ruled Miss Miller legally insane at the time of the shooting and at the present time after consulting with Prosecutor Joseph R. Roe and Miss Miller's attorney, Frederick Turcove, Fort Wayne.

One of the court-appointed physicians termed Miss Miller "pre-psychotic with schizophrenic reactions of paranoid type." Another doctor believed she suffers from brain damage probably of congenital origin.

In summary, one psychiatrist said, "she tried to escape from a dominating mother; attempted to work entirely out of doors and was left home alone on family trips during which she resorted to a dream life — she is unable to feel grief."
