If you are thinking about planting evergreens, such as yews or junipers, you should do it from mid-August to the middle of September. Shrubs set out then will become established before winter and will be ready for vigorous growth next spring. Proper planting is important, and be sure to dig a hole twice as wide and six inches deeper than the plant's root system. You do not have to remove burlap from balled-in plants, just loosen it at the top. However, remove plastic wrappings.

Add good soil, three parts top soil and one part peat moss plus one and a half to two pounds of 10-6-6 fertilizer per 100 square feet of shrub bed. But don't pack it around the new plant with your feet since you may break the roots. Settle the soil with water instead.

After planting, water the evergreens well and continue to water them into the winter. When you water the newly transplanted shrub, mulch the soil surface with two or more inches of peat moss to hold the moisture. Do not trim your evergreens when you plant in the fall since you probably will force soft growth which winter kill quite easily.

The proper care now for strawberry beds will mean a bigger and better strawberry crop next year. Fertilizing now is important since flower buds determine next year's crop. Fertilizer will increase the number of buds and yield. Five pounds of 5-20-20 fertilizer per 100 feet of row would be quite beneficial.

If you want to use your old strawberry bed again next year, renovate it immediately. Mow off the plants at a one and a half inch height, using your rotary lawn mower, but be sure you don't harm the corals. Then rake off the old foliage and burn it. Narrow the width of each row from eight to ten inches and thin the remaining plants in the rows to eight inches apart, and then apply the fertilizer.

Strawberry plants can use an inch of water a week, so water them when it's dry.

... more PROTECTION

Famous 80-20 collision coverage protects you against EVERY LOSS
... regardless of the amount

Have you ever compared the premium cost and coverages in your present auto policy, with those offered by Farm Bureau Insurance?

You'll find that you usually can get more protection for the same premium cost ... or, the same protection for lower premium cost ... or both!

For example: consider our famous 80-20 collision coverage. You pay only 20% of the loss, even if it is only one dollar. Farm Bureau Insurance pays 80% of each loss, up to $200 ... and 100% of the loss above that. The most you can ever pay on one loss is $40, even if your car is totally demolished.

Here is protection that relieves you of the financial strain of every accident, yet the premium is comparatively low. That's why 84% of our policyholders who carry collision insurance, are protected with this 80-20 collision coverage.

Available through
Thrifty McBip®

Auto premiums may be paid annually, semi-annually — or you may use the Thrifty McBip plan which allows you to lump all your Farm Bureau Insurance together, and pay for it in regular monthly payments that are easy on your budget.

Does your present auto policy expire soon? See your Farm Bureau insurance agent before renewing. He probably can save you money.
