Our Voting Rights

If anyone would suggest that certain favored people be allowed to vote twice or three times on election day, while the rest of us voted only once, we would rise up in indignant anger.

We all know it is not fair for us to vote more than once — we are each supposed to have one vote, and that is what we expect — no more, no less.

Yet, for some reason, large groups have become convinced that they deserve more votes — not at the polls, but in the legislature — than others.

This is wrong — just plain wrong. There is no excuse for it. It is brazenly un-Christian. It is asking much more than we are willing to give, the inverse of the Golden Rule.

The Constitution of the United States guarantees us a republican form of government. Under a republican form of government, we are represented proportionately in a legislative body.

The Constitution of the United States guarantees us our rights under our state constitution. Yet for 40 years our own state legislature has wickedly, deceitfully failed to obey the Indiana constitution. It has failed to reapportion itself.

Finally after four decades — in some states it has been 60 years or more since a reapportionment — the U. S. Supreme Court has ordered us to obey our own Constitution. This is hardly a radical thing to do.

Every Hoosier is entitled to a vote for state representative, for state senator, and for a Congressman. And each of these representative offices should represent approximately the same number of constituents.

Here is Adams county, our state representative is fairly apportioned. Our state senatorial district needs another county added. Our congressional district is also short a county or two.

Reapportionment is not a matter of Democrats versus Republicans, farmers versus city slickers, etc. It is a matter of fair play for all individuals. Who make up the people in the cities? Why, the sons and daughters of rural America, that's who! Are we ashamed to let our own children vote?

In Indiana there is no indication at all that cheating Hoosiers living in Fort Wayne, or Indianapolis, or any other town, of their vote will benefit anyone — unless it is Russia, who is telling the world that we refuse to let our people be represented!

Baltzell Writes Of Hunting In Yukon

The following letter, written from Carcross, in the Yukon territory, Western Canada, by Dent Baltzell, well-known Adams county farmer and hunter, was received this week by Ralph Habegger, a friend of Baltzell:

"Just got back here by plane from hunting camp high in the mountains. Coming up I stopped at Whitehorse. The deputy game commissioner was very courteous and helpful. I met Johnny Johns and wife and they agreed to take my wife and me along by pack train as they went into Bear Camp. I think the thing that impressed these people and made them want to help us was the fact that I only wanted one trophy, not four as allowed on my license!

Back Into Mountains
"We had 21 horses in all — eight saddle horses — the next carrying packs — a pack train is all organization. Mr. Johns is out fitter, his wife, the princess, does the cooking. His son, Art, is chief guide. Charlie Johns is a guide, and Douglas Rose is the mangler.

"We sleep under the stars in sleeping bags, and start hunting as soon as we leave town. I had a chance at a big moose the first day, but did not want him as Mrs. Johns had got one before we started out. We lived on moose meat until we got into sheep country and then it was the white, wild Dall sheep of the Yukon after my sheep came to camp! I have tasted all the wild meat, and must say that the wild sheep is the best of all."

Journal Quotes
Baltzell sent the following excerpts from his journal:
"Johnny decided we would hunt the 'Duessie Wild' country from willow camp, above timberline (no other trees, we use willows for fire). I hunted one day with Johnny. We saw many sheep but all too far away.

"These sheep have eyes as good as a man with an eight-power binocular! All sheep run uphill when alarmed, so you must get above them. The guide rides ahead and then crawls up to look over into the next valley and so it goes, day after day. Up here it is very cold and windy. Sometimes the clouds float along below. I have been higher in planes, but it is not the same. Up here you know how small you are in all this mighty universe. The sheep live on the grass that grows in little alpine meadows. There are even blue 'forget-me-nots' up here. The scenery is unbelievable.

See Indian Sites
"Next day I hunted with Art and Charles, two of the best guides in the Yukon. We went very high almost to the top of the peaks, and they showed me where their ancestors centuries ago had hunted. They made small rock piles behind which they could hide and spear or shoot with bow and arrow to get sheep. These two guides were of the Wolf tribe, and very proud.

Indian Ponies
"About the Indian ponies and the way they are trained — The gentle touch on the neck is all that is needed. You drop the reins and hunt the long day through. When you return, the horse will still be there. At first I thought to guide my horse, but soon came to know that it was he, not I, who knew the trail, and all the hazards in it.

"I found that on the hazardous slopes it was best to let him choose the way. On steep rock slides where one mishap could mean disaster it was his will that had its way and brought us safely through.

"These native hunters and their horses do unbelievable things. The sheep are there. The mountains are there with patches of snow to head the rivers, and with cliffs and rock slides and awful heights, where only men with knowledge and courage and stamina may safely venture.

Impressive Men
"On this trip two men impressed me more than all the others. At mile 866 you come to Jake's Corner. It is run by Roy Chaykousky. He and his wife came from the Ukraine, in Russia. She bakes wonderful bread and pies. It came to me as we had dinner there that all women should know how to bake good bread, that no child would ever be denied the delight of eating good, warm bread, fresh from the oven, covered with butter.

"Roy keeps an extra cabin for those who cannot pay. He has little formal education, but in many ways is so wise! It is his philosophy that his life should be as a pebble dropped in quiet waters. His circle of friends grows ever larger, each having something of himself. He astounded me by quoting the 91st psalm, 12th verse, 'So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom.'

Opened Alcan Passes
"The other man is known wherever the wild sheep are hunted. From Alaska to the Southern Canadian Rockies I heard stories of him. He went ahead and found the passes where the Alcan highway runs today. So when you round a curve, and climb to dizzy heights, you may know that he was there before you!

"He is perhaps the world's best sheep hunter. He killed his first grizzly bear at 14 years of age. He has walked with the great men of his time and hunted with them, but for all of this is very humble.

Planned to Sled
"Around our fire of willow twigs one night, he told of bringing a load of moose meat down a mountain by dog team. His feet slipped and his knee was pinned to the flying sled. He says he tried to call to the dogs but could not. Someone did, and the dogs leaped sidwise upsetting the sled, and saving his life.

"Since that time, he says he has never been too proud to pray. This is his land. It was here his ancient people hunted sheep. It is his heritage. I am so thankful I had one day with him. He loves this land, and best of all he loves the higher reaches, up where the higher peaks rise well above their fellows, where he had clouds to keep him company and being the poet that he is, he says, 'Up here, you are along with God.'

"When northern lights come on at night
"And artie Heavens quiver
"My thoughts go back to Tagish Lake,
"And camps along the river."
Dent Baltzell

GEORGE LAMBERT, left, of 716 N. 10th street, receives a safe-driving plaque from Norm Steury, right, secretary-treasurer of Decatur Industries, Inc., at a recent dinner honoring the firm's driver. In appreciation for five years of safe driving, covering 300,000 miles, in most of the states east of the Mississippi, and some to the west, Steury made the award to the 1958 Adams Central graduate who is married and has one daughter. Lambert was also honored for taking excellent care of the 24-foot van truck during the five-year period.

Hog, Cattle Prices Soaring At Markets

By United Press International
Hog and cattle prices soared to their highest levels in more than a year at the big Indianapolis stockyards today in the sixth day of the National Farmers Organization's livestock holding action.

Receipts were down from a week ago in all animal classifications at both the Indianapolis and Evansville markets, largest in Indiana.

At Indianapolis, hogs were $1 to $1.25 higher with a top of $20 for No. 1 and 2 in the 200-230 lb range. It was the highest price since July, 1963. Also at Indianapolis, the cattle market was $1 higher with a top of $27 for high choice and prime steers the best price locally since January, 1963.

The Evansville hog market was 75 cents to $1 higher and cattle 50 cents to $1 higher. Receipts at Indianapolis were down from 6,600 to 5,400 for hogs compared to last Monday's volume; from 3,100 to 2,500 for cattle, from 100 to 50 for calves and from 800 to 600 for sheep.
