

Watch for Amendments

There have been a number of well-intentioned but potentially dangerous amendments to the United States constitution in the past few years that could completely wreck our Federal government.

Before you decide whether you are for or against an amendment, decide whether you are for or against the United States government. If you really are against the United States (which is treason, by the way) then you probably will want to favor these amendments. If not, you had better reconsider, and see what effect they would have.

A good example is the amendment that would hand over legislative reapportionment to the state legislatures. For 60 years these same bodies have refused to reapportion fairly according to their own constitutions, not to mention the U. S. constitution. Certainly no one can accuse the Supreme Court of moving precipitately on the question. Three generations of voters have been born and died without reapportionment in some states!

Are you really against majority rule? Do you really favor retention of power in the hands of a tiny minority? If so, remember, it is your sons and daughters that make up the majority — you are franchising your own children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren.

Many recent amendment attempts have been made by disgruntled and vocal minority groups. These groups have every right to propose their amendments. And the people of America have every right, and in fact a decided duty, to consider them. But not too seriously.

We need a continuing review of our rules and regulations to see if we are really keeping them the way we want to. The seniority system in Congress is a good example; the man in Congress the longest time is not necessarily the best. Another the acquiescence of congress to the tyranny of the house rules committee; another, the attempts to hamstring the President who is given the duty of controlling foreign relations.

Any attempt to alter our Bill of Rights should surely be struck down; and every attempt to change it only headlines more emphatically the wisdom of that great Democrat, Thomas Jefferson, who fought for the Bill of Rights, and guaranteed us freedom of religion, of the press, of speech, freedom from having to testify against ourselves, etc.

Another crazy amendment is the so-called Liberty amendment, which would put us in the same condition of anarchy we were in before the Constitution replaced the articles of confederation. This bill would eliminate our fairest tax — the Federal graduated net income tax — and would take the government out of business — literally, as well as figuratively, from the post office to the sale of the TVA. It would immediately bankrupt the country, and make our defense totally impossible. Liberty amendment — for whom?

19 Years To Agree On Building Bridge

By JOSEPH FLEMING
United Press International

BERLIN (UPI) — It took 19 years for East and West Germany to decide to rebuild a border bridge on the main highway connecting Berlin and South Germany.

For 15 years the matter hardly was discussed. It took four years of negotiations to sign an agreement after formal discussions began.

That tells a lot about East-West German relations. Considering the state of the relations the wonder is that agreement on rebuilding the bridge was reached at all, not that it took so long.

In fact, there are no relations between the (Western) Federal Republic of Germany and the (Eastern) German Democratic Republic, if by relations diplomatic ties are meant.

West Germany considers itself the only legitimate German state and refused to recognize East Germany or have any official dealings with it. The western allies support this stand.

Wants To Be Recognized

East Germany, on the other hand, desires western recognition and at every possible opportunity suggests high-level East-West German negotiations on disputed questions.

This clash accounts for the delay in reaching an agreement to rebuild the Autobahn Bridge over the Saal River near Hof on the border of the East German province of Thuringia and the West German state of Bavaria.

The bridge was blown up by German Army engineers in April, 1945 in a vain effort to halt U. S. Army as World War II neared its end.

Since then traffic has taken a one-hour detour over bad back roads, dangerous in winter.

It was to everyone's interest to rebuild the bridge. But the East German demand for some form of recognition and West German refusal to grant it kept coming up.

First the East Germans demanded that an agreement be signed by the West German and East German transport ministers.

West Germany refused as it always has refused negotiations on a ministerial level that East Germany could point to as a precedent or sign of recognition.

Leopold Is Selected

It said negotiations must be carried out by the head of the West German Trade Office in Berlin which negotiates with East Germany on inter-national trade.

The trade head, Dr. Kurt Leopold, is a low-level official who according to the West German government carries on only "technical" discussions that in now way imply political or diplomatic recognition.

After long delay the East Germans said they would accept Leopold but only if the West German transport minister officially gave him power of attorney to negotiate.

West Germany again refused on the same old grounds—recognition.

Then the East Germans demanded that at least Leopold sign the bridge agreement in the name of the West German government.

The West Germans again refused and Leopold finally signed the agreement Aug. 14 as head of the West German Trade Mission in West Berlin. Siegfried Kasper, Deputy East German Highway Chief, signed for East Germany.

This is the outside world may be considered ridiculous hair-splitting, but it is a game that is played with great ardor in both West and East Germany.

It complicates and often makes impossible East-West German dealings.

Easier Threading

To thread a very small needle, first pin a sheet of white paper to the wall about three or four feet from the light. Hold the needle between the light and sheet so that the needle casts a distinct shadow on the sheet. Watching this shadow, bring the thread to the hole. The enlarged image makes it easy to thrust the thread into the needle hole.

Lint Screen

Try using a metal scouring pad to clean the lint from a clogged washing-machine screen. Coarse steel wool is also an effective device for this purpose.

Rubber Cap Grip

For a firm, non-slip grip when opening food jars with stuck or slippery screw caps, wrap a thick rubber band tightly around the cap once or twice.

White Kid Gloves

One way to clean white kid gloves is to pull them onto the hands and douse with alcohol. Remove, and they will dry quickly without retaining an odor.

Minister Tells Of Troubles In South

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

The Rev. Thomas B. Allen is a tall, soft-spoken young minister who serves as rector of an Episcopal church in one of the wealthier suburbs of Washington, D.C.

He has just returned from Greenwood, Miss., where he spent his vacation trying to help Negroes register for voting.

Greenwood is the town where a young Negro was shot from ambush this week after attending the all-white movie theater. It is a grim place this summer, and many of its white residents are not kindly disposed toward outsiders like Tom Allen.

The Rev. Mrs. Allen expected to encounter hostility. But the instructions he received from National Council of Churches representatives upon his arrival in Mississippi surprised even him.

Never Alone

"We were instructed never to go anywhere alone. Only in real necessity to go out after dark — and then only in a large group or convoy. We should have lock gas tank caps for our car. Hide the car when not in use to protect our tires from being slashed. Keep it always locked so liquor bottles could not be placed in it, thus warranting an arrest for possession of alcoholic beverages."

"We were to disconnect the door-light of our car so that we would not be silhouetted at night. Never sit in a lighted room without the shades drawn. Sleep as far from the entrance of our dwelling as possible to diminish bomb damage to our persons."

Modern Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. I've had several dates with a certain young man, and I think a lot of him. His birthday is approaching, and I'm wondering if it would be proper for me to give him a gift.

A. Properly, a gift is given only if you are engaged to him. Otherwise a suitable card is the proper remembrance — or perhaps an invitation to dinner in your home in honor of his birthday.

Q. When a meat dish is passed to you at the table, and the portion held toward you is too large, too well done, or has too much fat on it, is it all right to search through the portions for a suitable piece?

A. Yes — if you can do so without taking too much time or without disarranging the whole dish. Q. How does a guest know when to begin eating at a dinner?

A. It is generally considered the courteous thing to wait until the others have been served, either at the beginning of a meal or at the beginning of a new course, before starting to eat. Usually the hostess is the first to begin, which gives the signal for the others to start.

Q. Is it really considered in good taste to extend any and all kinds of social invitations over the telephone?

A. One may use the telephone for almost any kind of invitation, with the exception of formal ones. Q. On which arm of her father does the bride proceed down the aisle of the church?

A. On his right arm.

AFL-CIO Heads Back Johnson For President

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The AFL-CIO Executive Council today recommended overwhelmingly that the giant labor organization formally endorse the Johnson-Humphrey ticket against the Republican team of Goldwater-Miller.

The Executive Council's recommendation went to the 166-member General Board of the AFL-CIO for ratification. This was scheduled later today, with the board scheduled to present the union blessing to President Johnson at the White House.

Paul Hall, president of the Seafarers' International Union and a member of the Executive Council, said after the council meeting that Sen. Barry M. Goldwater "keeps talking about giving the American people a choice but in the process he doesn't give the American labor movement a choice."

Hall said the Executive Council's recommendation for Johnson was "virtually unanimous." Much the same was expected at the General Board of the 13-million member union.

In another politically sensitive area, the AFL-CIO scheduled a conference Wednesday of 300 union leaders to discuss ways to bring about full compliance with the new civil rights law.

AFL-CIO sources indicated that part of this program would be aimed at explaining that the law does not mean Negroes will displace white workers. Such a fear is said to account in part for a "backlash" sentiment against the administration among some union members in northern cities.

The conference also is expected to approve a more intensive AFL-CIO program for fighting racial discrimination within the labor movement before fair employment practices sections of the law take effect next summer.

All-out labor opposition to Goldwater has been obvious even before his nomination as the GOP standard-bearer. Union critics say his voting record is close to 100 per cent "wrong" on key issues.

Even labor leaders who have been lifetime Republicans are deserting their party to back Johnson this fall.

IT TAKES A LITTLE PUSH

There are many ways to earn a good living today. There will be as many — if not more — tomorrow. With one difference. In tomorrow's good job, you'll be using different methods, working with new machines.

You won't get tomorrow's jobs with yesterday's skills

Tomorrow's jobs will demand more. New skills. New abilities. The men who fill those jobs will have to have more to offer. They'll have to be qualified.

You can qualify for the good jobs of tomorrow by re-training. Today. It might mean taking a few courses at night school. Or some time practicing a new skill, honing up on new techniques.

Is it worth the trouble? It is if you want to make a better living — tomorrow. And in the years to come. The local office of your state employment service can provide some helpful advice. Why not take it?

Train now for tomorrow's jobs
