

HOT WORK — Don Jeffrey cuts through a steel cable as he and Stan Workman assist in the task of preparing for the annual soybean rush at Decatur's Central Soya plant. Weather and market conditions make it difficult to predict the amount of beans to be received this fall, say company officials. The Decatur plant provides a ready market for northern Indiana and Ohio farmers, who made the soybean one of their top cash crops. —(Photo by Cole)

More On Our Courts

Our city judge answered last night's front-page editorial in the usual method — an announcement appeared on the police bulletin board that the city court would be on vacation for the next two weeks, and not in session!

Was this the regularly scheduled vacation period for the city judge? Or is he trying to avoid the pressure of public opinion by disappearing until the public indignation cools off? Or does he want to avoid making public his court records?

We would like to make clear that we do not feel that any one person is entirely at fault in our local law enforcement laxity scandal. All of us are at fault. If you try to unravel the mess it develops into one of the most humorous "Tweed ring" situations of buck-passing you have ever seen!

In the 1880's the New York newspapers printed a series of stories exposing the graft of the corrupt New York city administration, controlled by Boss Tweed, of the Tammany Hall organization. When the city officials were called on to testify, each pointed an accusing figure at someone else. Cartoonist Thomas Nast drew a famous political cartoon, showing them all standing in a circle, each pointing to the next, and called it the Tweed ring, all equally guilty.

Since last night's editorial, numbers of people have called or personally seen the editor to express their feelings in deep sympathy with better law enforcement here. Only one objection, and that not on the subject, but on two paragraphs tying responsibility to local lawyers, was voiced, and that was by an attorney.

What more can be done at present? Really quite a bit. This next week we will take every legal means to show the number of arrests made locally by the city police, county sheriff's office, and state police, and their disposition so far this year. We will attempt to compare this with other cities.

We will bring to your attention just what has happened, and what can be expected. The amount of cooperation we get in this will be up to you, the general public. If you rest content to read your daily newspaper, and say nothing to those in authority, probably little will be done. But if, every time you see the mayor, the city council, the city police, the prosecuting attorney, an attorney who may be acting prosecutor, the city judge, the local justice of the peace, etc., you mention the fact that you expect to see the laws enforced fairly and fearlessly, without bias, prejudice, and with as much consideration for the general public as it given to the accused, then something will be done.

You, Your Child And The School

By DAVID NYDICK
UPI Education Specialist

There is a growing amount of evidence to indicate that marks in school do not simply reflect the quality of a student's academic work.

Obtaining high marks also involves an individual's personality, attitude, sex, ability to take tests, neatness, and relationship with the teacher.

There are many implications which come from these facts. The most important is the meaning of a mark. It obviously cannot be the sole judgement of an individual's past nor future success as a student. The mark is only one person's opinion of the student's overall performance in class.

Alan has a particularly high I.Q. (ability). He is an excellent reader and has a good knowledge of many areas due to his extensive reading. He is very exacting and often corrects the teacher on minor points in class. He usually finishes his assignments quite rapidly and proceeds to talk with his friends or wander about the room getting into trouble. His work is not very neat.

Work Is Sloppy
As an example his arithmetic answers are always correct but his papers are extremely sloppy. A recent social studies report had excellent information but the writing was so poor that it was difficult to read.

Alan is also a very nervous child. He often becomes ill when a test is announced. His scores on tests are usually low even though he actually knows the correct answers.

His report card indicates an average student. He rarely gets an "A" although he probably knows the work better than any other student in class.

The teacher constantly complains about his behavior and his carelessness.

On the other hand, Mary is a very personable and stable child. All the students like her. She is a methodical and neat worker. She usually completes her assignments with a little time left over which she uses to check her work. Her handwriting is easy to read.

Mary reads quite well. Her arithmetic work is generally correct. She does not attempt work beyond the assignment.

Helpful To Teacher
She is very helpful to the teacher in such things as giving out papers, cleaning the blackboards, etc. There is rarely a time that she asks a question but she is always ready to give the answer which the teacher wants.

Naturally Mary has an outstanding report card. It is rare that she receives a grade below "A."

The question is not which of these students is a better student, but which has more potential and is the potential being achieved?

Alan has a much deeper un-

Silverfish

To banish silverfish, use pyrethrum, or a commercial insect powder containing pyrethrum. Lacking that, the next best thing is sodium fluoride crystals, available at most drugstores. Whenever you use, scatter it liberally around under baseboards and moldings.
