Cities Seeking Larger Share Of Tax Funds

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI)—The Indiana Municipal League ends its 64th annual state convention today after a resolution backing a new municipal tax nearly was defeated.

The league late Tuesday adopted several resolutions aimed at convincing the 1965 Legislature that more money is needed by Hoosier cities and towns.

Six of the resolutions received opposition from the floor and one paving the way toward establishment of a payroll, wheel or some special municipal tax got by on a 59-54 vote.

Shelbyville Mayor Ralph Van Natta voiced the feeling of smaller cities and towns whose residents work in adjoining big cities.

"I don't want Indianapolis Mayor John Barton passing any tax on my people," he said. But Frank McDonald, Evansville mayor and member of the resolutions committee, explained that the proposal was intended only to allow municipalities to "survey potential new tax sources" and not meant to favor any specific measure.

The league also adopted resolutions backing a one-cent hike in the cigarette tax, allocation of the 2 per cent sales tax on retail gasoline sales to municipal street use, and a bigger share of the motor vehicle tax fund for municipalities.

This led Bloomington city clerk Howard Young to warn that legislators will want to know "which one do you want." He urged that the league concentrate on passage of one money-raising bill.

Later, however, Ivan Brinegar, executive director of the league, said "you want more than one egg in your basket" when going to the legislature for money.

West Lafayette Mayor James Williamson suggested that the amount of sales tax paid from a specific city be a basis for return of the sales tax on gasoline. He pointed out that in his city—and also in Bloomington—students are not counted as legal residents although they use the local streets and highways.

New Approach To AF Basic Training

A new approach to basic training will be initiated after October 5, according to Sgt. Dort Crosby, local Air Force representative.

Air Force recruits will receive all their basic training in one six-week stint at Lackland Air Force base, San Antonio, Texas.

Under the present system, they now undergo two-part training. First is a five-week initial phase for everyone. Recruits given a directed-duty assignment then get two and a half weeks. Those selected for technical training are given 83 hours of further basic training at their respective school centers.

The change is the result of a detailed ATC (air training command) analysis of desired minimum essential outcomes of basic military training. Whereas the existing program is slanted toward orientation, the new one identifies essential skills and knowledge, and provides a curriculum which will assure that each airman acquires them.

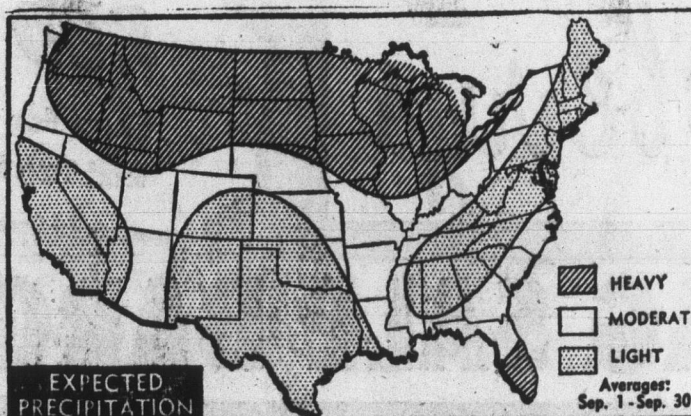

"Nice-to-know" instructional content has been deleted. Advantages of the new one-phase training program are expected to be: (a) improved training quality, (b) improved classification and selection of recruits for technical training courses, (c) reduction of waiting time for personnel entering technical courses, (d) more valid and earlier identification of unsuitable airman, and enhancing selection for sensitive assignments under the human reliability program, and (e) improved recruit morale and incentive.

Sgt. Crosby will be glad to go over the program with interested men at their convenience, and may be contacted at the selective service office in Decatur on Monday of each week.

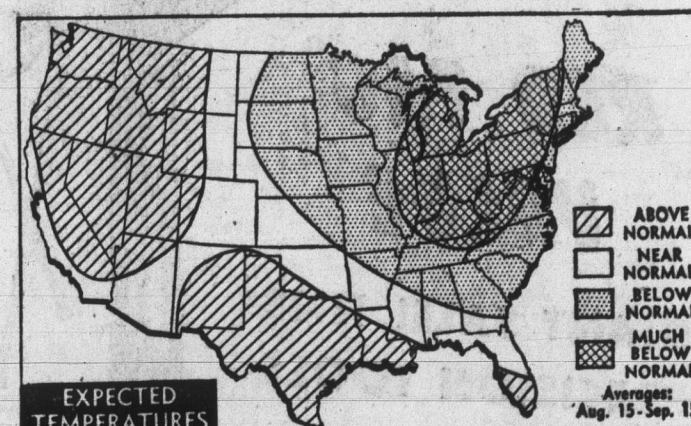

Another resolution which brought considerable opposition was one backing population only as a basis of Senate reapportionment as well as in the House. The vote was 32-48.

Valparaiso Mayor Donald E. Will was elected president of the league, to succeed Madison Mayor Mark Lytle. Other new officers elected were McDonald as first vice president and May or Lloyd Allen, South Bend, as second vice president.

Today's session consisted of sectional meetings during which various municipal officials met with state officials to discuss joint problems.

There'll be plenty of rain in the northern half of the country during September, not so much in the south.

It may be cooler than normal in the eastern third of the country; most heat will stay in western third.

Branigin Says Ristine, Barry See Eye To Eye

Hoosier Candidates Today
By United Press International
Ristine: Winchester tonight.
Branigin: Vincennes tonight.
Bontrager: Fort Wayne tonight.

Hartke: Bluffton, Huntington, Fort Wayne, Kendallville and Warsaw today.

By United Press International
Indiana Democratic gubernatorial nominee Roger D. Branigin charged today that his Republican opponent and Sen. Barry M. Goldwater see eye-to-eye on major issues and "if he takes on that questionable asset, he assumes that terrible liability."

Branigin said in a speech at a party rally in Sullivan Tuesday night that Lt. Gov. Richard O. Ristine and Goldwater are "together in watering down social security, together in weakening organized labor, together on state and federal right to work laws, and together in marching backward from the social progress of the 20th Century."

Branigin described himself as "a middle-of-the-roader, a pretty dull fellow to the militant extremist."

Shares Johnson Ideas
"I find myself comfortably located in the political philosophy of President Johnson," he said.

At Greencastle Tuesday night, Ristine hammered away at a theme popular in his recent campaign appearances—that a vote for Branigin is a vote for a "second term" for Governor Welsh, whom he said hand-picked Branigin as the gubernatorial nominee.

Ristine said failure of the Welsh administration to effectively cooperate with local government units is "additional evidence that Matt Welsh's bid for reelection will be rejected."

Ristine referred to his Tuesday proposal at a convention of the Indiana Municipal League for a state-city coordinator and said "the creation of such an officer never occurred to do nothing Matt Welsh and it never occur to the hand-picked candidate who is supposed to perpetuate the Welsh administration's hold on state government for the next four years."

Branigin speaks at Vincennes tonight and Ristine at Winchester.

State Sen. D. Russell Bontrager, campaigning for the U.S. Senate seat of Sen. Vance Hartke, speaks tonight at Fort Wayne at a Republican rally, and Hartke continued his 10-day tour of the state with stops today at Bluffton, Huntington, Fort Wayne, Kendallville and Warsaw.

Hartke concentrated on an appeal to senior citizens to recognize what the present administration has done about their problems.

"The administration has recognized the problems of the elderly and has sponsored forward-looking programs to ease their burdens," Hartke said. "Most important is the positive program to meet the health needs of senior citizens."

The GOP cause in the state got a lift from a day-long tour of 10 county seat cities today by Barry Goldwater, Jr., son of the party's presidential nominee.

Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace visits Hammond tonight for a speech, and Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., also appears tonight in Lake County.
