Democratic gubernatorial nominee Roger D. Branigin today referred to Lt. Gov. Richard Ristine as "a sort of junior grade Goldwater," accused him of being anti-labor and blamed him for "this tax mess" in Indiana.

Branigin attacked his Republican rival in the governor race in perhaps the strongest terms he has used during his campaign, in a speech prepared for delivery at a Vigo County luncheon at Terre Haute.

He charged Ristine with "the responsibility for this tax mess" in which he said Indiana "is overburdened with high taxes which keep industry away."

"Now it is up to us, a Democratic governor and a Democratic legislature, to straighten things out," he said.

While Branigin spent the day in Terre Haute, Ristine and State Sen. D. Russell Bontrager, the GOP nominee for senator, appeared with former Vice President Richard M. Nixon in Fort Wayne this morning and headed for French Lick to make back-to-back appearances before the directors of the Indiana State Chamber of Commerce at an annual meeting.

Separate Ways Tonight

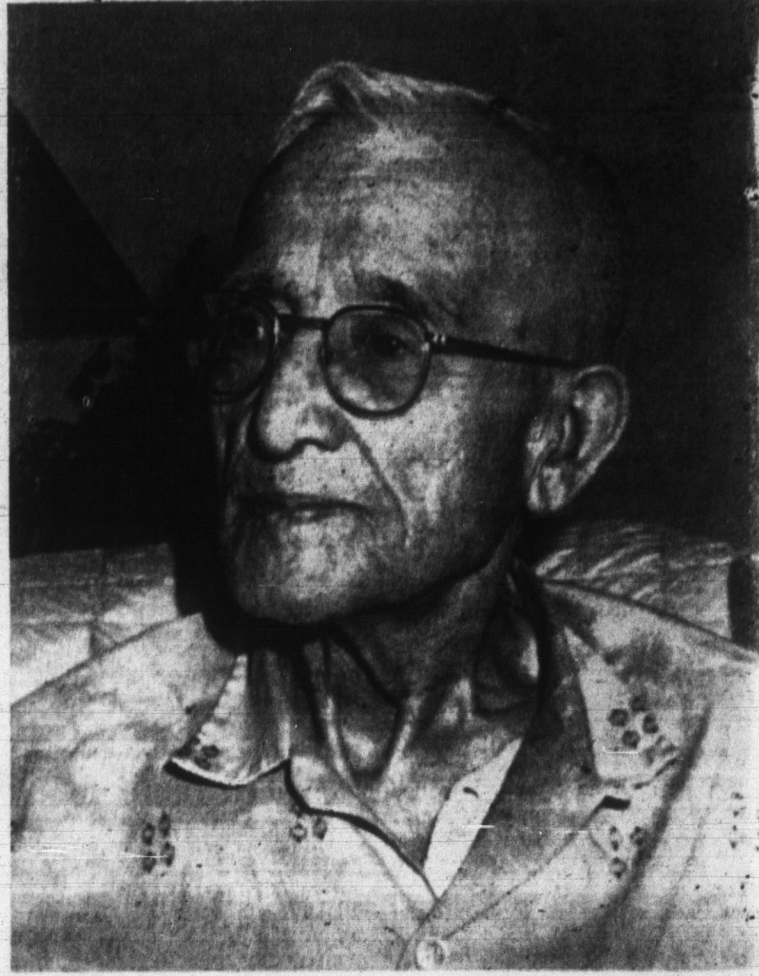

Later, Ristine will go to Bloomington for an Indiana University appearance and Bontrager will appear on a television program at Terre Haute.

Bontrager's rival, Sen. Vance Hartke, a Democrat seeking reelection, told the Indiana State AFL-CIO convention in Indianapolis that a low unemployment rate in Indiana is "a healthy sign for continued prosperity."

Hartke urged the union men to "take an increasingly active role in politics."

"Our job is to defeat once and for all the radical right as a political power," he said.

"The issues in this election transcend party," Hartke also spoke at the annual

NONAGENARIAN—Former Adams county commissioner B. F. Frank Greiner celebrated his ninety-fifth birthday last week. Greiner, a life-long Adams county resident born Oct. 10, 1869 in Kirkland township, served three terms as second district county commissioner, from 1922 to 1931. He formerly ran a farm in Washington township. Only one commissioner since Greiner has held three terms. Still interested in politics, he votes each election by absentee ballot. — (Photo by MacLean)

Former Mental Patient Sought By Texas Police

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (UPI) — Police hunted an ex-mental patient today, hoping his capture would end a series of arrests and raids set off by reports of a plot to kill President Johnson when he visits here Sunday.

The raids uncovered an arsenal of heavy weapons—including machine guns, hand grenades and a bazooka-like rocket launcher—amidst a collection of swastika banners and other Nazi gear.

Two ex-convicts were already jailed, charged Wednesday with violating the federal Firearms Act. But authorities emphasized they were not themselves suspected of plotting to kill the President—only of being possible suppliers of the weapons to be used.

There was no suggestion that the President would cancel his visit to Corpus Christi, part of a campaign swing through his native state. The trip includes Dallas, his first visit to Dallas since President Kennedy was assassinated three cars ahead of him in a motorcade.

"I do not believe there was a plot to kill the President," said Sheriff Johnnie Mitchell, whose men conducted the raids and made the arrests.

"But I do think that one individual made a threat to an informant I trust 100 per cent." Mitchell would not say who his informant was.

"I wanted to cut off the source of supply (of weapons)," the sheriff said, explaining the arrests of Julius Schmidt, 29, and Jerry Joe (Bird) Hoefler, 27.

"There is a possibility the threat on the President's life could have been serious, knowing the type of man (the suspect) is," he said.

Both Schmidt and the other ex-convict have been convicted of murder in the past, Schmidt for shooting a man in the back with a shotgun during a burglary.

It was not clear whether the other man's name was Bird or Hoefler. His wife said their name was Bird, but records in the district attorney's office indicated it was an alias, and his real name is Hoefler.

Schmidt, a plumber and gun trader, is from Corpus Christi. Hoefler or Bird is a hay dealer from a Corpus Christi suburb.

Dana Corp. Strike At Fort Wayne Averted

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (UPI) — A strike of 1,600 production workers at the Dana Corp. plant here was averted when a tentative agreement was reached today on a new contract with the Allied Industrial Workers union.

The old contract expired last midnight. Final approval of a new contract hinged on a union ratification meeting for which no date or time has been set.
