Rhodesian Leader Asks British Talks

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — Premier Ian Smith today termed his independence referendum a "tremendous victory" and renewed his call for independence talks with Britain.

Smith said he had asked British Prime Minister Harold Wilson to send Commonwealth Secretary Arthur Bottomley to Salisbury for consultations.

In London, however, Wilson rejected the invitation to Bottomley on the grounds that Smith has refused to allow the commonwealth secretary to meet nationalist leaders Joshua Nkomo and Ndabaningi Sithole.

Smith said he would be willing to go to London "if certain things are made clear." Apparently this was a reference to Britain's reluctance to grant Rhodesia its independence while it is ruled by a white minority.

The referendum was held Friday. The question was: "Are you in favor of Southern Rhodesia obtaining independence on the basis of the 1961 constitution?"

The results were 58,091 "yes" votes to 6,096 "no" votes, a margin of about 9 to 1.

In London, Sir Roy Welensky, leader of the Rhodesian opposition party, said that abstentions and invalidations in the referendum totaled nearly 47,000 compared to the 58,000 "yes" votes.

"The result is, in my view, an encouragement to moderation and shows a marked desire for a negotiated independence," he said.

But Rhodesian High Commissioner Even Campbell, also in London, saw the results differently.

"The result of the referendum, together with the unanimous decision of the chiefs and headmen of the tribal Africans is undeniable proof of the desire of the people of Rhodesia to sever the country's last remaining constitutional ties with Britain and go forward as an independent member of the commonwealth," he said.

Butcher was arrested around 2 o'clock this morning while driving on U. S. 27 in Berne. Berne policeman Jerry Flueckiger made the arrest and brought Butcher to Decatur to be held at the county jail until his court appearance this morning.
