Wonderful Folks

Attention: Editor

Dear Sir:

What wonderful folks you have in Decatur! The recent spell of inclement weather—first rain and then a blizzard of sleet and snow, did much to bring them to our attention.
While attending a 99 meeting at Auburn the weatherman reported some lowering of ceilings and we heeded his warning, leaving the beautiful new airport before the program was over as we had to return to Indianapolis. There were many planes that took off when we did—but all had to abandon their hopes of flying home. We had planes down at Huntington, Fort Wayne, Hartford City, Anderson, and three of us landed at Decatur Hi-Way Airport.

After the storm seemed to subside we again tried to get through but had to make a 180 when the clouds became lower and more rain arrived. We returned to Decatur Hi-Way Airport where we were given much assistance in caring for our plane and in arranging transportation back to Indianapolis.
Decatur looks to be fairly large from the air, and I believe would be in a position to copy the accomplishment of the Auburn townspeople. Aviation is here to stay and a good all-weather airport will do much to foster growth of your current enterprises and bring in new industry.

On inquiry I learned that the Jaycees are working on a survey toward a community airport such as Auburn enjoys and I earnestly hope that your readers will get back of this progressive project and give them all the encouragement and support that they need. Judging from the number of outlying small towns surrounding Decatur that would benefit from such an airport I certainly believe your readers will want to help.

On returning to Decatur Hi-Way airport on Nov. 21 I learned a blizzard had thoroughly coated the Cessna with ice. With extreme cold temperature, a strong raw wind, there was no chance of removing the ice without applying heat. Here Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Richardson (operators of Decatur Hi-Way Airport), with the assistance of neighbors Mr. and Mrs. Earl Mounsey and Richard Cottrell, came to the rescue with an assembly of items that allowed me to take off in safety after removing the ice with heat.
I am very grateful to the good folks of Decatur, look forward to returning more often, and hope to learn that the Jaycees' desire for betterment of air transportation is fulfilled.

Sincerely,
Ethel Knuth, secretary
N. C. S. 90's
Mrs. Russel A. Knuth.

What Fits Faith?

Lesson for December 6, 1964

Background Scripture: Titus 1:10 through 2:10. 2:11-13. 2:14-15. Devotional Reading: Ephesians 4:1-7.

DOES WHAT A man believes affect his life? The New Testament, at any rate, gives little room to stand for the man whose faith and life are kept in separate compartments. Faith that cannot work out in life, faith that works out in life, faith that has no connection with life at all, is not faith in which Jesus of the Apostles would take any interest.

Paul says to Dr. Foreman his protege Titus, "Teach what befits sound doctrine." We could re-translate that: Teach what sort of person and what sort of living it is, which matches the high truths of Christian belief.

Being what you can be. True Christlike goodness is not a ready-made thing the same size and color for everybody. What is good, Christian, for an old lady is not necessarily good for the lady's grandchildren five years old. What is good for the old lady may not be good for a young man. Paul recognizes this. He doesn't want the young preacher Titus to preach to everyone just alike. Be good! When spoken to the older women means don't gossip, don't be an alcoholic. Be good! To older men means be serious, be sensible. (Remarkable how sensible Paul is himself—elsewhere he speaks of faith, hope and love, but not here. To older men he speaks of faith, love and steadfastness. Older men have no great hopes; but they can still be steadfast! Be good! To a young man means: Control yourself. Paul seems to be saying not only "Be what you can be," but also, "Be what you can be, you and not somebody else."

We have only to turn Paul's advice inside out to see how vital it is. What must we think of a slanderer and a slave to drink? Paul wants Titus to urge in his preaching and otherwise too, to doubt the older women to just that kind of behavior which they of all people need to show. Or take the young men, for example. The commands or advice, which Paul gives are not easy, and the short command he gives young men is perhaps hardest of all: Control yourselves. Youth is the hardest time in life to practice self-control; but if it is not learned then, it may never be learned. Once this writer had the exciting opportunity of speaking to about 400 men, all prisoners in the same great jail in New England. What struck the speaker was the fact that almost every man there was young, the average about 19 or 20 years old. Furthermore, their crimes and misdemeanors were mostly the kind of thing done on the spur of the minute, in a fit of emotion. Older men make careful criminals. These young men were too young to be cautious. But they needed self-control to be good citizens; and self-control was just what they didn't have. We would all love to control money, the lives of others, political movements, public opinion... we all want to control. But the hardest and most important thing is controlling yourself. Be what you need to be!

Adorning the doctrine. The congregations Titus would preach to had many slaves. They would no doubt think: It's all very well for your preacher to tell us what we ought to do. But I'm a slave. I'm at the bottom of the pile. I can't call my time my own. I can't call myself my own. I do what I have to do, I have no choice. Well, Paul has a word for these poor men too. Be a Christian in the things you have to do. Even a slave can be honest. Even a slave can be obedient. Even a slave can show respect. He can give satisfaction to the man who paid good money for him. There is a more and a less Christian way of doing even the things you have to do or else... There is a more and a less Christian way of performing the simplest acts such as sweeping the floor or pruning a tree.
