Mrs. Victoria Foster.
Victoria Daily, widow of the late J. J. Foster, was born in Adams county, May 13th, 1844, and died in the city of Decatur October 15, 1900, aged 56 years, 5 months and 2 days.

Her father was a farmer and stock buyer. She was brought up in this county and in Ohio. Her mother dying when she was a young child, she lived with her relatives in Athens county, Ohio, for a number of years, and there she received her education, and afterward engaged in educational work. Her father and mother have long been dead. Two sisters and four brothers are living and present with us today.

Our sister was married to Mr. Foster March 8, 1863. The newly married couple settled here in Decatur, and lived here for three or four years, when they purchased her father's old home farm, on which they resided till their children were large enough to be educated. They then removed to Van Wert, Ohio, and remained there until the education of their children was finished. They then returned to Adams county. There were five children, one son and four daughters, of whom one daughter a year ago last April departed this life. Our sister was left a widow by the death of her husband four years ago this present month.

Mrs. Foster united with the Methodist Episcopal church when she was first married, but in the moving to and fro she never removed her membership to any other church or any other place.

She has been in failing health for the last two years. Two years ago she had a severe attack of lagrippe, which left her in a very weakened condition, and the sickness and death of her daughter made such inroads upon her health and strength that she went to Colorado, where for a time she was somewhat benefited. The original trouble seemed to disappear. But other symptoms and troubles made their appearance. She has not been able to sit up since last May. She was brought back to the home of her daughter, Mrs. Allison, and has since continued to fail. Growing weaker from day to day, with every attention that love could bestow, without any apparent change from week to week, Saturday night she began to grow worse, and somewhat unexpectedly passed over the river about 4 o'clock Monday morning. "He giveth his beloved sleep."

The long decline she bore most patiently, never complaining and without a murmur. She was naturally a woman of strong mind, never inclined to fret or worry, taking life as it came from day to day, saying very little about her life and sickness. She was brave and perfectly resigned to whatever event might be sent by the Divine will.

Heroism is not all on the field of battle. Nor is it all in facing the terrible storms of the ocean. Nor is it all in going down and facing the pestilence. There is as much heroism in going from hour to hour down the long decline into the valley of the shadow of death, into the unknown and untried, going all alone, foreseeing the inevitable end every day and knowing it full well, and yet making no complaint and showing no tremor of fear. And such heroism did our sister display.

Sister Foster was very intelligent—above the average. She was bright, cheerful and happy. Her greatest ambition was for her family. She made her home a refuge, a true home.

She was a faithful and loving wife and a tender mother. As has been said, she was a first-class mother, the best on earth. Not caring for the applause of the world, not trusting herself to the front, as the manner of some is, not caring for the pomp and vain show of earth, she preferred rather to live for her own, to bring them up in the paths of virtue, of morality, and of religion, and to leave behind her the legacy of good teaching, virtuous precepts, and a spotless example. Her memory shall be one perpetual record in the hearts of her children and her friends and neighbors. Her life is her best monument.

J. T. W. Lucky left last night for New York where he will attend a great banquet given by the Metropolitan Insurance company to the agents who reach a certain figure in their business. The fact that Mr. Lucky reached the limit assures the establishment of an office in this city and the appointment of an assistant superintendent. Mr. Lucky will return next week.—Bluffton Banner.

Pretty Children

"We have three children. Before the birth of the last one my wife used four bottles of MOTHER'S FRIEND. If you had the pictures of our children, you could see at a glance that the last one is healthiest, prettiest and finest-looking of them all. My wife thinks Mother's Friend is the greatest and grandest remedy in the world for expectant mothers."—Written by a Kentucky Attorney-at-Law.

MOTHER'S FRIEND prevents nine-tenths of the suffering incident to childbirth. The coming mother's disposition and temper remain unruffled throughout the ordeal, because this relaxing, penetrating liniment relieves the usual distress. A good-natured mother is pretty sure to have a good-natured child. The patient is kept in a strong, healthy condition, which the child also inherits. Mother's Friend takes a wife through the crisis quickly and almost painlessly. It assists in her rapid recovery, and wards off the dangers that so often follow delivery.

Sold by druggists for $1 a bottle.

A protest has been filed in Governor Mount's office against the use of the emblem that will be put at the head of the people's party ticket at the coming election. The objection was filed by parties representing themselves as the officials of the state central committee of the regular peoples party. The emblem in question is the representation of a plow with a large hammer resting across it. The state election board has begun the preparation of the packages that are to be sent to the county clerks as fast as the state printers can finish the ballots. Each package will contain the required number of ballots for the given precinct and three blue pencils, three ballot posters, and three copies of the election law. There are 3,302 precincts and it will require 9,906 ballot posters and as many copies of the election law. Every county will be given four extra pencils, so that the number of pencils sent out will be 10,274.
