

Stomach Blood and Liver Troubles

Much sickness starts with weak stomach, and consequent poor, impoverished blood. Nervous and pale people lack good, rich, red blood. Their stomachs need invigorating for, after all, a man can be no stronger than his stomach.

A remedy that makes the stomach strong and the liver active, makes rich red blood and overcomes and drives out disease-producing bacteria and cures a whole multitude of diseases.

Get rid of your Stomach Weakness and Liver Laziness by taking a course of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery—the great Stomach Restorative, Liver Invigorator and Blood Cleanser.

You can't afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a medicine of known composition, having a complete list of ingredients in plain English on its bottle-wrapper, same being attested as correct under oath.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

The poultry show to be held in this city the first week in January is going to be a grand success and while this is a fact let us give some etiquette that we have noticed in the show room.

How often we have been in a show room and noticed a group of visitors inspecting the birds. First they come to the Barred Rocks, carefully looking them over, and one will exclaim: "First prize cock, eh? Why, my old bird has him skinned a mile, but I don't believe in showing my birds; a week in the show room knocks 'em all out."

The saunter along and pretty soon they come to White Wyandottes and after looking at them from the aisle one will say, "I've got hens that would beat this lot all to pieces, but you've got to wash 'em and they catch cold, and time they get home from the show they are no good; so I've never shown any." The next halt is made when they reach the Brown Leghorns and one of the party, being an admirer of this variety, proceeds to give views on the subject: "Why don't they get some decent stock? I wouldn't have such stock on my place; the poorest pullet in my flock would beat this first prize bird, and I've some dandy cockrels but they are such scary things, they are pretty sure to get the roup and be all lousy when they get home, and in fact I don't like to show them."

Other visitors hearing them discuss and not being experienced, get the idea that it is injurious to fowls to show them, but when you hear people talk in this manner, you can make up your mind that they are talking "hot air" and just bluffing, or they have been breeding poultry for about six months and do not know what they are talking about. And, dear reader, if you are a beginner and think you have good stock, show them and find out just how good they are.

It is not injurious to the fowls to show them if a little common sense is used and the thing is not overdone, but on the other hand it often proves a benefit to them.

In examining the birds individually as is necessary in preparing them for the show, we often discover many serious breeding defects, injuries, sometimes of disease, etc., which would not ordinarily be noticed. As to the confinement of the show room hurting them is a sad mistake. If properly shown two or three shows during a season will not hurt a bird, but not more than two shows should follow another without at least a week's rest between, and sometimes I think a few shows are really a benefit to a bird. All things considered, if one has the birds, he should by all means show them and at the same time show himself and get acquainted with the best class of fellows on the face of the earth.

Don't get the idea that you will not get a square deal, or that you must be in the "ring" in order to win.

The proportion of dishonest judges is no small that it is not worth considering, and don't let anybody tell you that the older exhibitors will not use you well, or that it takes a long time and lots of big winning to get into the "Brotherhood of Fanciers."

Show yourself to be a true fancier and you will find yourself in the charmed circle before you hardly know it and by a true fancier, I mean one who shows his stock and does not keep it at home and then tell everyone how he could have won, if he only wanted to take the trouble to fit them.

Be a cheerful loser and resolve to give better birds next year. Do not find fault with the other fellow's stock and shout about him being in a deal with the judge, etc.

You only make a fool of yourself by so doing.

If you show and lose, and cannot see the reason for it, do not get the idea that the judge does not know his business and proceed to berate him and everybody else and make a display of your knowledge (?) of the breed (and thereby show your ignorance).

Ask the judge or some exhibitor and they will point out where your birds are defective and often tell how to remedy the defect. If you happen to win, do not make yourself obnoxious by ridiculing your competitors, or by blowing so hard about it to the other exhibitors, as to disgust them. The old timers are always glad to see a new exhibitor win but because you win, do not tell everybody how much you know about breeding and handling your variety of poultry, for some of them may know about you buying your stock just for the purpose of making a winning, or, if you have bred them, it may be just "luck" and next year you show up with a big string expecting to take all the prizes and you get a fifth.

So let us not say uncomplimentary things about more enterprising and successful breeders than we ourselves. A FANCIER.

The many friends of Miss Jessie Pearl Kimsey of Portland, for four years a stenographer for the Ward Fence company, will be pleased to hear of her marriage to James Edwin Leonard of Gas City, which took place last Thursday evening at the Methodist parsonage at Portland, Rev. Loren M. Edwards officiating. The witnesses to the ceremony were the bride's brother, Forest Kimsey, and Miss Nora Millett, whose wedding will occur in a few days. Immediately after the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Leonard left for Gas City, where they will be at home at 430 East Main street. The groom is a well known young man of that city, being the present postmaster. The bride, who is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Kimsey, was a graduate of the Portland high school with the class of 1902, and later attended the Marion Normal school. For the past four years she has served as one of the most efficient stenographers for the Ward Fence company, and came with them to this city where she worked until several months ago, when she resigned to prepare for the coming wedding. She is well known to the younger set of this city, who will unite in wishing her all the joy that the future can hold.

Dr. J. S. Cloverdale is in receipt of a letter from his son, Clark, who is operating a shingle mill at Marion, Arkansas, in which an interesting story is told concerning an employee. Since living at Marion Clark has had a handy man, named Charley Brown, a negro, who did all sorts of jobs for him, working at the mill when it was running and about the farm when not otherwise engaged. He was a good worker and Dr. Coverdale says that he thought that if there ever was a negro who could be trusted it was Charley. A few days ago the negro forged a check, signing Clark's name to same and took it into a store where he asked to have it cashed. As he frequently had cashed checks, the old store-keeper did not mistrust him and going to the safe, pulled out the cash drawer, containing about $400 in cash. As he laid the drawer on the counter to pick out the money, the negro who had come prepared for the job struck him over the head with a heavy iron bar, crushing the old man's skull and inflicting fatal injuries. The murderer grabbed the money and ran. The sheriff was soon notified and securing the assistance of Mr. Coverdale, they went after Charley, who was arrested and taken to jail after a hard battle, in which it was feared they would have to kill him to save their own lives. Clark says that the faithful old negro will be hung, as there is no chance for a colored man who assails a white in that section. Hangings are frequent in that country, and Dr. Coverdale, on one of his trips there, witnessed the execution of two negroes in one day. The hangings occur in the court house yard.

George Patterson Sunday evening received a telegram from his daughter-in-law at Terre Haute, announcing the death of his son, Charles Patterson, the death occurring some time Sunday. The son had been known to be in poor health for some time, but the news of his death came as a very unexpected announcement. The deceased was about thirty-nine years of age and is well known here. He was born in this city and lived here until he was about eighteen or nineteen years of age when he went to Terre Haute, where he has since lived. He was married at that place, and his wife and three children survive. Mr. Patterson left Monday for Terre Haute, where he will be with his daughter-in-law and grandchildren in their bereavement.

WEDDING SUNDAY.

A quiet but pretty wedding took place Sunday at Wren, Ohio, when Miss Lucy LeBrun of this city and Mr. Addison Sheets of that place were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The ceremony occurred at the home of the groom and the Rev. Miller, pastor of the United Brethren church of Greenbrier, officiated. Only a few relatives were present and this will no doubt be quite a surprise to their many friends. The bride is well known here where she has lived for a number of years and who has a large host of friends. Mr. Sheets is a well known and prosperous farmer, owning a valuable country home there and where they will make their home. The best wishes of their many friends will be with them always.

C. B. Schmuck has done just what was expected from one of his caliber; he has filed a schedule to defeat the payment of May Shilling to whom he is indebted in the sum of $10.95 for labor performed. His trial was set for Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock and Schmuck failed to appear; judgment was taken by default and an affidavit was at once filed stating that the plaintiff thought that Schmuck intended selling out and leaving the city. An execution was then placed in the hands of the constable and was served, Schmuck filing a schedule showing that he was worth but little more than four hundred dollars. The law allows him an exemption of $600 and he has thus defeated the claim. It is indeed deplorable that there is no statute by which he can be vigorously prosecuted for he certainly deserves punishment of the severest kind. Certainly a man of his capacities cannot prosper and he does not deserve the support of any individual until he pays this woman and his other creditors for services rendered.

WORKING UNDER DIFFICULTY.

Charles Pennington of the firm of Pennington & Baker, meat dealers, is working under difficulties these days. About a week ago while putting up a stove pipe at the butcher shop the box on which he was standing slipped and Charles was thrown off. He was considerably shaken up at the time, but it was not until last Saturday that he thought his injuries serious enough to consult a physician. He did so then and found that in the fall two of his ribs had been broken.

Under the instructions from Judge N. Heaton in the superior court this afternoon the jury empanelled to try the lawsuit filed by John P. Strohecker against Mrs. Susan Shoaf and her husband, John Shoaf, owners of the Aveline hotel, and Fred A. Stevens and John McAlevey, returned a verdict for the defense.

This means that the action was defeated by the language of the Indiana statutes which provides that hotel buildings and others designated in the laws, shall have fire escapes on the outside and prescribes the material of which they shall be made. The complaint was not able to offer any proof that this section of the law had not been complied with and for that reason the court sustained a motion made by the attorneys on behalf of the owners and lessors to instruct the jury to bring in the verdict.

The decision involves a great amount of money. A dozen persons lost their lives in the fire and a great number were injured and the Strohecker suit was a test on which rested the fate of several other suits already filed and a number that were being held in abeyance. The statutory penalty fixed for each person killed where the law is not complied with is $5,000. In his opinion Judge Heaton says in part:

"This court and jury are absolutely bound by the laws enacted by the legislature of Indiana applicable to this case. The law provides that every hotel building more than two stories in height shall be provided with proper ways of egress or means of escape shall be kept free from obstruction; shall have one or more fire escapes on the outside of said building, and described the character, material and manner of construction of the fire escapes. It requires that the halls shall be kept lighted at night and that red lights shall be placed at the intersections of hallways with the main corridors and at places to indicate the location of fire escapes and with other stated provisions for the protection of hotel occupants from fire."

"Now keeping in mind that the plaintiff's right of recovery in this action is confined entirely to the provisions of the statute and from the fact that plaintiff makes no claim or offers no proof that there was an absence of the fire escapes, he therefore has no basis in law for recovery or damages for injuries received and the court instructs you to return your verdict for defendants." Fort Wayne Sentinel.
