PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

DEMOCRATIC PRESS PUBLISHING CO.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 3.

SENATOR TURPIE is recuperating at French Lick Springs.

INDIANAPOLIS politics is waxing warm with all odds favoring the election of Thomas Taggart, the democratic nominee.

THE United States treasury closed its business for September with a surplus of $3,175,045 in receipts over expenditures.

GOVERNOR MATTHEWS is slinging hot shot into the enemy's camp in the Ohio campaign. His arguments are logical and all right.

THE Ohio democracy opened their campaign at Columbus the other day, and judging from the newspaper accounts, one is led to suppose, beyond any doubt, that the "Campbells are coming."

WAGES are still increasing, and the industries of this country are all prospering. This isn't very encouraging to poor Calamity McKinley, but it's a fact nevertheless. The Wilson tariff does the biz.

ALL the manufactured enthusiasm in Ohio will not supply the place of argument or bring out the vote on election day, when the republican brethren outside of the ranks of mere partisans reflect on vacant gaps where big men and vital ideas once were prominent. The power of the party in Congress is not an advantage by any means, especially if the majority attempts to assail the democratic administration merely to make campaign material. Recent events have entirely eliminated sectional issues, and upon the currency question the only possible thing for the republicans to do is to imitate their opponents, who have all the credit of a sound money policy.

DISPATCHES from Indianapolis indicate that the toadies of our counterfeit governor are making an organized effort to boom that miserable demagogue for the democratic nomination for president. Poor old Indiana is again to present the humiliating spectacle of appearing before the national convention with head end pretensions for the presidency and tail end expectations for the vice presidency. Matthews is out classed for either place and will get neither. If by hook or crook, by trickery and trades with designing politicians he should be nominated for either place, he would be the worst beaten candidate that ever appeared before the people. Not less than 20,000 anti-Nicholson democrats would vote square against him and the workingman would smite him right and left. No man who voted for or signed the unpopular Nicholson law can be elected to any office in Indiana, that is in the state at large. Matthews' political career is closed.—New Albany Public Press.

Now comes John C. New with the information that Harrison is not a candidate for the presidency, but that of course he would accept if the party demanded it. The same old string.

MCKINLEY is the worst calamity, calamity, calamity squeezer in the whole country. His patriotic utterances all center upon "no prosperity." He's entitled to the belt, and a front seat in the "liar's club."

GOVERNOR MATTHEWS of Indiana, having become a candidate for the democratic presidential nomination, and ex-President Harrison having placed himself so as to receive the republican nomination should it come his way, it looks as if the Hoosier state is ambitious to become the mamma of presidents.—Post Dispatch.

THE discussion of presidential possibilities involves the calculation of the effects of the democratic policy and principles as carried into effect since 1893. It is well understood by the people generally that the tariff reform measures have resulted in great good and the republicans will not be able to convince even their own friends of the country, so that upon the main point of this party doctrine they are at a disadvantage. In case McKinley, Reed or Sherman should be nominated the extreme old protection theory would be the issue and it would have to be plain facts that have been accumulating in favor of the democrats.

WHILE the militant democracy, determined that henceforth in New York city and state personal liberty shall be some thing more than an empty phrase, is organizing the harmonious campaign which promises victory, the Empire state republicans are preoccupied with internal and disgraceful broils. The house divided against itself shall not stand. These battles of the republican bosses are pretty sure forerunners of republican defeat in November. A careful inspection of the causes of the fights now in progress in New York city, and in nearly every county in the state, between republican factions must redouble the energy of democratic voter's efforts to get rid of such a party of hypocrisy, pretenses and lying promises. It is an object lesson of highest practical value. Fraud, personal violence, intimidation of every shade—these are the un-American and obnoxious practices employed by one set of bosses to beat another set at the recent republican primaries. Never was a more shameful picture of debased politics presented to the public.

Silver What They Want.

The weak-minded fellows who are afflicted by the free silver mania can be readily cured. Let them go to work and accumulate a few hundred dollars worth of property.—Chicago Tribune.

If anybody doubts the ultimate success of the free silver cause, let him remember that The People are for it, and that the banker bosses and office holders cannot fool them always. Republican and democratic gold bugs alike will hear something drop before the close of the campaign of 1896.—Sullivan Times.

The foregoing extract was published with approval in the Indianapolis Sentinel of Monday. It indicates that the democratic state organ believes that the "weak-minded fellows who afflicted with the free silver mania" are a lot of paupers. It further shows that the esteemed Sentinel is getting down off the international bimetallic fence on the gold standard side sooner than was expected.—Plymouth Democrat.

We have bought $162,000,000 in gold with 30-year bonds thus far, and have pledged a premium on it of $125,000,000 in the form of interest. Does anybody believe that with free and unlimited coinage of silver—if gold should go to a premium at all—it would go as high as 77 per cent? That is the premium we have been paying on every dollar of gold we have bought to protect the gold reserve.—Evansville Courier.

A new bond issue is among the probabilities of the near future. The gold reserve continues to grow beautifully less. If the Sherman silver act were still in force, the blame for the decrease would be vociferously charged to that piece of make shift legislation. But the Sherman silver act was repealed a year ago, and the financial wisecrackers of the goldbug persuasion are at a loss to know how to account for the outflow of the yellow metal. As doctors of finance they have proved themselves dismal failures.—South Bend Times.

Banker Dougherty personally posted the bills for Bynum's meeting in Bluffton. This is only a straw, but it plainly shows which way the wind is blowing. If, as Mr. Bynum claims, the free coinage of silver would redound to the benefit of the bankers and money brokers, what could have induced Banker Dougherty to post bills for a meeting at which his interests were to be assailed? Ah, Mr. Bynum, such sophistry as you are parceling out to the few curiosity seekers who attend your $50 harangue will never make a single convert for to the goldbug doctrine of which you are just now posing as champion.—Portland Sun.

"Sound money," so termed, is that proportion of our circulating medium which the gold bugs, speculators and schemers in money matters alone control. Gold they term sound money, silver they do not. They can control the gold and make the people pay highly when they desire to use it. With silver it is entirely different. They cannot control it. Therefore it is not "sound money" with them.—Noblesville Democrat.

"Truth crushed to earth will rise again." The teachings of Jefferson and Jackson may have been lost from view in the struggle to cope with the issues continually appearing, but there are issues that are ever recurring in the history of the world, and money is just such an issue, and the teachings of the founders of the republic and those through every period of our history will be interesting to day.—Lagrange Democrat.
