SHADES AND COLORS.

A GLIMPSE AT THE NEW FALL DRESS GOODS.

Greens and Drabs—Brocades of Silk and Wool—A Gown of Moss Green Camel's Hair—No Diminution in the Width of Shoulders.

[Special Correspondence.]

New York, July 26.—The sample cards that are very jealously guarded show among the new colors for fall dress goods some very harmonious shades and colors in plain material and pleasing combinations in figures and plaids and also woolen brocades. The greens appear to be more numerous than any other one color, and they are marked by soft russet tints hidden away somewhere in the texture and giving but a hint of their presence. Quaker drab is seen in several shades, and these bid fair to become very popular. Drab will take any kind of trimming. It has the peculiar quality of showing up the trimming so that very little suffices, and much trimming would overload it. Cloth, a new dead fine serge, camel's hair and silk in the soft lusterless wear are the principal fabrics in drab. Mouse beaver and undyed seal are also new colors, but they are all somewhat of the drab shades, though lacking the purplish tint in the Quaker drab.

Novelty goods in brocades of silk and wool, mostly in Persian patterns, will be used quite extensively, particularly for trimmings and corsages. The most refined taste would suggest a sparing use of such material. Many of the drab materials will be made with no trimming other than folds, stitching and drapery. One very ladylike tailor gown of drab ladies' cloth had a peculiar arrangement on the skirt, three deep side plaits being let in the front under pocket straps of biscuit cloth, fastened with oxidized buttons. The belt and collar were arranged in the same manner. The waist was laid in similar plaits, and the sleeves were laid in plaits so that they fell in a looped puff on the outer side of the arm. About the whole dress there was not one point of color, but it made a dressy toilet.

A gown made of moss green camel's hair, with a russet bloom, was made with five plaits on the right side of the skirt, in form of a panel, and on the left side the skirt was slightly lifted under a jet ornament. The sleeves were large balloon puffs, made by gathering the goods very full under a narrow line of jet trimming. The front of the waist was a full plaited vest of chameleon silk, red, green and ivory. There were stiff bretelles made of lace over foundation and edged with handsome passementerie and ending with large jet ornaments.

Jet in every conceivable form and kind of device will be most lavishly employed as garniture for everything where it can possibly be put on all fall and winter costumes.

There is no diminution in the width of the shoulders. There are some few ladies who do not like such wide effects, but the fashion remains the same. Some of the new models are almost ridiculous, but there may be modifications later on. A pretty fancy shown me yesterday is a black lace bertha which can be applied to any dress, providing the satin is of a proper color. This consists of a pair of bretelles of black Spanish lace, which falls over a plain stiff bretelle of mauve satin. Below this are two lace falls which take the place of caps to the sleeves, and in front the lace falls below the waist in a jabot from beneath a bow of black ribbon. In the back it reaches to a point at the waist line. This is made postiche and thus can be worn over any waist, and it would transform an old fashioned corsage into the height of style. One could be made of white or cream lace and worn over light colored gowns.

Crepons will be worn through all the fall and very likely for dressy home wear during the coming winter. There are a few most charming Japanese crepons, such as have been heretofore considered too choice to send out of that country. They are painted by hand in the creases, so that as the material is moved it shows sometimes three different colors.

OLIVE HARPER.

THE NICARAGUA CANAL.

A Gigantic Undertaking Which Awaits Uncle Sam's Pleasure.

[Special Correspondence.]

Nicaragua, July 20.—The canal here is waiting patiently for the people to put it through. The people are waiting impatiently for Uncle Sam's government to float the bonds, so that they may raise the money necessary for commencing operations. The malcontents, who are not engaged in the soothing task of misgoverning this delightful country, are also waiting impatiently for the first good chance to overturn the present misgovernment. It is a waiting game.

As I came up the river to Greytown at the harbor I noticed three or four dredging machines which are said to be the largest and finest in the world. They stood off near the right bank. Nobody was working at them. The rust is destroying a great deal of valuable machinery that was brought here to work in the cutting of the canal—in fact, $1,500,000 worth.

The country through which one travels from ocean to ocean is rough and mountainous and in places grand and imposing. If I were a scenery writer, I might get in a few fine descriptive licks about the splendor of earth, air and cloud, rugged mountain and mighty ocean.

There are groves and groves of wild banana and pineapple trees. If a fruit selling dago of New York were to see them, his heart would expand with joy. Parrots warble sweetly and seductively from every bough. The sugar cane grows luxuriantly and of its own accord—is indigenous to the soil, as the learned people put it. Nature has put sugar on the free list. The climate is healthy, but snakes, with bite of the deadliest, are everywhere. The country badly needs a St. Patrick.

Rio del Norte, or Greytown, as it is called at present, is a rather bustling sort of place. Its population is composed of Spaniards, those of Spanish descent, half breeds, Mosquito Indians, West Indian negroes and a big English and American contingent. Spanish and French are the languages most spoken. Americans get on well here. Their pushing, help yourself ways stand them in good stead. Quite often they join the army, and before they are in it a month they are made generals. The main body of the army is made up of disreputable half breeds and negroes. Their outfit is a modest one, only costing 60 cents. They don't wear any shoes, which is a good thing for them when they are profiting by the wisdom contained in that old saw which says, "He that fights and runs away will live to fight another day."

This is perhaps the only country in the world where a wealthy man is at a disadvantage because of his wealth. It is dangerous to possess money or property, for whenever there is a revolution

THE GREAT DREDGES.

—which there is about every time the moon changes—the people that get the upper hand confiscate it. The plutocrat, or would be plutocrat, has no earthly show. He is looked upon but as something good to eat. The only real privilege he has is that of being allowed to ripen before he is devoured.

The words law and order are shorn of their magic here. You may do almost anything but tackle the man that is too strong or the host that is too many. If you wish to enjoy the acquaintance of the active life of the country for any considerable time, it is well to keep a civil tongue, have your eye peeled and let up on doing the town after dark.

I don't suppose its population is much over 5,000. In general appearance it suggests part of the French quarter of New Orleans. The houses are grouped somewhat after the same old fashion and painted as fancifully. Guitars tinkle in the winoships. In the distance the river shines. Beyond the river is the ocean, with its burden of ships.

Along the main street Mosquito Indians straggle, Spaniards and Frenchmen lounge and smoke, and Americans—if they have not been in the country long—bustle. Every one lives in expectancy of the time when the cutting of the projected canal will commence. Then things will boom, and money will be made. From the Atlantic to the Pacific, as the crow flies, it is only a distance of 42 miles, and in the middle of this is a lake 10 miles across. This would bring down the actual cutting to 32 miles. The real difficulty of the undertaking is to cut through and fix up the great sand bar on the Atlantic side.

The Mosquito Indian is more intelligent and better looking than the Indian of the United States. He is slightly but strongly built and ranges in weight all the way from 115 to 150 pounds. He is possessed of great endurance and will make 20 miles a day with a burden of 200 pounds for 10 consecutive days. They call the Indians that travel with burdens packers. They have taken the place of the mules who in former days used to carry the packs. Their women are quite comely.

There is much gold in the interior, and there are great forests of rubber trees, but provisions are so hard to get and so costly that it is next to impossible to develop either resource. Out there $40 in gold is the price charged for 100 pounds of flour. Other necessities are proportionately dear. Un sold, the dollar of Nicaragua is worth only 50 cents of United States money.

There is a great future in store for this country. When the bonds are floating and the canal is in process of cutting, things will boom and swing both long and merrily. BART KENNEDY.

PLANS FOR DOUBLE HOUSE.

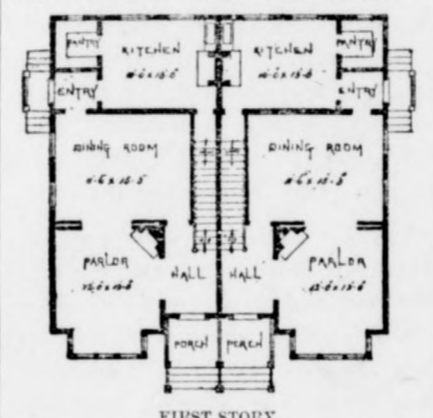

Neat and Pleasing in Appearance—Costs About $3,000 to Build.
[Copyright, 1894, by Palliser, Palliser & Co., Architects, 24 East 42d st., N. Y.]

Times, places and circumstances have at all periods been found to be good governors of parties who have or may have had real estate that they wanted to improve, and among the many ways that have yet been devised to produce a large amount of room at a small cost, giving the necessary accommodations to separate families, the double house undoubtedly stands ahead as far as economy is concerned. One lot is thus made to do the duty of two, one chimney, one wall and one roof doing likewise, and while we have not fully made up our minds to accept the double house system as a sure indication of the near approach of the millennium yet we are willing to accept it as a nearer approach to the attainment of a home—even though it may seem to be only half a home—than that system, so prevalent in our country at the present day, of putting one family on a floor directly over another, the beauties of which are a theme poets never sing about. But still the double house has its many drawbacks, such as the owner of one half painting the exterior white and the other brown, as is frequently the case, plenty of proof of which can be seen in this locality, or one adding a bay window and enlarging, while the other is anxious to sell out on account of his neighbor's disposition to be always making improvements, with which his pocketbook will not allow him to keep pace, and plenty of like trouble in the same spirit that we could enumerate, all of which we know from actual observation and experience.

The double house should be the property of one man, as then he can live in one half and either rent the other or let it stand empty to suit his pleasure; can paint, tear down and build up when it suits his fancy, or can make both sides into one should his family wants demand it, and thus eventually convert it into a home, for we must say that the half double house never yet associated itself in our minds other than as a more stopping place, wherein we are waiting for the home that is to be and sometimes never comes.

The design here illustrated shows a neat and attractive front, and one which cannot fail to please even the most fastidious double house critic, and if they are as numerous all over our country as here they are legion. The halls are in the center of the building, stairs being placed back from front doors, which gives a roomy entrance, the stairs to cellar being under main stairs and reached from the kitchen. Each half contains six good rooms, with bathroom, dressing room, pantry, closets, etc., with a large attic over the whole, which is divided by center wall running up to the roof.

The frame is a balloon, sheathed and clappedboard; roof, shingled on lath; underpinning of brick; inside blinds to bay windows, outside blinds elsewhere, except cellar and dormer. That it is accomplishing considerable for a small equivalent is fully seen when such a house as this is erected in a first class manner, with all improvements, for the sum of $3,000.

Hints For Warm Weather.

With the advent of warm weather we hastened to take up the carpet and stain the floor a rich deep brown, and as the preparation used was one that dries perfectly in two or three days we were soon ready to resume our abode, substituting for the obnoxious carpet lovely fur and Turkish rugs. In regard to the latter, buy only the real, for though so expensive the best is indeed the cheapest in their case. We also bring in, for the purpose of "seasoning" in the strong light, our beautiful dining table that is to be—every inch of it solid San Domingo mahogany and made after the Louis XIV design in Clarence Cook's delightful volume "The House Beautiful." On this table no staining and no disfiguring varnish were allowed. It was simply polished to the highest degree, and though all the care it receives is an occasional rubbing down with boiled linseed oil, yet it has in a year's time improved almost incredibly. The color has grown deeper, richer, warmer, with exquisite red and golden lights, and by the time it has reached the mature age of 100 years there will doubtless be few mahogany tables that can compare with this in beauty.—Christian Work.

Has a Salty Flavor.

A New York girl has a unique portiere hanging between her sleeping room and bath—a piece of sailcloth, on which is roughly painted a figure of a mermaid in the ocean. The curtain is tied by small loops of rope to a stout fishing pole fastened across the door, and on the bracket above are large, exquisitely polished conch shells and starfish.—Selected.

SOONER DIE THAN RUN.

Chinese Lost by Sinking of the Kow Shing Showed Great Bravery.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—The Times' account of the sinking of the Kow Shing on July 25 says the transport carried 1,600 Chinese troops for Corea and that few escaped. The Chinese refused to allow the vessel to ship anchor and run, saying to the British commander: "We refuse to become prisoners. We would sooner die here. If you move the ship except to return to China we will kill you." The reports say the Chinese exhibited the greatest bravery during the battle. It is officially declared that the war is now on.

Late War News.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 2.—It is rumored here that eight Russian warships, with troops aboard, have left Vladivostok under sealed orders.

It is also reported that a boatful of men escaped from the transport Kow Shing before she went down and reached Sheipin Island in safety.

In consequence of the declaration of war the Chinese minister will leave Tokyo today. The Japanese flag has been hauled down from the consulate here.

Charges Against A. R. U. Directors.
CHICAGO, Aug. 2.—District Attorney Milchrist has filed in the Debs contempt case information against A. R. U. directors, claiming that the five were advisory assistants in the progress of the strike and are subject to punishment.

Failure Due to an Embezzler.
ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Aug. 2.—The downfall of the National Temperance Relief union, which was yesterday declared insolvent, is attributed to the embezzlement of $20,000 by its former secretary, F. H. Lewis, now dead.

Stabbed by a Lunatic.
MUSCALINE, Ia., Aug. 2.—County Commissioner Wilson of Wahpeto, Louisa county, was murdered yesterday by a lunatic named Stephen Courtney while walking along one of the principal streets. The murderer used a knife.

Anxious to Lynch the Bandit.
GUTHRIE, O. T., Aug. 2.—An attempt to lynch Elmer Lucas, the bank robber wounded in the Chandler raid, has made his removal to this place a necessity.

Major Halford's Injury.
OMAHA, Aug. 2.—The reported injury to Major E. W. Halford is not so serious as thought at first. He expects to be about within 10 days.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Aug. 2.—The Missouri river has swallowed the right of way of the K. C., St. J. and C. B. railroad at Wintrop.

THE GUINEA FOWL.

Its Finely Flavored Flesh and Eggs Are Highly Prized by Epicures.

Guinea fowls are among the most neglected breeds of domestic poultry known in this country. As a marketable commodity the guinea cannot yet rank very high on account of the fact that but few persons have ever eaten them, consequently do not know or appreciate their merits as a table fowl. In point of fact the flesh of this fowl is of delicious flavor, being much like that of the pheasant.

Those who are fond of game or of poultry which has a gamy flavor will not fail to be abundantly satisfied with the guinea fowl, which is composed entirely of dark meat and which has retained through long years of comparative domestication the half wild habits which, it seems, cannot be effectually bred out of them.

The Poultry Yard says: Do not kill the old birds, for they make rather tough eating, but select the cocks between 1 and 2 years old—not older, as these have their full growth and are juicy and splendid eating when nicely roasted in a moderate oven.

The eggs of the guinea are very rich and of fine flavor, and what they lack in size is fully made up by the large numbers laid by the hens each season, though it is not the easiest thing in the world to find just where the nests are, even though careful and persistent search be made. The size of the eggs and the comparative difficulty to tell whether they are fresh or not until they are broken open prevent in a great measure their ever becoming popular in our markets.

Be Kind.

Be kind to thy father, for when thou wert young
Who loved thee so fondly as he?
He caught the first accents that fell from thy tongue
And joined in thy innocent glee.
Be kind to thy father, for now he is old;
His locks intermingled with gray;
His footsteps are feeble; once fearless and bold,
Thy father is passing away.

Be kind to thy mother, for, lo! on her brow
May traces of sorrow be seen.
Oh, well may'st thou cherish and comfort her now,
For loving and kind hath she been.
Remember thy mother; for thee she will pray
As long as God giveth her breath;
With accents of kindness then cheer her lone way,
Even to the dark valley of death.

Be kind to thy brother; his heart will have death
If the smile of thy joy be withdrawn.
The flowers of feeling will fade at their birth
If the dew of affection be gone.
Be kind to thy brother; wherever you are
The love of a brother shall be
An ornament purer and richer by far
Than pearls from the depths of the sea.

Be kind to thy sister; not many may know
The depth of true sisterly love.
The wealth of the ocean lies fathoms below
The surface that sparkles above.
Thy kindness shall bring to thee many sweet hours
And blessings thy pathway to crown;
Affection shall weave thee a garland of flowers
More precious than wealth or renown.
