LISION ON THE SEA.

Ships Come Together In the Night and Both Sink.

SHIPS OF SURVIVORS.

From The Prince Oscar Adrift Two Days With Nothing to Eat or Drink—One of the Vessels Goes Down Not a Soul on Board Is Saved. Even Her Name Known.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—The British Prince Oscar from Liverpool, Captain Henderson, collided in midocean July 13 with an unknown sailing ship. Both ships sank in less than 10 minutes. Six members of the crew of Prince Oscar and all on board the unknown vessel were lost. The survivors, 17 in number, were rescued by ship Dharwar, after being confined in open boat with neither food nor water for three days. They were transferred to the British steamship Capricorn Passeigne and brought to this port right.

A disaster occurred shortly after night July 13. The Prince Oscar, which was bound from Shields, which she left May 27, for Iquique laden with coal, was going at a clipping gait in port tack before a brisk wind with all canvas set. It is estimated that she was making about a half knot an hour when suddenly there loomed up directly under her a 4-masted vessel.

It mate asserts that the stranger no lights burning and after she sighted it was impossible to change course of the Prince Oscar. The hull of the latter struck the unsmiling amidships, knocking her almost on her beam's end and crashing through the woodwork until the grotto was more than half buried. The stranger went over almost on beam's end as the Prince Oscar lay away. As the crew of the Prince stood peering through the darkness they saw the stranger partially herself and then she rapidly began to sink.

They listened awhile in vain for some of life, but not a cry for help nor word of command came from the sunken vessel. In less than four minutes from the time she was struck she keeled over and plunged stern into the depths below.

Captain Henderson of the Prince, who was below in his berth, on deck just in time to discover his ship was also sinking. The men were manned, but it was discovered that there was no hope from that side.

Lifeboats were ordered out and the men were told to jump in for their lives. They all went over, and with the exception of unfortunate ones reached two small boats hovering about the scene of wreck until daylight came in an effort to rescue the two missing members of Prince Oscar's crew, or any survivors from the other ship. They found none, and nothing to indicate the name, home or destination of the companions in misfortune.

Twenty-four hours later heavy sea took one of the boats and capsized it. Occupants, eight in number, were cast into the sea, and the already crowded craft which Captain Henderson commanded put quickly to the rescue. They were successful in getting all the men aboard. The rest were lost. There were now 17 men in small lifeboat with nothing to eat but except a cask of fishoil, with which they moistened their parched lips and tongues. For three days and nights floated thus on the bosom of the Atlantic, and just as they were about to abandon hope they were sighted taken on the ship Dharwar from whom they were transferred to the and brought to this port.

LONG TIME COMING.

Young Boy Rewarded For Gallant Services Performed 32 Years Ago.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—A medal of honor has been awarded to John S. Mizell, drummer of Company C, the seventh Ohio volunteers, for distinguished gallantry in action at battle of Mission Ridge, Tenn., Aug. 25, 1863. A boy of 18 years, he beat his drum, seized a musket and took the charge, inspiring his company with his heroic conduct.

Spended Bank Resumes Business.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The Merchants' National bank of Rome, Ga., has suspended payment April 27, having fully complied with the terms imposed by the controller of currency preceding to resumption, its capital stock being unimpaired, been authorized to resume business.

Spended With Robbery and Desertion.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The police are investigating the case of Samuel Glass, who is said to have a home in Indiana and who is claimed to be a newspaper charged with robbery and desertion.

Gould and Zelia Nicolas.

WABASH, Aug. 9.—D. D. Duncan, a member of the New York law firm engaged by George J. Gould to defend suit brought against him by Zelia Nicolas, formerly of this city, has agreed to take depositions of witnesses who are acquainted with the details of Zelia's career in Indiana. Mr. Duncan will return to this city about Aug. 1, when the examinations will be held, and Mr. Gould will be for trial at the fall term of court.

SQUATTERS AND MILL OWNERS.

Women Defend Their Homes and Get the Worst of the Affray.

MARIENETTE, Wis., Aug. 9.—The first blood in the fight between the squatters and mill owners over the possession of some ground on which the squatters have built houses and have been living, was shed yesterday. Six women, wives of squatters, sallied out to tear down a fence which had been erected around their homes during the night, and they were attacked by the mill company's crew.

A pitched battle ensued and the women were worsted. Four of them were taken from the ground bruised and bleeding. Jack Lundberg and Dick Gorman of the mill company were arrested. The affair has caused great excitement. Mrs. Mary Bergerson, who had previously been arrested, was found guilty and given 15 days in the jail.

She went behind the bars with her little baby and says she will serve her sentence willingly. The officers had great difficulty in arresting her, and if she had not finally consented to the arrest, would never have been brought before a justice, as her neighbors were on hand to defend her. The women in the squatter's district are all excited, and now refuse to be pacified or listen to advice, and loss of life may result from the affair.

BUILDING COLLAPSES.

Eight Story Structure In Course of Erection Goes Down Without Warning.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—An 8-story building collapsed here yesterday and three workmen were killed and several injured. Between 70 and 80 workmen were in the building when the collapse came and many more may be buried in the debris, as there is no way of telling who was under the walls when they fell and who escaped. Rescuing parties are at work clearing away the wreck as fast as possible.

KANSAS BICYCLERS.

Emporia Riders Stirred Up Over an Obnoxious City Ordinance.

EMPIORIA, Kan., Aug. 9.—Emporia is again stirred up over the bicycle. Only a short time ago some 40 citizens were arrested for violating an obnoxious bicycle ordinance, so construed as to be almost prohibitory. The case was tested in court and the ordinance declared unconstitutional. Now the city council has passed another ordinance almost, if not quite, as obnoxious, and another big batch of arrests will be made if it is rigidly enforced. The bicyclists have organized and are determined to fight the matter, and they will carry it to the supreme court if necessary.

Bland Appoints Delegates.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 9.—Under instructions of the Democratic state convention held at Perte Springs, Mo., Hon. R. P. Bland, chairman, has appointed delegates from each congressional district and six from St. Louis to represent Missouri in the national silver conference to be held at Washington, Aug. 14, under the call issued by Senators Turpie of Indiana, Harris of Tennessee and Jones of Arkansas.

Fishing In Lake Erie.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 9.—The Cleveland fishermen whose nets were seized recently by the state game warden declare that they will take the matter to the United States supreme court, if necessary, to establish their rights. They claim that inasmuch as Lake Erie is held to be high sea the state of Ohio has no jurisdiction over it and cannot regulate fishing in its waters.

Congressman McMillin Will Retire.

NASHVILLE, Aug. 9.—In the Fourth district, now represented by Congressman Benton McMillin, candidates for congress are rapidly bobbing up. This is supposed to indicate the voluntary retirement of Mr. McMillin, and reports are freely circulated that he is preparing to enter the race for governor.

Wealthy Woman Kills Herself.

BUFFALO, Aug. 9.—Miss Elizabeth Blaney Bird, aged 42, prominent in society, who was subject to fits of melancholy, killed herself with a revolver yesterday. She was possessed of wealth and was connected with many charitable enterprises.

BRIEF MENTION.

Thirty-three thousand Spanish troops will be dispatched to Cuba this month and 30,000 more in October if necessary.

Ex-Justice Strong is reported to be in about the same condition last night as in the morning, unconscious most of the time.

Captain C. C. Hewitt of the Nineteenth Infantry has been detailed as military instructor at the West Virginia university.

Postmaster General Wilson left for Long Branch yesterday. Third Assistant Postmaster General Craig is now acting as postmaster general.

The Portage iron works at Duncansville, Pa., will resume operations in the nail mills of the plant at once. These mills were last worked in 1873.

Several people were injured last night by the collapse of a piazza floor of the Sea View hotel at Rye Beach, a summer resort 10 miles from Portsmouth, N. H.

The Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad company officials in Nashville announce that the strike among their operatives at Easley Mines, Ala., is settled and that the men have returned to work at the wages paid them before the strike.

It is not at all improbable that the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight may take place at Ardmore, on Indian Territory soil. Judge C. B. Kilgore asserts in the opinion that there is no legal impediment to its taking place in the Chickasaw nation.

CHINESE MISCREANTS.

Unless Prompt and Energetic Action Is Taken More Trouble Is Feared.

SOLDIERS TURN ROBBERS.

DETACHMENT OF THE CHINESE ARMY SENT TO KU CHENG TO PROTECT FOREIGN PROPERTY LOOT THE STEWART RESIDENCE—MINISTERS AT PEKING FAIL TO REALIZE THE GRAVITY OF THE SITUATION.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—The World today prints the following dispatches from Foo Chow, China:

A mob has just looted the American Mission chapel at Ing Hok, 50 miles from here. Unless prompt, effective action is taken there is danger of a great riot in other places.

The Chinese soldiers sent to Ku Cheng to protect foreign property plundered the Stewart residence.

No American gunboat has come here. The situation is critical.

An official on his way to this city from Ku Cheng was killed Wednesday. There is no American protection. The American government's neglect is infamous.

The evidence already obtained shows that the massacre at Hwasang was planned at least a week beforehand. The foreign consuls have the names of the leaders in it, and of some of the participants.

THOUGHT MISSIONARIES SENT THE SOLDIERS.

An official of Foo Chow sent 210 soldiers into that section on the 24th of July to prevent the Vegetarians from murdering Chinese. The Vegetarians thought the missionaries had caused the troops to be sent and decided to kill them.

They began immediately to gather at a certain designated place. In passing through the villages on their way to the rendezvous the Vegetarians publicly declared their intention to destroy the churches and to kill the Christians. The local officials knew of this, but they did nothing to protect or even to warn the foreigners.

The night before the massacre a native pastor in the city of Ku Cheng heard that the Vegetarians were going to kill the foreigners on the morrow.

He wrote a letter of warning to Mr. Stewart at Hwasang, but delayed sending it until daylight. The messenger arrived half an hour too late.

Dr. Gregory was in the city of Ku Cheng at the time, but he was not notified. The foreigners had no suspicion of the intended slaughter.

ANXIETY AT SHANGHAI.

MINISTERS AT PEKING FAIL TO REALIZE THE GRAVITY OF THE SITUATION.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 9.—Great anger is felt here at the omission to send British troops from Hong Kong to Ku Cheng. The ministers in Peking fail to realize the gravity of the situation.

It is highly advisable that British troops go to Fu Chau. The viceroy has not sufficient force, except on paper, to make arrests.

Natives of Ku Cheng Friendly.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Thomas Watters, British consul at Fu Chan, who recently arrived in London after 30 years in China, says: "It is certain that the massacres at Ku Cheng are not due to the people of that town, whose relations with the missionaries are of the most cordial character. The murderers must have been strangers, dissatisfied with the local officials of the central government, who killed the foreigners in order to bring obloquy upon the authorities. There is no means of protecting the missionaries at Ku Cheng except by making the Chinese government responsible. United States Consul Hixson's inquiry must be productive of good."

TREASURE CAVE.

LUCKY FIND OF TWO YOUNG MEN WHILE PROSPECTING FOR GOLD.

FRESNILLIO, Mex., Aug. 9.—A half century ago this section of country was terrorized by a band of brigands, led by Luis Ortega, until they were killed in a fight with a company of rural guards.

Since then many efforts have been made to find the rendezvous of the extinct band, as it was believed they had a vast amount of wealth hidden in some spot in this locality. This wealth has been discovered by two young men, who were prospecting for gold in the mountains south of here. They came upon a cave which they partly explored, and in this cavern they found several large casks filled with gold money and valuable ornaments. They reported their find to the local authorities, and an official exploration of the cave will be made. One-half the treasure will go to the discoverers and the other half to the government.

MAN BRINGS A BREACH OF PROMISE SUIT.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Frederick Seitel yesterday entered suit against Albertina K. Mooney for $25,000 damages for breach of promise to marry him. The defendant is an heiress and is now stopped at Baltimore.

ITALIANS KILLED.

RIO JANEIRO, Aug. 9.—It is reported that a number of Italians employed on the Rio Doce railway have been killed during the riots at Victoria in the province of Espirito Santo.

THE first Monday in September is the time for the election of a County Superintendent under the new law.

KANSAS legislates against certain noxious weeds not by making an appropriation, but by adding to the tax bill of the farmer who neglects to cut them down. It is hardly necessary to say that the weeds are disappearing rapidly.

THE local weekly papers are struggling with trustees reports this week. Many of the country papers will print the reports next week, but the Putnam papers are issued the last of the week and the ten day limit gives them but one chance at the reports. There is great hustling and some delay in consequence.

Fifteen years ago all the world's wheat was grown in the north temperate zone. In the last six months nearly one-fourth of the British imports of wheat were from Argentine and Australia. THE CLOVERDALE BANK.

Prospects for Large Dividends not at all Flattering. Yesterday's Meeting.

Yesterday morning was held another meeting of the creditors of the now defunct Cloverdale bank. There were not many depositors present as most of them had gone to the old settlers' picnic at Quiny, and many of them thought the meeting was going to be postponed until Friday. S. A. Hays, attorney for Cooper & Co., was present at the meeting. He informed those present that the $3,600 in notes that the appraisers had listed as worthless, could not be made good. At the last meeting Mr. Cooper agreed to make them good, but this will make the liabilities more, they have reached about $10,000, with assets about $4000.

This leaves matters in a bad light and the outlook is not at all flattering for large dividends.

Concerning Cattle.

Secretary Morton, of the Department of Agriculture has issued an order directing the attention of the officers of all railroad companies engaged in the transportation of live stock from one state or territory into another, or whose roads from any part of a line of road transporting live stock from one state or territory into another, to sections 4386, 4387 and 4388 and 4389 of the Revised Statutes, which impose certain regulations for the transportation of cattle. The Secretary says that complaint has been made to the department by its officers supervising the movement of animals in the interstate and export trade that the provisions of the sections referred to are not complied with by many railroad companies, and that cattle and other live stock are confined in cars for a period exceeding twenty-eight hours, and that at times when they are unloaded they are not allowed to five consecutive hours for rest provided by statute.

The Secretary points out that the failure of the railroad companies to conform to the law causes animals great suffering while in transit to points of destination, which it is the intent of the law to prevent, and he directs that railroad companies make such arrangement as are necessary in their train service, and provide the necessary feeding and watering stations to comply with the above-named sections of the Revised Statutes, and says that any failure to do this will render them liable on conviction to the penalty provided in section 4388.—Broad-

Use and Abuse of Bicycles

Medical opinion seems to be generally in favor of bicycling when not carried to excess. Most of the doctors who have been heard on the subject agree that bicycling is a good exercise for the healthy and valuable to those who are troubled with some forms of disease. The celebrated English physician, Sir Benjamin Ward Richardson, has an article on the subject in the North American Review for August, and his views are especially interesting, as he has been for many years a practical cyclist and his published opinions in regard to it have had much to do with popularizing the bicycle in England. He says it has been a great public benefit in teaching a large number of people the use of their limbs, in taking them away from close rooms and streets, and introducing them to a companionship with nature which they otherwise never would have enjoyed. Besides its value in improving the health of those who are well it has done a vast amount of good to people suffering from fatty disease of the heart, from gout, dyspepsia, varicose veins, melancholia, failure due to age from intermittent pulse and palpitation, and distinctly to those suffering from uræmia.—Ex.

Northwestern Association.

The Northwestern Association of Trotting and Pacing Horse Breeders give their annual trotting meeting at Washington Park, Chicago, commencing Saturday, August 17th next, and continuing to Saturday, August 24th.

There will be three or more races each day, and the purses to be contended for amount to more than fifty thousand dollars. The entries include the best horses in America and embrace nearly all of the surprises in harness racers that appeared this season, and it is admitted that more fast young trotters and pacers have been uncovered this year than in any ten previous years in the history of harness racing. There is as a rule more appreciation for the standard bred trotter and pacer in the country districts than in the busy cities.

Horse fanciers in large cities do not have the leisure nor the roads for true enjoyment of this noblest of sports. It is only on the soft green lanes of the farm districts that the speed of young harness horses finds best development.

But there is not a better conditioned nor faster track in America than that at Washington Park, Chicago, and the Northwestern Breeders have arranged a splendid programme and hung up liberal purses for the young breeders and developers of the country as well as for the more experienced and hardy campaigners. The grounds and stables are ample in dimension and the clubhouse, grand stand and paddocks commodious and comfortable far in excess of any other track in America.

Arrangements have been made with the various railway companies to sell tickets at reduced rates, and every effort made by the very capable secretary of the Association, Mr. R. L. Allen, to present the very best and strongest racing programme of the year.

This meeting more clearly and absolutely represents the breeding interests of the northwest than any other that is given and should have the encouragement of all lovers of the harness horse.

Any one of the days between the 17th easily tell the drinker's nationality by his actions. A Spaniard pays for the that he will swear while he goes. An Englishman spills the beer and orders another glass. A German carefully fishes out the fly and finishes his beer as

OVER THE SNOW.

By CHARLES B. LEWIS (M. QUAD).

[Copyright, 1895, by Charles B. Lewis.]

The winter of 1854-5 has ever since been referred to by the settlers of northern Minnesota as "the wolf winter," and there are hundreds of people living whose adventures during those long, cold months would thrill the listener. Up to the middle of September the weather was hot and dry. It then turned cold, and potatoes were frozen in the hill before they could be dug. On the last day of the month snow fell to the depth of six inches, and though it melted away after a few days the whole month of October was cold and drear, and ice formed every single night of the month. On the 3d of November it began snowing again, and the flakes continued to fall for four days and nights. Then it came on so terribly cold that horses, cattle, sheep and hogs were frozen to death on every hand. The snow was 54 inches deep on the level, but in many places drifts had formed which did not disappear until June of the next year.

My father had a pioneer's claim nine miles north of what was then called Arnold's Corners, a hamlet of a dozen shops and houses. We were directly on the highway, but so blocked was the road with snow that nothing could pass over it until a crust was formed on the surface. This did not occur until the end of November. Then came a warm day, with rain, a change again at night, and there was a crust on the snow strong enough to bear up a team of horses. At that date there was an abundance of wild game in the country, and it was an everyday matter to sight a wolf or bear. While the snow lay so deep on the earth there was little fear of wild animals, but on the very night the crust formed we found ourselves subjected to a new danger. Our shelters for the horses, cows, pigs and poultry had been made snug before the cold weather came, and we had not lost a fowl up to Dec. 1. On the night of that date, it being almost as light as day outdoors, the family was aroused from sleep by the scream of a panther close at hand.

Before any one was out of bed we heard the beast on the roof. After three or four minutes he was joined by a second, and while the pair ran over the roof, digging into the frozen snow here and there and tearing at the stone chimney, three other panthers made an attack on the cow shed. A part of this shed was devoted to the cow and a part to three pigs and a score of chickens. As soon as the cow scented the wild beasts she began bellowing in affright, and the pigs squealed and the hens cackled to add to the hullabaloo. But for the frozen snow the panthers must have been through the roof of the shed. After several vain attempts to get down to the boards they leaped to the ground and tried the door. It was a rude affair, but stout enough to resist them, and after raving about for half an hour they gave it up and joined those seeking to come at us in the cabin. There were a door and two windows, the latter having only lower sashes and bars nailed over the outside. When they found they could not get in by way of the roof, the five beasts tried door and windows. Father shot and killed one which was hanging to the bars of the back window, and the noses of two or three others were badly burned by powder sprinkled at the bottom of the door and exploded with a coal from the fireplace as the beasts sniffling and growled and gnawed at the wood like rats.

We were besieged for two long hours, and the affair ended in something well worth seeing. The four panthers started to go away together, but in the clear space between the house and the cow shed they fell to fighting. All were full grown, and we could see every detail from the window. It was a battle royal, each beast fighting on his own hook and against the other three, and it continued for perhaps half an hour. When it ended, one panther lay dead, and the others were so badly hurt that they could hardly drag themselves away. Father realized that this attack would be followed by others, and next day was spent strengthening cabins and sheds and making loopholes to fire through. The skins had been removed from the two panthers and their bodies left on the snow about a hundred feet west of the house.

At 4 o'clock in the afternoon, as father and I were at work in the cow shed, we heard a snarling and fighting of beasts, and at once fastened the door and rushed for the cabin. We were scarcely inside before it was surrounded by wolves. A pack numbering fully a hundred had come out of the forest to the west, making straight for the cabin. Had they not encountered the carcasses and stopped to devour them father and I would have been cut off. The snow about the cabin, except at the windows and doors, was within three feet of the saves. The wolves, therefore, had no trouble in mounting to the roof. We had been living for the last week on cornmeal and water, and a couple of days more would finish the meal. Father decided that he would go to Arnold's Corners for a supply of provisions, and I was to go along with him. We had a homemade sled for the horses, and as the day promised to be full of sunshine and no wolves had been seen for several days it was not looked upon as a dangerous journey. We should have been home before noon but for an accident happening in the town. In making a turn the sled was broken and had to be repaired, and this detained us till midafternoon.

When about ready to start, a Scandinavian girl, who had been working at the Corners and wanted to go home, entreated father to give her a lift. She would remain at our house overnight, and next day, if all was right, make the rest of her way on foot. When we left the hamlet, father had his loaded rifle and plenty of ammunition, and he had bought for me at the store a light ax. It had clouded up before we started, but I at least had no fear of the wolves until we reached a point five miles from home. Father was driving and letting the horses take it easy, when we heard the howl of a wolf in the woods to the right. It wasn't two minutes before six large wolves were following us, and we could hear the howls of others coming up. Then my father handed the reins over to me and said:

"We are sure to be attacked before long. Keep the horses in check until I tell you to let them go and then give all your attention to guiding them."

I was a boy of 14 and perfectly able to handle the team, but for a couple of minutes I was so weak that I could hardly sit up. Father gave me a few words of encouragement, and when he saw that I was pulling myself together he got out the ax and passed it to the girl and said:

"I will use the rifle, and you must use the ax. Kneel down where you are and strike at every wolf which attempts to leap into the sled."

The girl turned white as chalk and closed her eyes, but father shook her savagely by the shoulder and declared that she must do her part, or he would throw her to the wolves. The fear of such a thing brought back her nerve, and she was ready long before we were attacked. It was not until there were 15 wolves in the pack that they got their courage up to make a dash. As they came on father fired and killed one, but the others did not stop.

Another one was bowled over when within 20 feet of the sled, and then I got word to let the horses go. I saw only what took place ahead. Had there been a foot less of snow there would have been scores of stumps to look out for. As it was, I had clear sailing over a track as level as the frozen surface of a lake. Just as the horses dashed forward three wolves sprang out from the right and two from the left and leaped and fell short. One of them was run over by the sled, but the other four continued racing alongside and now and then leaping at the horses' noses. As the wolves came up from behind they tried to leap into the rough box fastened to the sled. The broad backed, stout armed Scandinavian girl faced to the rear, and she could not have asked for a better weapon than the ax. Father had an eye on her as he loaded and fired, and a hundred times afterward I heard him praise that girl's coolness and pluck. He declared that she never missed a blow. Whenever she struck, she split a wolf's head open or lopped off a paw, and each blow was accompanied by a yell which could have been heard a mile away.

When we were within half a mile of the cabin, there were yet 20 wolves around us. Father fired a last shot, took the lines from me and motioned me to use his rifle as a club. The girl was using the ax and I the rifle when father made the turn out of the road. Mother had heard the firing and shouting and stood in the open door with a blazing firebrand in her hand. At the door father pulled on the lines with all his strength, and as the horses were secured the wolves fell upon the horses, dragged them down, and half an hour later only a few clean picked bones and scraps of harness were left to tell the tale.

In the Drinking Days.

A once well known individual who had lived every day of his life and gained from it a great experience, left the following advice—and little else—to his sons, "Drink slow, do not mix your liquor, never sit with your backs to the fire." It was an excellent precept for the era in which it was given—the times when the dining room door was kept locked that there might be no shirking the claret, and when the only chance at the circuit mess of escaping intoxication was to drop under the table "like the rest"—as Lord Cockburn tells us he did—and lie quiet—nay, even when our judges resented that discredit should be brought on drinking by misconduct.

Everybody drank, and much too much in those days, but especially the upper classes. A well known politician discharged his coachman for overturning him in his carriage. "I had certainly drunk too much, sir," urged the poor man, "but I was not very drunk, and gentlemen, you know, sometimes get drunk." "I don't say you were very drunk for a gentleman," returned his master, "but you were exceedingly drunk for a coachman!"—London Illustrated News.

A Great Victory.

In the battle of Marengo 58,000 men participated, and of that number 13,000 were killed or wounded, about 22 per cent. Napoleon thought Marengo his greatest victory. He always kept throughout life the uniform he wore on that day.

HOW TO PREVENT "RIGGS' DISEASE."

A Sure Destroyer of Teeth, Seldom Detected Until Too Late.

Riggs' disease of the gums is a recession of the flesh from the teeth scarcely perceptible to the sufferer. The enamel of the teeth is several times thicker above and below the skin than under it. What is called the normal line of the gum, the dentine or enameled portion, is not exposed, and nature provides the heavier shell coating to protect the visible part not only from cold and climatic conditions, but from the danger generated by small microbes floating about the mouth after eating.

When the gums recede from the teeth toward the root, the dentine is left a helpless prey to every acid the mouth contains, and decay begins at the top, cutting off all hope of saving the lower part.

This recession is rarely visible except to the dentist. Its probable effect is slight bleeding of the gums whenever a stiff brush is used, while the teeth seemingly remain in their normal condition.

The cause of the irritation is tartar poison.

The saliva of the month is partly formed of phosphate of lime, which, by chemical action, is converted into tartar. This fastens itself upon the roots of the teeth, and irritating the tender membrane causes a bleeding, sore condition.

In this weakened, porous condition these innumerable microbes that lurk in the cavities of the mouth float out from their hiding places and seize upon the wounded line of skin. This is the fatal condition, and only the most careful treatment dislodges them. The tartar substance becomes poisonous, and the whole eats its way into the gums, which slough and gradually decrease.

Of course this disease is not common to every mouth. It is caused primarily by an acid condition of the saliva, hereditary in some constitutions, and its earliest arrester is an antiseptic. Should, however, any bleeding occur in brushing, a dentist's help should be called in.

The treatment for it continues from six months to a year, and even then the disease is only arrested; the re-establishment of the gum is never assured.

The nature of the disease is so insidious that prudent women should see to it that the mouth is frequently examined. Any dentist can tell whether a person is inclined to this condition and at once remove the tartar and advise an antiseptic that destroys the microbes.

In fact, some such preparation should be frequently used to retain a healthy condition of every part of the mouth.

A 2 per cent solution of salicylic acid is especially recommended by the profession.

How to Cook Plank Shad at Home.

Take a long narrow baking pan and put it on the stove with a piece of beef suet to try out slowly. Split a roe shad for broiling, dry it well inside and out with a clean white cloth, rub it with quite a little salt and after rubbing the pan with the melting suet lay the fish, skin up, in the bottom and set it in a hot oven. Let it brown and sizzle till it is puffed in tiny blisters all over the top, and then you can be pretty sure it is done. Slide it out on a hot platter and serve garnished with lemon and parsley. Cooked in this way, all the rich juices of the fish are preserved, and there is not so much odor through the house.

How to Dress Store Windows.

Always dress a side window as much as possible toward the street, so that it may be easily seen from the pavement. Arrange the tickets at a slight angle toward the street. In dressing a glove window avoid showing the palms. Let the backs and the buttons only be visible. If there is a coarse or inferior piece of skin in a glove, you will always find it in the palm. Gloves can be stuck on the window by breathing heavily on the longest finger and pressing it against the glass. They will remain fast for weeks, provided your window does not "steam." "Tricky" window displays are sometimes very taking. Keep windows clean. Have the lower parts rubbed over two or three times during the day and always after a shower. Do not economize in tickets. New tickets make old stock appear fresh. Old tickets make new stock appear stale. Use black or white tickets throughout. They are more striking than colors. Light up the windows early, before dusk. It adds effect, and, moreover, this is usually the time when customers are about.

How Deafness Often Develops in Soldiers.

In battle the auditory nerves, having been unduly excited by the firing of guns, etc., the soldier on coming out of an engagement very frequently suffers from temporary deafness, though no organic or structural disease is developed. Artisans who are engaged in boiler making become in time quite deaf from the same excitement of the auditory nerve produced by the hammering of the iron to which they are subjected, and in their case deafness becomes unfortunately chronic, the auditory nerve being destroyed.

How to Make Cocomanut Pudding.

One quart of stale bread should be broken up fine and soaked for two hours in 2 quarts of cold milk. At the end of that time beat 4 eggs with one-half cupful of sugar and 2 teaspoonsfuls of salt and stir into the bread and milk. Then add a cupful of prepared cocomanut and one-half cupful of finely cut citron. This may be baked in a pudding dish for three-quarters of an hour or may be cooked in the steamer one hour. Serve with creamy or hard sauce.

How to Make Caramels.

Caramel, so much used to color sauces, gravies, etc., is made as follows: Heat half a pound of brown sugar in a small kettle and stir until it is a smooth, dark brown butter, but be careful that it does not burn; add gradually a pint of hot water, let it simmer while the sugar, which is escaping from the kettle, dissolves; then bottle and cork.
