COLLOQUIALISM—NO. 4.

The Sentinel does not even pretend to deny any statements made in the Republican by Tilted Mudsucker Bitters. It is not necessary. The people detect his falsehoods without any aid from us. Even the statement that an adjoining county merged a Democratic majority of 250 into a Republican of 200, we do not dispute for the reason that the people know its utter falsity, and know, too, that the knowledge of the swill tub that exudes them is exceedingly limited. Oh, no, we do not dispute anything he says, not even his reputed confab with "le ding" D m c u t, although we are fully aware that "ending" Democrats, in the sense in which he expresses the term, do not exist here. All elements are equal—may have different views in reference to what may subvert the best interest of the party and the country, and those differences must be, and are respected. Again, honest Democrats tried him, his advice, his fibes and jeers, much in the manner our Savior treated that other radical and friend of our neighborhood the way, when he offered him possession to which he had no title—without spurning, loathing contempt. So much in response to the walling of the whipped spaniel who dolefully complies because we do not deny the falsehoods published. On the other hand we do not insist upon our readers to believe the "Colloquialisms," or interviews between "Bitters" and his cruel taskmaster, "Ringster." A comparison of these reported interviews with the contents of the Republican, will establish the correctness of the reports, and identify the remorseless and impudent control of the radical "ring."

Ringster—Well, Bitters, you have played the deuce this week. In your first scratch, you stigmatize the National as "mongrel green-blackers." Why, you are the dirtiest, meanest "mongrel" I know of. Here, we've been trying our utmost to bring about a fusion with us, and, like a fool, you step in and break it all up.

Bitters—W. w. well— Ringster—Bla! your skunkiness, senseless, ill-timed twaddle; you wait till I'm through.

Bitters—Till w. w. wait. Ringster—You go on stating that they have lost confidence in Mack, and seriously contemplate starting a greenback "organ," but close up by showing that you have more to fear from such a project than he has. You are smart?

Bitters—Well, I d-d didn't mean to convey that idea. Ringster—Ideal! You don't know what constitutes an idea. Then you bring up the matter of employing a number of men to take Mack down to the river, when you know the proposition was entertained in the ring with reference to yourself, and was only prevented from being carried out, by your plea that you were mentally and physically so soft, the dirt was essentially necessary to hold you together. This is known outside of the ring, too, and renders your effort to be smart, sharp and witty at Mack's expense, absurd in the extreme.

Bitters—H-h-how did it get out?

Ringster—No doubt you blabbed it. Bitters—No, I-I didn't. I d-d didn't blab about that egging either. It made me sick when I read the reference to it in the Sentinel. "There is no pleasure in stirring up these stinking transactions. While I sat there, I was 'unable to peruse it carefully and retain the equilibrium of my stomach.' My medicated editor who wrote the leader in favor of my personal friend and patron, Jim Blaine, called on me at the office next morning, felt my pulse, and recommended quiet and a light diet. The General kindly called and consoled me with the old adage that a 'skunk,' when kicked by a gentleman, 'is sure to get the worst of the bargain.'"

Ringster—Ho! ho! ho! You were easily consoled.

Bitters—Yes; and he also said I had started in on a pledge to do some scalping, but that Mack had stepped in and made my wool fly every time I don't understand that.

Ringster—No; scarcely. A fool who can reap consolation from the adage will not readily understand anything.

Bitters—A minister came in and I read to him from the Rochester Sentinel: "A report that the Rensselaer Republican has changed hands and that the editor and family were to return to this place, is without foundation." I construed that to mean they were as anxious to have me back, as I was to be with them; but he sympathetically shook his head, and smilingly, though sorrowfully, remarked: "Ah, brother; don't flatter yourself in that way. No doubt your family would be heartily welcomed home, but that was designed to give relief to your party there, who hope and pray that you may remain in Jasper county."

Now, that's what I call pretty rough. How can a man so spiritually inclined as I content myself to remain in a town where the High School graduates educate the "heel and toe" as well as the head, and where "School-boy" productions light into one like a pile of brick. Then, too, I'm sorely troubled over the conduct of my personal and political friend, Lyman Zea. We elected him to the high and important office of constable, and he has stepped down for a short time to "walk for a wager." When may I say "the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest?" Mack, he's wicked.

Senator Wade Hampton has accepted an invitation to address a G. A. R. Post in Pittsburgh, Pa., this month.

The Blaine and Sherman squealers are all; Grant ugly names, and the Grant retainers retort in kind. The happy family will meet at Chicago, June 2.

"If it contained the shadow of a single fact it might be considered funny."—Republican. Terribly mixed proposition, "Funny" if true. Not "funny" if not true. Well there is more truth than poetry in the conclusions of the items referred to.

The so-called republican party is wont to sport itself as to its majority in the Northern States. We do not take kindly to sectional divisions and classifications, regarding them as unparliamentary and discreditable, but we think we should know the radical persistence of the bush. The republican vote two years ago, in the twenty Northern States, was 2,252,310. The opposition was 2,438,311, a trifling margin of 236,001 against that proposition. And thus is another Republican bubble punctured.

Lincoln Martin returned last evening from a trip to Nebraska. Proceedings of the National Greenback Convention for the Tenth Congressional District. Pursuant to call the Convention met at the Court House, in Monticello, Indiana, on Thursday, May 20th, at 10 o'clock, A. M. Hon. Robert Gregory, Chairman of the Congressional Central Committee, called the convention to order, and on his motion, Hon. Leroy Templeton, of Benton county, was elected President of the convention, who in a five minutes speech, thanked the convention for the honor conferred and briefly discussed the political issues of the day from a Greenback stand point. Charles H. Smith, of Jasper county and J. C. Price, of White county were elected Secretaries of the convention.

The following gentlemen were on motion appointed a committee on Credentials: Loren Hixon, Lake county. John T. Taylor, Porter county. Richard A. Putt, Newton county. Ezra C. Novels, Jasper county. Stephen Bruce, Pulaski county. F. Dausch, Fulton county. T. J. Reynolds, Cass county. Isaac Jackson, Carroll county. Jackson Dobbins, White county. Dawson Smith, Benton county. On motion the chair appointed the following committee on resolutions. E. R. Swarts, Benton county. M. M. Sirl, White county. M. Hogan, Pulaski county.

On motion the convention adjourned until 1 o'clock P. M. AFTERNOON SESSION. The convention reassembled at 1 o'clock P. M. The committee on Credentials, by J. T. Taylor its chairman, presented their report, which was adopted, and which showed every county in the district was represented. The committee on Resolutions then reported the following which were unanimously adopted.

RESOLUTIONS. The delegates of the National party of the 10th congressional district of Indiana in convention assembled, declare, that we are in favor of a free press and free speech, and every other progressive principle that liberally teaches, and therefore,

Resolved, First: That we favor a repeal of the Act establishing National Banks and that all money, whether metallic or paper, should be issued directly, and its volume controlled by the General Government, and should be a legal tender for all debts, public and private, without any exceptions.

Second: That the Bonds of the United States should be paid, when due without refunding in accordance with the terms of the original contract.

Third: That we emphatically disapprove of the appointment of United States Marshals, backed with bayonets, to supervise the election of members of Congress, as an unwarranted interference with the freedom of election.

Fourth: That we heartily endorse the Weaver equalization bill, which recognizes the services of the Soldiers to the impervious Republic equally sacred with the bondholders, and demands that he too shall be paid in full for his services.

E. R. SWARTS, } Com. M. HOGAN, } M. M. SILL, }

Col. J. B. Milroy, in a forcible and eloquent speech, presented the name of Hon. John N. Skinner, of Porter county, for Congress; and on motion of Dawson Smith, of Benton county, he was elected by acclamation. The Chair then appointed John T. Taylor, of Porter county; H. Z. Leonard, of Cass county and George H. Brown, of Porter county a committee to wait on Mr. Skinner, and inform him of his nomination.

The following persons were elected as members of the Congressional Central Committee: Lake county—W. H. Pixley. Porter county—John T. Taylor. Newton county—J. B. Sprousswood. Jasper county—D. H. Patton. Pulaski county—R. W. Budd. Fulton county—Simon Wheeler. Cass county—H. Z. Leonard. Carroll county—C. Champion. White county—Robert Gregory. Benton county—Leroy Templeton. Short speeches were made by Col. Milroy, H. Z. Leonard and others, and after giving three cheers for John N. Skinner, the Convention adjourned.

IN THE SOUTHLAND.

A Tour of Observation Through Dixie. What a Delightful Saw, and How it Affected Him.

(From the Delphi Times.) Our well known fellow-citizen, Vine Holt, Esq., returned a few days since from an extended tour through the South. Knowing that Mr. Holt is a gentleman of keen and intelligent observation, who forms his opinions and freely expresses them, unbiased by prejudice or partisan prejudice, the Times commissioner sought and obtained an interview with him. Mr. Holt expressed himself freely and pointedly, and left upon the mind of the interviewer an impression that he had learned during the tour much of the thoughts and actions, hopes and fears of the southern people.

Leaving Delphi the first of March, Mr. Holt visited successively Washington, Richmond, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Savannah, Macon, Atlanta, Chattanooga, Nashville and Louisville. His impressions of Washington, his people and their ways, were not favorable. It seemed to him that the active corruption, chicanery and scoundrelism of the American people finds its natural center at the capital. The impression created there, the outset of his journey was discouraging, and it was with feelings of misgiving and the hope for possible relief that he entered the land of the "bluebirds" and "big game." Arriving at Richmond, he found abundant reason to change his views, and at once began to revise the opinion of the Southern people which he had formed in Washington. He had been into the city but a few hours when a prominent citizen introduced himself, and after conversation upon the needs and desires of the southern people, he visited the Legislature, then in session, where he was introduced to many members. All united in the declaration that the people of the South required and welcomed Northern immigration; that there was no feeling of bitterness between the races; that each was necessary to the well-being of the other, and that the interests of the whole people demanded that they be united in the development of her natural resources. This can only be secured through the agency of Northern capital and Northern genius. For this reason, Northern immigration is not only welcomed but solicited. In these views, the intelligent negroes, of whom there are many, fully coincided with the whites.

From Richmond Mr. Holt went to Philadelphia, and from thence by water, to Savannah, Georgia. Landing there he was at once struck with the cordial hospitality and almost burdensome attentions of the Southern visitors, and the unanimity of the expressions of good feeling. Everywhere at the hotels Mr. H. registered, upon the streets, in business houses and public assemblages, he met with the most cordial welcome.

From Savannah he went by rail to Atlanta, over the route pursued by Sherman in his famous march to the sea. The country traversed is recovering but slowly from the ravages of war, but its naturally fine resources are being gradually but surely and permanently developed. In a few years, under the influence of capital and energy, will be made to add a share to the prosperity of the South. Atlanta is a living monument to the beneficence of Union and general prosperity. Her manufactures are numerous and kept busy by the demands of home and foreign trade. The capitalists of the "Georgia Queen" are mainly by Northerners, and their lips, no less than their purses, give the lie to the oft-repeated assertion that immigrants from the North are socially and politically estranged. The practice of the South in regard to shipping from the South to the North, to the world, is the fact of the cotton of New England for consumption in the land of its production, is an absurdity. This the Southern people have learned, and with the aid of Northern capital and energy have established manufacturing factories which indicate the progress and add to the prosperity and independence of her people.

Mr. Holt's visit to Chattanooga was peculiarly gratifying, as here, to a greater extent than elsewhere, is illustrated the natural independence of the South, when aided by capital and skillful labor from the North. There is perhaps not a country in the world so rich in natural resources as Eastern Tennessee and Northern Georgia and Alabama. The best qualities of the South, such as well as timber, exist in quantities practically inexhaustible. These advantages Chattanooga has not been slow to take the benefit of, and that which at the close of the war was an inconsequential village has grown and prospered until it has become prominent among the manufacturing cities of the country. As a railroad center, the advantages possessed by Chattanooga are unsurpassed. She is the natural distributing point for shipments from the North to the great Southeast, and returning is the point through which must pass the Southern supplies of the North.

At Nashville, Mr. Holt found the prevailing feeling of the South bursting forth in an exuberance of patriotism on the occasion being the celebration of the centennial of Tennessee's capital. Representatives were sent by the hundred from all parts of the North and South, and all were welcomed with a cordiality and impartiality that should put to shame the carping sectionalists who seek to divide the country. Upon leaving Nashville Mr. H. closed his experiences with the distinctively Southern people, rejuvenated and with revised views upon the aims and ambitions of the residents of Dixie. Mr. Holt declares that the sections he visited were noticeably quiet and peaceful. He saw less drunkenness in his entire trip from Savannah to Louisville than was witnessed in the city of Delphi on his return last.

This is not very complimentary to Delphi, but it is the truth nevertheless. In reply to the direct question regarding his views upon the issue of sectionalism, and the persistent attempt made to create the impression that the Southern people are not quite so content in their hatred of the Union, Mr. Holt said a more palpable slander or a more deliberate misrepresentation of the South has never been uttered by the Prince of Falsehood. He talked with all classes of people, white and black, citizens "to the major born" and immigrants from the North, and he found that they had been most outrageously misrepresented and vilified if a man go South and conduct himself properly, giving evidence of a desire to become a good citizen, he will be cordially welcomed and aided in every way. As to the endeavor to make it appear that there is a concerted attempt by the Southern people to illegally control the elections, he asserted that he saw no evidence of such being the case, nor could he hear of any such attempts from conversations with people of all classes and political creeds. Of course employers control to a greater or less extent the votes of their employees, but such a policy does not exist to a greater degree than it does in the North—as large an extent as it does here in Delphi. On a law of a republican government—a law as immutable as the decrees of the Medes and Persians is becoming more fully recognized every day. It is that the intelligence of the country will control the government. This is a natural law, and when it is isolated, as it sometimes is, the whole people suffer. The people of the South have suffered by the predominance of ignorance, and now, when the intelligence is again in the ascendancy they are experiencing universal prosperity. There is absolutely no violence or intimidation attempted, and there is no need of governmental espionage over the elections in Georgia, Virginia, or elsewhere, where there is in New York or Pennsylvania. In fact, not as much; for the elections are today in the South a more fitting reflex of the views of the people than they have been in New York and Pennsylvania for years. The negroes, they are the worthy axis of colored people, are happy and contented. They are well treated, and they have discrimination enough to perceive that what is best for the white people is best for the people who are, and for years must remain, dependent upon them. "Never," said Mr. Holt, "in my experience of nearly twenty years, have I met a more affable, generous, whole-souled people than those whom I met in the South. Of politics I heard but little, except when I would myself introduce the subject. There was a 'business'—Universally the Southern people are anxious for quietness, and the accretion of capital which will develop their resources and enable them to recuperate from the pitiable condition in which they were left by the war. I was surprised at the little interest taken in political movements. As I have said they are wholly devoted to business, and are more anxious for the building of railroads, factories, etc., than they are for the success of the party or that aspirant for political preferment. They are to day, as a people, as loyal and patriotic as are the people of the North, and they are their ally upon the issue of the war, and, having been defeated, are content to abide the result. The exceptions can be counted upon the fingers, and they are as cordially detested by their people as they are by the ultra irreconcilable of the North. The charge that the Southern people are disloyal and discontented is an assertion which is not a scintilla of evidence to sustain it.

Mr. Holt expresses himself pointedly as disgusted with the whole system of the politics in vogue in this country. The masses of the people are weary of the unceasing political tricksters, who seek to fatten upon the misfortunes of the country. When the men learn to think for themselves; to throw aside the party spirit; and special pleading; to seek their own good, and examine the questions presented from the standpoint of intelligence and reason, the nation will be better and happier. Our people will understand each other more thoroughly and be better prepared to appreciate the unselfish patriotism which burns within the breast of every honest man, be he a resident of the North or South. There can, he says, be no permanent peace for the aspirations east upon the Southern people except the feeling which is fostered and fostered by a desire to profit by the perpetration of a sectional feeling. By Northerners, who are fostered by Southern irreconcilables, or Northern agitators, is unpatriotic to the verge of overt treason.

Mr. Holt is an old citizen of Delphi—a gentleman in whose impartial judgment all his confidantes are long Republicans, his words should and will have weight with the men of his party who have been blinded by sectional prejudice. We ask that our people shall give his words careful attention, and heed the lesson they teach.

WILLSON'S CARBULATED COD LIVER OIL. It is a consumptive patient's earnestly invited to give Willson's Carbulated Cod Liver Oil a fair trial. It is easy and readily digested when taken in the form of capsules, and immediately enters into the circulation, acting upon the system, and building up the system, while the active curative properties of the preparation complete the work of healing. It is retained by the Weakest Stomach. It is free from Unpleasant Taste. It cures Consumption, Scrofula, Asthma, Rheumatism, and all lung and constitutional complaints. Its use in Scrofulous Affections, Rheumatism, is strongly recommended. Its purifying power is wonderful in Consumption, depending as it frequently does, upon Scrofulous taint.
