County Teacher's Institute.

The following persons have been appointed as chairmen of the committees named below. Committee on Music, R. P. Benjamin, Rensselaer Ind. Committee on Religion, E. R.
Pierce, Medaryville Ind. Committee on Resolutions, Henry C. Honey, Ren-selaer Ind. Two more members will be appointed for each committee on the assembling of the County Institute.
Any one having a selection of music which would be appropriate for any exercise during the Institute will please communicate with the Chairman of the Committee on Music. Those who will volunteer a devotional, prayer, essay, or other any thing of that description will correspond with the chairman of the Religion Committee. All resolutions should be forwarded to the chairman of the Resolutions Committee.
Teachers set to work, give these committees something to do, and by thus having things previously arranged will be in a fair way to have a successful session of the Institute.

Democratic Sentinel, $1.50.

A few years ago Garfield delivered an address at Williams College in which he very fully committed himself to civil-service reform, as follows:

"Congressmen have become the dispensers, sometimes the brokers of patronage, and civil office has become a vast corrupting power to be used in reining the machine of party politics. Every man of the 102,000 feels that his hope of staying in is in obtaining to those in power. But the offices are an immense bribe, securing the party in power an army of retainers who are the most servile of their sort in the world. Nothing less than a complete reorganization of the functions from Congress down to remedy the evil. It should be done so completely that every member of Congress shall be able to make such a house as Thomas Hughes, M. P., did on his visit to this country—that, although he was personally on good terms with every member of the Cabinet he could not influence the appointment of a clerk."

That is a pretty sweeping and effective kind of civil-service reform.
Will Mr. Garfield stand by the programme?

A Bide Sold.

The following actual occurrence, says an exchange, took place in a town close by Hartford, Conn. A man was approached by a zealous Republican storekeeper who offered to pay him for staying away from the polls. This merchant was not only a buyer and seller of produce, but at every election was a purchaser of votes. He made no secret of his unholy work, and the Democrat alluded to above was made liberal offer if he would stay at home and not vote. He was going to vote, and of flour and a half barrel of mackerel, besides some ready money. The flour and mackerel was to be delivered before the election, and the money was to be every dollar after the election. "Now," said the Democrat, "I agree to get two more to stay at home and not vote if you will give me two as much more. This was agreed to, and the merchant went cheerfully in anticipation of a handsome reduction in the Democratic votes. The Democrat then went to a Republican friend and told him that he wasn't going to vote, and asked him to "pair off" with him. The Republican agreed to it. The Democrat then went to another Republican and agreed to give him a half-barrel of mackerel if he would not vote. This was agreed to, and these contracts all round were carried out to the letter.

When the merchant found out that his mackerel had been bought up by Republican voters, he went to language that ought to impair his standing in the Congressional Church. The Democrat has never asked him for the money.

All watches and clocks repaired at Hamar's warranted for one year.
