

YOUNG MEN.

of affairs similar to those in Florida and Louisiana was found. Here it became convenient to again use the original of Florida decision. It was resurrected from its festering grave and made to do duty once more in preserving "the Constitution and the law" and in seating Hayes and Wheeler.

To you, sir, and to most citizens, this is an old story. You have told it, and listened to it, and deplored its circumstances again and again. But to me and to many thousands of other young men who became voters since the Electoral Commission, it is fearfully new and strange. This is my only excuse for requesting the publication of this letter: that young men may have their curiosity excited to the end that they will read the history of the Electoral Commission, as I have read it, with eyes open. In behalf of the truth of history, the brightly shining Sun, which I know has ever looked with kindly glances upon young men, might throw a portion of one of its day's world of light upon this wonderful buried, but yet living subject. While I am a Republican by birth and habit, and shall undoubtedly remain one from convictions upon the tariff and other questions, I shall never again vote for a member of the Electoral Commission who aided in the application to the Presidential election of 1876 of those two sets of "Constitution and law." It is with regret I recall that I voted for Garfield, and have for years idealized him in my heart; and if Samuel J. Tilden, the noble man who, in behalf of his country's peace and prosperity, silently saw one of earth's greatest prizes, fairly his, wrested from him by robbery, should once more become a candidate for the Presidency, with associations not absolutely dangerous to the country or its institutions, I should deem it an honor to be one of his supporters.

TWENTY-THREE.
Akron, O.

Philadelphia Record: Jonathan S. Brinton left this state for Iowa many years ago and accumulated considerable property. In 1875 he became convinced that he was inspired by God to open an inn or tavern near Jerusalem, to prepare for the restoration of the Holy City, and, although remonstrated with by his friends and by his family, he determined to make the journey to Palestine and do as he had been directed. He first divided his property equally between himself and wife, and sailed for the Holy City. Upon arriving there he purchased several acres of land near the city and erected a hotel. Strange to relate, the scheme proved a great financial success, and the old gentleman is now making a fortune from his inn. Recently he sent over for his family, and they are now with him and highly delighted with their new home and the golden prospects. Hundreds of Englishmen and Americans stop at the hotel, and it has become one of the institutions of Jerusalem.
