PINKING FISHBACK.

A MASTER OF CHICANEY ON THE RETREAT.

A VERY HANDSOME PIECE OF TANNING THE HUMAN SKIN AND PRESERVING LIFE,

Hon. W. P. Fishback:

SIR—I read your letters, addressed to Hon. Stanton J. Peelle, upon tariff reform as they were published, and closely watched to see what influence they might have upon the politicians of your party, and what might be the sequel of your apparently bold and independent action. It was not long till rumors were ripe that your head Master Commissioner [the United States Court] would drop into the basket as the penalty of your having dared to condemn the action of your party and its officials. At this point I became still more eager to see what the result of your course would be because I felt that if a man could be found who was willing, for the sake of principle, to surrender a position worth $20,000 a year we might still hope to be able to throttle the gigantic monopolies that now threaten the existence of our Republic. I found, however, by reading your letter, addressed to the editor of the Franklin Democrat, in Saturday's News, that the elevation you attained only served to increase the force and velocity fall; and that, like Mr. Peelle, whom you so bitterly denounced, when it came to a question whether you should vacate a lucrative position, principles were readily sacrificed for the sake of place. To the question propounded by the editor of the Democrat, as to whether you would be loyal to your convictions at the next election or vote the Republican ticket upon a high protective platform, you not only submit to the lash of your party, but attempt to fortify your retreat with a trap that has become stale and offensive to all fair-minded Republicans. After stating that you will vote the Republican ticket (which no one who was acquainted with you ever doubted) because you have greater hopes of reform from your own than the Democratic party, you descend, in your attempt to excuse your utter lack of sincerity, to a depth of degradation of principle that shows you to be more of a fawning partisan than Mr. Peelle, even when he bowed to the behests of the Eastern monopolists and supported the iniquitous tariff bill you so bitterly denounced. While he followed the leaders of his party and supported a measure which he believed would contribute to its success, you pretended to rise above party and from honest motives condemn an act which you believed an outrage upon the laboring people and before your words of indignation have grown cold, from personal considerations you crawl back into the ranks of your party and don that old, tattered and dirty garment, "the bloody shirt," that even Mr. Peelle long since cast off as indecent. My object, however, is not to call your attention to the unenviable position you have placed yourself in, and thereby the attention of the public to the fact that genuine reform is less to be expected from you than any member of your party, so long as you have any personal interest at stake, but to expose the falsehoods behind which you have taken cover, and no doubt feel that by their utterance you have more than reinstated yourself in the affections of your party. Your charge that the leaders of the Democratic party opposed the war, the payment of the bonds and the raising of money to pay the soldiers, etc.

has been so often answered by such men as General Hancock, Lyman Trumbull and others that I am surprised that you could find nothing better to cover your retreat. In concluding your answer you say, "You ask me if I shall repudiate a party which has always been right for a party that has not been on the right side of anything for a quarter of a century. I say no!" Mirabile dictu! What of the whisky rings, the custom house frauds, the Indian frauds, the Star Route frauds? Et id omne genus. Your memory must be short indeed. Only last March in a letter to Mr. Peelle you said: "I think I understand when you say the interest of the party demanded such laws. Such laws put money in the pockets of bankers and manufacturers. Bankers and manufacturers will contribute of this money to the campaign fund, and men like Dorsey will come to Indiana again as they came in 1830, and disburse 40,000 in the Denison House parlor, to be used in buying voters, hiring repeaters, bribing election officers to stuff ballot-boxes and falsify election returns." After all these frauds of the Republican party, which have become a part of the history of its reign, and after your own voluntary confession that it is now in power by bribery and corruption, your discovery "that it has always been right" is in the nature of a revelation. Continuing, you say: "You certainly do not seriously ask about my vote for State officers and members of the Legislature. Whatever remnant of confidence the public may have had in the ability of your party to manage our State affairs was lost by the conduct of the last Democratic Legislature." Will you please inform the public what the last Legislature did that you do not indorse? Was it the enactment of a law permanently endowing the State University? Was it the amendment of the decedents' estate act so that widows and orphans could not be robbed by Master Commissioners? Was it the passage of the Metropolitan police bill, now indorsed by all good citizens of Indianapolis? Was it the defeat of the State House steal, by which it was sought to rob the Treasury of over $300,000? Or was it the provision for the construction of Asylums for that helpless class, the incurably insane, now confined in poor houses upon beds of straw without protection or care? I call upon you to name one act passed by the last Legislature which has caused you at once to swallow all the corruption and rascality of your own party and declare "that it has always been right." If you know anything the last Legislature did which has had such a wonderful influence upon your mind you should enlighten the public, and not keep it a secret locked within your own breast. After you have pointed out some particular measure it will be time enough for me to undertake a defense, and attempt, in some degree, to relieve the Democratic party of the terrible load of your everlasting displeasure. Respectfully,

OBSERVER.
Indianapolis, Oct. 3, 1833.

The old front door-sill of the Lexington, Ky., Court House has been purchased by Slaughter Bassel because of a historic interest that attaches to it from the fact that Aaron Burr and Henry Clay stood upon it when Burr gave Clay his word that he was guiltless of conspiracy and received the latter's pledge to defend him.

A mixture of hard soap and kerosene, a half pound of each to 3 gallons of water has been found by Prof. Goff, of the N. Y. Experimental Station, to be very effective in exterminating that pest, the cabbage worm. The remedy is simple.

BUTLER.

LD BEN SHAKING UP MASSACHUSETTS RADICALISM.

Old Ben Butler is giving Massachusetts Radicalism and Republican hypocrisy such an overturning as it never had before. He addressed an audience of 7,000 one night last week at Worcester. We make brief extracts:

I have to speak for a moment about Tewksbury. The officers thought they were entrenched there, but I put them under the charge of the Board of Health, Lunacy and Charity, and the moment that Board had to shoulder the Marshes they turned them out. [Applause.] They did not dare to keep them in longer. That Alms House with its dull men and women, crazy and poor, is now entirely reorganized. There is a graveyard there now where paupers can be buried and their graves found. There is sufficient of food, sufficient of raiment, there is good care and attendance. Everybody has been turned out who belonged to the Marshes, save one, and he will go very soon. [Much laughter and applause.] Just as soon as I can get time to attend to him. I have not the appointment in my gift or the turning out in my gift, but, as I remarked before, where there is a will there is a way, and he has got to go. [Uproarious applause.] He has disgraced the State enough. I have tried to have the taxes cut down. I offered to carry on this Institution, if they would let me have the power, for two-thirds of what has been appropriated for it by the Legislature. They sent me a bill, but I vetoed it. They sent me other bills, and I had either got to let these Institutions stop or agree to the expenditures. I made the offer from my own funds, if necessary, that I would carry on Tewksbury for $20,000 less than the appropriation, and the other Institutions in the same proportion. At the Woman's Prison money will be saved, I having got a proper person in charge of it. I had occasion to veto thirteen of the bills passed by the legislature, and one of them was to give a man pay the second time for $75,000 where he had had his pay once and signed and received in full. [Applause.]—Of course that would come out of your taxes. There was an effort to have that bill go through, and they besieged me day in and day out to sign it during the four days I had it. Somebody was always at me to sign the Shanly bill. I got from one of the Senators a letter, asking me, because he was a Democratic Senator, to sign that bill, and that Senator has now published a card that he can not stand Butler's administration any longer. [Great laughter.] He is one of the men who have gone back on me, as they say. There are quite a number of that kind. They are people to whom I would not give an office. There was one fellow by the name of Nichols, who day in and day out besieged me in my boarding house and everywhere else, demanding every office in town. When I said: "I can't give you that," he would say, "Then give me that," and so it went on, and he now has organized an Independent Democratic party on his own account. He is Chairman of it, and he is going to cast a vote against me, he and his Secretary, as far as I know [great merriment], and it is going to cost the Republicans a heap of money to have him do that. [Renewed laughter and applause.] This is my stewardship in brief. This is Butlerism, gentlemen. [Great applause.] This is what I have done. They tell me I have disgraced the State. How?
