FRANK HENGESBACH.

EDITOR SENTINEL: In glancing over the columns of the Republican of the 25 inst, I notice an article to which I shall have to reply, inasmuch as it attacks me. The writer says:

A great number of Republicans had assembled last Saturday evening, at Rose Bud School House, to listen to an address by W. B. Austin; but owing to the lateness of starting, the speaker did not arrive in time to make an extended address, and an old fashioned love feast was indulged in by those present.

Antiquity McEwen, Boss Nowels and the young man who is reading law with M. F. Chilcote, Esq., were there for the evident purpose of performing Southern pranks in a Northern community, by intimidating the meeting and speaker. But after reviewing the resolute Republicans of Union tp., present, they concluded that "discretion was the better part of valor" and wisely refrained from disturbing the meeting.

As to the extended address, Mr. Austin did not speak at all, as can be proven by all present at the meeting, and as to the Southern pranks in a Northern community by intimidating the meeting and speaker, is concerned; I with others went there to hear Mr. Thompson's line of argument, (as he was announced to speak) and we did not by word or action act in a manner that would call for the article in the Republican. We attended strictly to business, which can be substantiated by Mess John E. Alter, A. M. Munden, Frank Gant, Jacob R. Wilcox, Stephen T. Comer, Clark McColl, Benjamin McColl, and by all others present: And as to the discretion part, I may say that I have been raised and grown up with these people, and have taught many who were there in the schools of the township, and have never d. d. aught in that community that would require me to use discretion on such occasions, and I can only account for the article in the Republican on the theory that it is the production of a jealous and envious mind, who thinks that nor but him and those who chose to think as he does, have any rights in the School House. It is the outcry of that spirit of selfishness and insanity which prompted Guitteau to assassinate President Garfield, and the author who ever he may be, if a sane person, knows that nearly the entire article is false and was written for political effect, and I wish to be understood when I brand the author, (whoever he may be) as a liar and one unworthy the confidence of a peace loving community.
