GRAHAM GEMS.—One pint sweet milk, stir in Graham flour until the batter is a little thicker than for griddle cakes; add salt, one teaspoonful of sugar and one egg well beaten; use cast-iron gem pans, grease and make very hot before the batter is put in; bake immediately after filling; never use soda or yeast; be sure to have the gem pans hot when filled and a smooth, not thick, batter, and a hot oven, and success is certain. Try these gems for breakfast, you who have never made or eaten them, if you wish to have something very nice and wholesome on your breakfast table, and, my word for it, you will never do without them again; eat warm with butter. These gems with nice sweet butter, a good cup of coffee or tea, and sauce of some kind, or jelly, are all that is necessary for a good breakfast; so we think at our house.
