The condition of general trade is quite as favorable as that mentioned at any previous date within seven weeks past. The steadiness and strength manifested by the demand for dry goods and for woolen fabrics have encouraged many dealers at Eastern distributing centers to look for steadiness in the movement. It may be added that the gain in the demand for pig iron tends in some degree to inspire the confidence manifested in various quarters that the turn in the tide has at last taken place, and that the increase in the consumption of staple commodities may present a steady growth. It is a welcome sign that no boom is discernible in any direction. Three maiden sisters named Cash, of mature years, reside on a street that is being repaired and graded. They objected to any work being done in front of their premises, as they had no voice in ordering the improvement. This afternoon, while the street boss and his laborers were at work in front of the Cash residence, the three maiden sisters came out and assaulted the workmen with rocks, putting over a dozen brawny men to flight. The City Marshal and two policemen then essayed to protect the men while they returned to work, but the irate sisters were equal to the emergency, for this time they sallied forth with two old pistols and a garden hoe. The chivalric Marshal and his aids hastily retreated before the foe, and again the workmen were severely pelted with rocks, and fled. INDIANA STATE NEWS.

—The opening of the new Grand Opera House, at Madison, is set for Oct. 19.

Capt. John Boyd, of Milroy, is the oldest person in Rush County. He will be 100 years old next February.

—S. Bash & Co.'s warehouse, at Fort Wayne, was burned with its contents last week, the loss reaching $23,000.

—Thomas Burke, an inmate of the Indiana State Insane Asylum at Indianapolis, was fatally beaten by E. Stroble, a fellow patient.

—Irvin Preston, a farmer living about a mile and a half northeast of Terre Haute, in a fit of anger, ran a pitchfork through his horse's heart. The horse died without a struggle.

—Two cows met on the Hanover pike below Madison and pitched into each other, when they succeeded in getting their horns so firmly locked that it became necessary to saw the ends off one of the cow's horns to free them.

—At Liberty, while swinging in a hammock, Nellie, daughter of A. E. Johnson, Cashier of the Union County National Bank, was thrown to the ground and seriously injured besides breaking an arm and dislocating her shoulder.

—The owners of the old Erie Canal brought suit at Lafayette against the Louisville, New Albany and Chicago Road for $10,000 damages for using the water of the canal since 1876, which the owners think is worth 9 cents per 1,000 gallons.

—William Cherry, a well-to-do farmer living three miles west of Tipton, was plowing in his field the other day when he suddenly became blind. He has never had any trouble with his eyes before. It is supposed he is suffering with paralysis of the optic nerve. He is about fifty years of age.

—Finding her husband in a buggy with a strange woman at Lafayette, Mrs. R. W. Stewart beat her rival and tore her hair in a furious manner, the woman taking flight to escape further punishment. Mrs. Stewart then seated herself beside her spouse, and the horse's head was directed homeward.

—At a meeting of the McKee Rifles, at Terre Haute, it was decided to disband immediately, the action of the Adjutant General leaving them no privileges as a military organization. C. E. Fuller, Jr., S. C. McKee and J. H. O'Boyle were appointed a committee to settle up the company's affairs. The company was organized June 16, 1879, Ed Friend being the first commander.

—Workmen in a sandpit on the edge of Terre Haute recently found the skeletons of three human beings huddled together about three feet from the surface. One was the skeleton of a large man, another of a woman, and a third of a girl about 14 years of age. The skull of the man is crushed, and the positions of the skeletons show that they had been rudely thrown into the shallow grave.

—The last man to see the great snake at Pierreville, this State, modestly says that he does not think it was more than ten inches in diameter. In view of the fact that serpents even thirty feet long are seldom more than five or six inches in diameter, we think the Indiana man is certainly right in declaring that the Hoosier reptile is not more than twice that size. What this State has to fear about this thing is that Indiana whisky will fall into disfavor.—Indianapolis Journal.

—A party of hunters discovered the remains of a man in the woods about two miles south of Logansport a few days ago. The hogs had almost completely stripped the bones of flesh. There was a bullet-hole in the skull, and a pistol found close by led to the conclusion that the unfortunate had suicided. From the clothing the remains were identified as those of Horace L. Baker, a well-known railroad contractor, whose mysterious disappearance two months ago created considerable excitement and speculation. Baker was well known in railroad circles, and formerly lived at Terre Haute.

—An interesting story is told of the runaway Davies County trustees. While en route they stopped at Grimsey station, Canada, to pass another train, and while Mr. Grimsey and Clark were standing on the platform of the depot a countryman jumped off the back end of the train and yelled out: "By G—, here is Grimsey!" and Mr. Grimsey thought his name was called instead of the station, and the two made a sudden dash down a side street, endeavoring to escape. But upon looking at the sign they saw that he meant Grimsey station, consequently they boarded the train for their destination.

—Claude G. Debruler, city editor of the Evansville Courier, died in that city, recently, after a short illness. Mr. Debruler was formerly connected with the Cincinnati Evening Chronicle, and made an excellent reputation as a journalist. He removed to Evansville in 1875 and bought an interest in the Journal of that city, and was editor-in-chief until last year, when he closed out his interest and became city editor of the Courier. Mr. Debruler, among his brethren of the profession, was highly esteemed, and his death in the prime of life (at the age of 38) will be sincerely mourned. He leaves a wife and two children.
