

Democratic Sentinel

FRIDAY DECEMBER 25, 1885.

"Soldier" is very indignant at our reference to the "offensive partisan" production in the Republican last week, and says:

"He (McEwen) attempts to say that Democrats "aid the fighting" and Republicans "the voting" during the rebellion."

Yes, sir; and we pointed to the fact that when the battle was on the Republicans rolled up their majorities by the tens of thousands, at the ballot box; when the battle was off, and the boys in blue returned to their families and their homes republican majorities ceased. The cause is too plain to admit of argument.

The partisan bias of a "Soldier" prompts him to say:

" * * * not a Democratic paper, not a Democratic politician, or any Democrat of note, could be found in Indiana, or any other State, during those terrible times, willing to allow the soldiers standing in the front to cast a ballot."

Ah, well, dear "Soldier", every Democratic paper, every Democratic politician, and every Democrat of note, was in favor of permitting the soldiers to return to their respective homes to vote, and thus have the opportunity to cast a free and untrammelled ballot.

In the following statement a "Soldier" is decidedly unfortunate in his effort to promote his partisan views:

"We (Union Soldiers) cannot forget that for four years we were disfranchised by Democratic votes, placed on a footing with condemned criminals in our penitentiaries."

When it is remembered that during the period referred to in the extract the radical party was overwhelmingly in the ascendancy in the State Legislatures and in Congress—Democratic voters wearing the blue at the front—and serves to show the animus of the writer to be that of a bigoted, dishonest partisan. H. so far presumes upon the ignorance of his readers as to offer the insult to their common sense—a silly lie which a moment's reflection will serve to explode. The extreme absurdity and falsity of the extract, so far as its application to the Democracy is concerned, has simply aroused the indignation of the Republican readers against the kid for being such a "damphool" as to reflect upon their intelligence in the publication of such stuff. The kid, however can plead justification on the ground that he didn't know any better. As a personal friend, we advise you to plead general stupidity, George. Your readers will entertain no other.

"Not a word in my communication * * * made any allusion whatever to, or claim for myself.—Soldier,"

Very true. You only referred in a very unsoldierlike manner to the official report of a scholar, a gentleman of intelligence, a brave and terribly crippled soldier,—(The N. Y. Tribune, one of your political text-books, alludes to him as a piece of a man—his detached pieces were left on the battle-fields). You speak of him in terms unbecoming a comrade. Like a soldier, Gen. Black attaches his name to his report—giving it the stamp of responsibility—and will produce the necessary letters and documents to make good the statements you denounced as false. Unlike a soldier you skulk behind an assumed name. We do not know that you are a soldier. In fact we have the word only of yourself and our dear bosom friend of the Republican. The characteristics of a true soldier—courage, no skulking behind an assumed name; broad and liberal in opinion; honest and truthful in dealing with the sentiments and actions of comrades and others. Your uncleaned for rude and violent attack upon Gen. Black's report display the characteristics of a narrow-minded partisan.

If "the Republican had turned the matter off with a fool-born reference to the domestic matters of the editor of the Sentinel,"—

Why, emanating from a "damphool" it would naturally be a positive and emphatic "fool-born reference," of course.

The Plymouth, Ind., correspondent of the Indianapolis Sentinel thus alludes to the remarks of Judge Turpie before the bar meeting at Indianapolis, concerning Mr. Hendricks:

In all my reading and listening I have never known a more perfect production in thought and language than Judge Turpie's address at the bar meeting in memory of Mr.

Hendricks. The scholar, the lawyer, the orator, the critic, the friend, appear in absolute perfection; and I doubt if there is another mind in the state that could equal it. It must be read more than once to realize how perfect a production it really is. Well, life, with all its cares, is worth living, to leave such a view when it ends as that which follows the ending of Mr. Hendricks'.

Human history hardly has a more complete illustration of the power, the wealth, the happy results there is in the universal use of pleasant words, the exhibition of an even temper, and a high sense of personal honor. Dollars and cents may not come in profusion, but all the money in the world, and all the learning, and all the official power, can not be so invested as to bring to any man, however intellectual he may be, what honesty of purpose, kindness of disposition, pleasant speech and studious habits brought to Mr. Hendricks. With no record as a professor, an author, a military hero or discoverer, or even a ruler, his fame was international, and on his death the ovations surpassed those given to the so-called greatest among men and they were from the hearts of all the people, and not from pride, customs or conventionality or notoriety. They were the ultimate results of kind words and acts' honest effort and enduring industry in the man himself.

The following is a reminiscence from a sketch of the late Gen. Toombs, of Southern fame:

In a speech in the Senate on January 7, 1861, Mr. Toombs, speaking of the conditions the people of the South would accept "for the sake of peace, permanent peace" said: "I am willing to take the proposition of Senators Crittenden as it was understood in committee, putting the North and South on the same ground, prohibiting slavery on one side, acknowledging slavery and protecting it on the other, and applying that to all future acquisitions, so that the whole continent to the north pole shall be settled under the one rule and to the south pole under the other."

The Republican party of the North were extremely reluctant at that time to accede to any compromise. The following letter, written by Senator Z. Chandler, of Michigan, to Governor Austin B. A. expresses the views of the Republican managers:

"Governor Ringham and myself telegraphed to you on Saturday at the request of Massachusetts and New York, to send delegates to the Peace Compromise Congress. They admit that we were right and they were wrong; that no Republican State should have sent delegates; but they are here and can't get away. Ohio, Indiana and Rhode-Island are caving in, and there is some danger of Illinois; and now they beg us, for God's sake, to come to their rescue and save the Republican party from rupture. I hope you will send stiff-backed men, or none. The whole thing was gotten up against my judgment and advice, and will end in smoke. Still I hope, as a matter of courtesy to some of our erring brethren, that you will send the delegates. Some of the manufacturing States think that a fight would be awful.

Without a little blood-letting this Union will not, in my estimation, be worth a curse."

Calcimining.

Calcimining is a very superior and elegant way of finishing a ceiling or wall. It is quite as easily done as the more common custom of whitewashing. Any housewife who can handle a whitewash-brush (the more skillfully the better) can perform the act quite as well as the best professional. The material used is to be had at the drug-stores, and is called "calcimine" (kaolin prepared by the French method). For a ceiling, say fourteen feet by twenty-two two pounds are sufficient, and it will cost twenty cents, and it is prepared for use in the following manner: place your calcimine in a vessel of suitable size, then scald it with sufficient water to make it the consistency of hot mush; let it partly cool; then thin down with skimmed milk to the proper consistency for use. "Skimmed milk" is best, as the fatty or butter part of new milk would spoil the mixture. Observed these directions, and the material will be ready for use. Apply with whitewash-brush. This mixture will work smoothly, and not drag under the brush, as most others mixtures for whitewash. It can be colored to suit the taste of those using it, or bought of different shades of color.

Tickets, at excursion rates, will be sold at all stations along the line of the L. N. A. & C. RR. December 31, 1885, and January 1, 1886, good to and inclusive of January 2, 1886.
