The Special Session.

The County Commissioners met in special session last Tuesday, for the purpose of considering certain petitions for new bridges in various parts of the county.

The trustees of the town of Remington are directed to proceed, at an early day, to have constructed over Carpenter's Creek, on Buel street in that town, an iron bridge, the superstructure of which is to be built by the Wrought Iron Bridge Co., of Canton, Ohio, at a cost of $585; and of this sum the county is to pay $475, and the town of Remington the balance.

Another iron bridge is to be built over Carpenter's Creek, on the line between Remington and Carpenter township, near the house of Wm L. Rich. The Canton company above mentioned, is to build both superstructure and substructure. The first is to cost $499, and of this the county is to pay $425 and the town of Remington $37.50 and Carpenter township the same sum. The cost of the substructure $375 is to be paid by the county. The bridge is to be completed by Nov. 1st, 1886, and Wm L. Rich is superintendent.

The same company was also given the contract for a bridge over Alter's creek, in the west part of Jordan township, between sections 19 and 30. The superstructure is to cost $499, of which Jordan township pays $75 and the county the remainder. The substructure is to cost $350, all paid for by the county. The bridge is to be completed by Nov. 1st and Frank Welsh is to superintend its erection.

No general business was transacted except the disposal of a few miscellaneous claims.

Baron Fava Surprised.

A gentleman who attended the president's dinner to the diplomatic corps, on Thursday last, tells me an amusing story about introductions in the east room on that cheerful occasion. Col. Wilson, who acted as the official introducer, knew many of the legation people but not all of them, and in several cases he was obliged to ask the names of persons approaching the president and Miss Cleveland before presenting them. Soon after the first introductions had been made, a young man with a foreign look, banged hair, carefully waxed mustache, and eye-glasses came tripping along. "What country?" asked Col. Wilson, leaning forward and expecting to listen to foreign tones. "Albany," was the response. "And name?" continued the colonel. "Mr. Cassidy," was the response, in very plain English. The Colonel laughed a little laugh and presented "Mr. Cassidy, of Albany, N. Y." The colonel turned to the next comer and pursued the same formula. A swarthy gentleman with a superbly dressed woman on his arm responded to the first inquiry, "Italy," and to the next, "The Baron Fava." Not stopping to reflect, Col. Wilson announced, "The Baron and Baroness Fava, of Italy." Minister Soteldo, of Venezuela, who stood at the colonel's elbow, pulled him by the sleeve in great tribulation "My dear colonel," he ejaculated, "you have made a great mistake. It is not the Baroness Fava. Est is anozzer ladde." But it was too late, and the pair were passed along the entire receiving line as the Baron and Baroness Fava.—Rochester Union.

It is said that Mrs. G. L. Lorillard intends to follow the example of the Duchess Montrose in England and keep a racing-stable. She has permitted her trainer to make engagements for her horses under the name of "The Locusts Stables."

He Laughs Best Who Laughs Last.

Aimee, the vivacious, tells of an experience she had in Lumberton, Texas, with a real cowboy. This fellow opened the entertainment by laughing very coarsely whenever the actress spoke. She managed to get through the scene, and appealed to the manager of the theater for protection. The little man said that as the cowboy seemed to be surrounding by admiring friends he thought it would not be wise to attempt his removal. Besides, the Texan theatrical code forbade interference with the audience after the admission money had been paid. Aimee is not easily abashed, and she decided on her course. When she went on again she got as near the rowdy as the limits of the stage would permit. He began his laughing, and his friends joined in. So did the actress. She stood still, and, pointing an expressive finger at him, laughed as though immensely amused. The cowboy's face changed and his laugh stopped. Aimee didn't. She held her sides and laughed and laughed at the man. He grew red in the face and looked uncomfortable. Still the actress laughed, and by this time the audience was roaring with her, all eyes turned on the unfortunate Texan. He couldn't stand it. Abashed and thoroughly cowed the cowboy rushed for the door, followed by a great shout, and was not seen again that evening. The play then went on smoothly.—New York Sun.

A Layman's Services.

Rev. Dr. S., who is a prominent divine in a city not far from New York, had been spending a few days on an island on the Maine coast, and, intending to depart on a certain morning, he started for the boat in company with a friend. A porter followed with the doctor's valise. Arriving at the wharf, they found that, to take advantage of the wind or tide, the boat had gone before the advertised time.

Not aware of the clerical character of the company, the porter swore several shocking oaths in quick succession.

"What do you think of that, doctor?" asked his friend.

"Well," said the doctor, slowly and impressively, "there are times when the services of a layman are indispensable."—Boston Record.

Good Words.

The grandest of all empires is to rule one's self. There are few grand who are not also calm. If you hear that others have spoken ill of you, consider if you have not done the same about many people. How much better to heal an injury than to avenge it! Guard vigorously that social tie which binds man to man, and establishes the rights common to the human race. Life is a pilgrimage, a warfare, and those who climb up and down steep paths and go through dangerous enterprises, are the brave men and the leaders in camp. To rest easily at the cost of others' labors is to be a coward, safe because despised.
