

TRAFFIC IN NAMES.

The Curious Profession of a New Yorker.

A pleasant, gray-bearded gentleman sat in a Sixth avenue elevated train, talking to a younger man. A reference to the occupation of the older man made him say:

"Mine is an unusual business. See here."

He pulled out a card. "His name had been Henry Jackson, the card would have read:

HENRY JACKSON,

DEALER IN NAMES.

"Won't you explain?" said the younger man.

"I buy and sell the addresses of people in all parts of the United States and Canada. There are hundreds of business men who reach their customers by circulars as well as by advertising in the newspapers. Thus a book publisher gets out a new book which he wants to sell through agents. He is anxious to learn the names and addresses of the men and women in the United States who sell subscription books. He also wants the names of those who sell other goods in the same way, because they are very likely to drop the other article for the sake of the new book. Then he wants the addresses of the people who have never acted as agents, but who want to try it to see what they can do. He advertises for agents in a variety of papers, and at a pretty heavy expense. It costs him several cents for every letter of inquiry about his book that he receives. To that letter of inquiry he sends his elaborate circular. I come to the relief of the publisher by selling him a very large number of agents' addresses at a small part of the cost of getting them by advertising."

"How do you get them?"

"You see every publisher has a list of agents whom he has employed at one time and another. Nearly every one will sell me a copy of his list for a consideration. The combined copies make a formidable pile of manuscript. Then there are the novelty men who accumulate large lists of names of agents. Agents from one line of special names Invalids from another."

"Not necessarily. Every community has a lot of people who are always buying medicine. They are the most valuable lot an advertiser can reach. The consumption remedy circular gives them a hacking cough and a hectic flush. The blood purifier circular flushes them with eczema. So it goes through the list of chronic and acute ills that flesh is heir to. They will buy anything from beer and bark to a steam atomizer to doctor a sprained foot. All these people at one time or another write to some advertising doctor or vender of the elixir of life. I buy the names from the advertiser, classify them according to the number of times the names have been used by medical men and the last diseases that afflicted the writers, and sell them over and over again. Sometimes I sell the original letters outright. The careful advertiser sometimes varies the character of the circulars sent according to the characteristics of the letter writer, even writing a personal letter in some cases."

"What other classes have you?"

"Two general classes. One for the sharpers and one for the general advertiser. The latter class is cosmopolitan. It includes all others, really, but it is made up mostly of farmers."

"What prices do these names bring?"

"I have got as high as $25 a thousand for names for sharpers' use. Good lists of habitual invalids are worth all the way from $10 to $20 a thousand. Agents are so easily obtained that $10 is a big price; from $3 to $5 is ordinary. General-use lists, copied from the letters, bring from $3 to $5 where they have not been mailed to more than twice. When mailed to oftener than that, and where a year or two old, they get down to a dollar a thousand."

"Are many in this business of yours?"

"Not continuously. They drop in, make a good thing, and straightway begin mailing circulars on their own account. The number of actual addresses handled by me in one year has never exceeded 1,000,000, but it has crowded that figure closely."—New York Sun.

VEAL LOAF.—Three pounds of lean, raw veal, and one-half pound of salt pork, chopped fine. If you have an accommodating butcher he will chop it free of charge, but it is best to select the meat yourself and see it weighed, for it should not contain any gristle or stringy pieces. It must be chopped very fine, then mix thoroughly with it six small crackers rolled, two eggs, a piece of butter nearly the size of an egg, a teaspoon of pepper, one small tablespoon of salt, a little sage or any other herb you may prefer to use for flavor. Pack tightly in a deep, square tin, cover with bits of butter, sprinkle cracker crumbs on the top and bake slowly for two hours. When cold slice it thinly. It is very nice for lunch or supper.

Taking time by the Forelock.

"Oh, mamma, my doll has got an awful cold," said little Mattie, the other day, "and I must have some whisky to give it."

"Who told you whisky was good for a cold?" asked her mother.

"That's what papa says he takes it for."

"Oh, yes, he says that, but he hasn't got any cold. He just takes it for the cold he is going to have."

"Well, my doll's goin' to have an awful cold to-morrow!"

Miscellany of London Life.

Coleridge long ago recognized the existence of no fewer than sixty distinctly different stenches at Cologne, and it was perhaps the multiplicity of malodorous emanations in the city of the Dom that incited the original Jean Marie Farina to devise the delicious perfume which bears his name. London, however, is a city which far surpasses Cologne, if not in the number, at least in the intensity and the noxiousness to health of its evil smells. We have the smoke always with us, to begin with, which, as London continues to grow, and sea-coal is burnt in open fire-places, most stupidly constructed, must necessarily increase in volume and in poisonous attributes every year. We have still, to judge from its color, a river which is terribly polluted, and in which, below bridge, few fish can live; and where there is pollution of water unpleasant odors must necessarily follow. The main drainage is, no doubt, a magnificent engineering work, but our house drainage is still lamentably imperfect, and our dust bins are so many hot-beds of disease, the perils of which are aggravated by the tardiness of dust contractors, the extortions of dustmen, and the apparently incorrigible laziness of servants. Our greatness as a commercial and manufacturing metropolis demands that we should carry on within our borders such industries as the boiling and burning of bones, the making of glue, size, white lead, leather, varnish, tallow and chemical manures; and it would be interesting to ascertain how many millions of feet of carburetted hydrogen and carbonic acid gas there are liberated every year from the furnace of our gas-works and the "fermenting squares" of our breweries. There is not a railway station in London that is not a focus of more or less pestilential smell. There is not a mews behind an aristocratic square or street that is not a hot-house of unhealthy odors.—London Times.
