POOR VS. FAT HORSES.—An extremely poor horse is usually a miserable one, but it is questionable whether it is any more so than an extremely fat one. Especially is this true where the animal is required to perform any amount of hard labor. While horses need good, wholesome food, it should not be all of the fat-producing kinds. The matter of feeding horses by the majority of horse owners never receives the attention it should. The supply of food and the different kinds should be varied as often as the amount and kinds of work is changed.
