IN HANCOCK'S DEFENSE.

A LETTER TO SENTOR INGALLS
FROM A MEMBER OF THE GENERAL'S STAFF.

Colonel Finley Anderson, who was on General Hancock's staff during the civil war, has addressed the following open letter to Senator Ingall's at Washington:

NEW YORK, March 12, 1888.
To Hon. John J. Ingalls, President pro tem., United States Senate
Washington, D. C.:

Sir—I have just received a copy, of the Congressional Record containing the official report of your recent speech, in which you not only insult the chief magistrate of the nation, but attempt to dishonor the memory of both Hancock and McClellan by naming each of them as having been an ally of the Confederacy. As a surviving member of General Hancock's staff, who shared with him the toils and the triumphs of the civil war, and as a friend whom he honored with his confidence and affection to the end of his blameless life, I can not bear in silence your brutal blow at my old commander. I must, therefore, as a soldier and a citizen, protest against any utterances that imply an impeachment of his loyalty to his country.

When the summer flowers bloom again on the graves of the heroic dead a quarter of a century will have passed since the battle of Gettysburg became the arena where the valor of the North and the South alike illustrated the greatness of the American people, and commanded the admiration of the world. The name of that peaceful Pennsylvania village baptized anew with their mingled blood was thus made immortal as the symbol of a national power equal to any on earth. The crowning victory of that combat has proved under Providence as clearly as though we had heard the voice of God say himself that those principles of liberty and law and fraternity and union in earnest devotion to which Hancock lived and died, are essential to the welfare of mankind. To this result the highest human achievement of this century Hancock contributed more than any other soldier in the field.

When Reynolds fell on the morning of the first day, it was Hancock whom Meade selected to take supreme command in front with power to choose the ground where the great battle of the war should be fought out. It was Hancock who planted his colors on Cemetery Ridge, where he rallied our disordered troops and formed the lines on those historic heights, beyond which the rising tide of rebellion never passed. It was Hancock by the counter-charge which saved the honor of the army on the evening of the second day. It was Hancock who repulsed that grand assault, with the most brilliant in the annals of the war, when the flower of the army of Northern Virginia withered and died before the fortitude of the Army of the Potomac in the final struggle on the third day. It was thus that Hancock won at Gettysburg a triple crown of glory.

Naturally enough, both houses of Congress adopted a joint resolution to the effect that, in addition to the thanks which had been voted to the officers and soldiers of the Army of the Potomac, "For the skill and heroic valor which at Gettysburg repulsed, defeated and drove back, broken and dispirited the veteran army of the rebellion, the gratitude of the American people and the thanks of their representatives in Congress are likewise due, and are hereby tendered to Maj. Gen. W. S. Hancock for his meritorious and conspicuous share in that great and decisive victory."

In view of Hancock's constant and conspicuous service to his country for more than forty years sealed as that service was by his own blood, and in view of his proverbial purity of character, it is amazing how any man could rise in the Senate chamber to defame his memory. But having had the audacity to do so, the least you can do in reparation of this cruel wrong alike to Hancock's memory and the patriotic sentiment of the country is to rise again in the Senate chamber and make a full retraction and apology.

Respectfully yours,
[Signed] FINLEY ANDERSON.

The North Topeka Courier has brought to the surface the interesting fact that John James Ingalls, of Kansas, ran for Governor of that State in 1864, on a platform containing the following 'planks':

That we hereby ratify the nomination of George B. McClellan of New Jersey, for President, and George H. Pendleton of Ohio, for Vice-President, and we pledge them our hearty support.

That we hereby ratify and adopt the Chicago platform, as understood and construed by Gen. George B. McClellan in his letter accepting the nomination of the Chicago convention for president of the United States.

This was the very same McClellan whom Ingalls stigmatized the other day as an "ally of the Confederacy." It seems that he was in better company in 1864 than he has been since. His present political companionship has effected his brutalization.

For years past, by its National conventions, the republican party has been pledged to a revision of the tariff in the interest of the people. The next convention will renew the pledge.

Blaine is willing to reform the tariff to the extent of a "free chaw."

Beatty's Organs and Pianos

HON. DANIEL F. BEATTY, the great Organ and Piano manufacturer, is building and shipping more Organs and Pianos than ever. In 1870 Mr. Beatty left home a penniless plow boy, and by his indomitable will he has worked his way up so as to sell so far, nearly 100,000 of Beatty's Organs and Pianos since 1870. Nothing seems to dishearten him; obstacles laid in his way, that would have wrecked any ordinary man forever, he turns to an advertisement and comes out of it brighter than ever. His instruments, as is well known, are very popular and are to be found in all parts of the world. We are informed that during the next ten years he intends to sell 200,000 more of his make, that means a business of $20,000,000 if we average them at $100 each. It is already the largest business of the kind in existence. Send to Daniel F. Beatty, Washington, New Jersey, for Catalogue.

It is said Ingalls is preparing a letter emphatically declining the Republican nomination for the Presidency.

Mighty Near Getting the Big Head

Harrisburg Sunday Telegram:

A clear, shrewd philosophic observer is Ex-Governor Curtin. Passing through Harrisburg during the week, on his way to Washington, he chatted pleasantly with the writer. He has a strong antipathy to what he amply terms the "big head." Speaking of this he said:

"It is not confined to the departments at Washington, where so many small men rattle around in big positions, but extends abroad among our representatives. Pendleton has it—he always looks up at the ceiling when you talk to him. And Bancroft. He was minister to Germany and he got it, too. But I suppose there is something about a foreign court that gives it to them. When I was in Russia I used to be driven out with the nobility occasionally, with their splendid equipages and outriders and soldiers, and when somebody would shout, 'Make way for the American Minister,' I came mighty near getting the big head myself."

The great "war governor" carries his age bravely, looking very hearty this winter, and he has lost none of his geniality with the passage of the years that have made his hair white as the driven snow.

"Not one of the evils which it was foretold, would follow Democratic success, has resulted from it; nothing whatever of the mischief which it was feared would be a sequence of Mr. Cleveland's election, has appeared. His administration has been singularly free from all sorts of political or official scandals; it has been so conservative as to command the respect of the country, and instead of being the cause of mercantile depression, as it was said it would be, it has been the apparent cause of mercantile prosperity.—Phil's Telegram, Republican.
