CARNEGIE'S FEMALE SLAVES.

A STORY FOR MRS. J. ELLEF FOSTER.

Half-Naked Women Tolling at the Protected Furnaces of Pennsylvania—Imported Under Contract to Supplant American Laborers—Harrowing Sights.

[Chas. E. Wheeler in Toledo Bee]

Is it at all necessary to go to England to find women working at heavy labor, such as forging, etc.?

Six years ago I walked a distance of six miles in one of the most beautiful districts of America. Had the artist making the electro-plates at republican headquarters been with me he would have hesitated before sending out such plates as did service in last evening's Blade.

This was what he would have seen: Women working at furnaces who to all appearances were unsexed. They were Hungarians working along side of their husbands and countrymen, and lost to every idea of propriety or rudest sensitiveness. They were clothed with a short kilt and a pair of boots, and so far as the eye could judge, 'hat was all. From waist up they were as naked as the cold truth. In all the habits of daily life, with men they were as men.

This charming little picture our artist would have beheld it as I beheld it, in western Pennsylvania, about sixty miles south of Pittsburgh, between Scottdale and Mt. Pleasant. The furnaces were coke ovens; the workmen contract laborers who had crowded out Americans. The owners of the furnaces are Frick & Co., protectionists all, who can weep profusely at the threatening dangers to American workingmen in a slight reduction of the tariff.

Perhaps to make the picture complete the artist would wish to present the portraits of the owners. After Mr. Frick's portrait, whose? If the galleries of Pittsburgh have not his photograph Mr. Blaine has. Frick & Co. means Mr. Frick and Andrew Carnegie. Ask the first man you meet from the smoky city that was, if this be not a fact.

[E. C. Ashley, in Toledo Bee.]

I am glad that Mr. Wheeler has given in last night's Bee the facts he privately related some time ago. The picture is a refreshing one for those who talk about labor getting the benefit of protection. Women nearly naked working beside men nearly brutalized in the scorching furnaces of Andrew Carnegie, while that gentleman is riding with the leader of the republican party to Cluny castle.

The fact is that "protection" not only lowers, but greatly lowers, the rate of wages. If not, how comes it that wages in the non "protected" occupations, such as the building trades and railroading, are so much higher than wages in iron making and mining? Since 1880 there has been a general rise in wages in the non-protected occupations of about 15 per cent., but in the "protected" occupations there has been a general fall, as John Jarrett himself admits, of 20 per cent. The truth is that the high tariff puts the men in the power of the masters. The masters can and do frequently go through with this little process. First they manufacture a heavy surplus, then, all gung that the market is weak, they unite in de laring that the wages must be reduced. The men probably strike. Then, as production ceases, prices go up and the manufacturers make more money than ever, inasmuch as the mountain-high tariff—more than twice as high as that of any other country except Brazil—does not allow the competition of foreign goods. In two or three months the men get starved out and go back to work at reduced wages, and stay until another cut is de rmined upon. The manufacturers would not be so ready to shut down were it not for the high tariff which secures them the market. I imagine how Carnegie must roll around and laugh at the idea that a high tariff makes him pay higher wages.

Now, Mr. Editor, I propose to offer you a companion picture of Mr. Wheeler's and I challenge republican denial. While the manufacturers have been reducing the wages of "protected" labor within the last twenty years until the general level is below that of the awful "free trade" year of 1860, the manufacturers have been gathering in the money of the people of the United States as follows:

Pig iron, average annual production, 4,500,000 tons; in twenty years, 92,000,000 tons. Average extra price paid by the people because competition was restricted to Pennsylvania is at least $10 per ton; total tribute of people to Pennsylvania, $900,000,000.

There is not a clo m made, a railroad built, a house erected that does not cost from 15 to 30 per cent more on account of the tariff. If our republican friends want another picture I can supply it:

Steel rails production in twenty years in U S in tons, about 15,000,000
Extra price paid first by railroads and next by their shippers will average, per ton $20

Total tribute to steel rail makers $300,000,000

The mass of the republican party is no doubt honest in its belief that somehow the tariff "fosters" industries without anybody paying for the fostering. But those who get the benefit of the unjust taxation of their fellow citizens are not honest in the reasons they give for "protection"

England Dreads Our Competition

N.Y. Star Interview with Chauncey M. Depew: Chauncey M. Depew was at his desk in the Grand Central Depot before the copper-hued gentleman who countersigns the passes had turned up. Until noon he was kept busy wringing the hands of hundreds of friends who dropped in to congratulate him upon his safe return to his native heath. Mr. Depew was in one of his jolliest moods, and joked and talked politics with all his whilom vivacity.

"Did you find much interest manifested abroad in the Presidential campaign?"

"Not a particle on the continent, but prodigious in England. There it is everywhere discussed. You can not go into a store in London or any large city where, if you are known or suspected to be an American, they will not ask you all about it. The general opinion over there is that all the Democrats are free traders in the English sense, and they cannot understand what a tariff reformer is.

"I met an Englishman, a nobleman of high education, who had traveled all around the world and knew America thoroughly. He favored the election of General Harrison.

"This surprised me, as Mr. Harrison is almost unknown in England. I asked the reason for his preference. He said that such a measure of tariff reduction as is proposed by the Democratic party would be the severest blow ever struck at English manufacturing and commercial supremacy.

He said that he was convinced from what he had seen himself, and from what he had been told by eminent English manufacturers, that the American people with free raw material and their marvelous faculty for adapting machinery to the most complicated and delicate manufactures would soon control the markets of the world.

"Under the present system the English manufacturer has it all his own way, and he anticipates with dread the day when he will have to meet his American cousin on equal terms in the markets of the world."

Henry Clay—"No one, in the commencement of the protective policy, ever supposed that it was to be perpetual."

Hon. James N. Moore, of Lake county, will address the people of Barkley and adjoining townships, at Sandridge school house, Saturday, October 13th, on the issues of the day. Turn out and hear him.

John Goetz, of Newton township, shipped a fine lot of turkeys to Chicago, Tuesday.

Porter, et al., have something to say about 'home markets' created by monopolies, but say nothing about the fact that they pay no more than established rates for products which they dispose of at the "company store" to employees at big profits.

Porter won't discuss with Turpie; Hovey won't discuss with Matson, nor Blaine with Carlisle.
