SOLVED THE MYSTERY.

While willing to admit that agnosticism and doubt have taken a strong hold upon humanity many people lose sight of the fact that the effect of this absence of belief is, to a certain extent, offset by a class who believe far more than is generally thought necessary for the salvation of the soul.—Spiritualists and believers in the principles of theism may explain many things to their own satisfaction, but there are now and then occurrences which must forever remain unsolved mysteries. A case in point is the recent remarkable experience of Mrs. Charles Collin. Soon after her husband's death she became seriously ill and apparently died. Twelve hours after her supposed death she showed signs of animation and in two hours more was reclining on a sofa conversing with friends.

She related all she had seen and heard in such a plain and concise way no one could doubt the reality of her vision or dream. She said her soul left her body during her comatose condition and went straight to heaven. She declared she saw the Lord, and the marvelous beauty and magnificence of his surroundings were wonderful to be expressed in words. "All that I saw," said Mrs. Collins, "I can never describe in this life, but I know that I was dead and went to heaven, and my eyes beheld its glories. I can affirm that I had personal experiences after the change called death, but which is not death at all; instead of that it is another and perfect existence in joy and glory. Oh, why did you not let me alone? I do not care to stay here now, knowing what unspeakable glories are there." Mrs. Collins told her story calmly and earnestly, honestly lamenting her return to earth. She firmly believes it was neither a dream nor a vision, but that her soul was transported. She is a believer in modern "spiritualism," and no motive for a deception could be discovered.

A parallel, but if anything more wonderful, case is the trance of the Rev. William Tennent. Almost two centuries have gone since it occurred at New Brunswick, N. J. After a regular course of theology, and being in his 25th year, he was preparing for his ordination. His close application to study had affected his health so much his friends became anxious as to the result. At the same time his spirits were very low and he began to entertain doubts as to his final happiness.

One morning as he was conversing with his brother in Latin he fainted and seemed to die. After the usual time his funeral was announced. His physician who was much attached to him, had gone to a distant city for a short time, but returning just before the hour for the funeral refused to believe his friend was dead. Upon being told that one of the attendants had observed a slight tremor of the flesh, he investigated the fact, although there seemed to be no hope of reviving what seemed to be a cold and inanimate corpse. But he determined to make a trial. He first held his hand in warm water to make it as sensitive as possible and then felt under the arms and above the heart and affirmed that he noticed an unusual warmth, apparent to no one else. He had the body placed in a warm bed and ordered the postponement of the funeral.

The brother objected to this, saying it was absurd, as the eyes were sunken, the lips discolored, and the whole body cold and stiff; however, the doctor prevailed, and all known restoratives were applied to produce symptoms of returning life.

The third day arrived and no one entertained any hope except the doctor, who remained day and night. The funeral was again announced, but still he objected, and at last confined his request to one hour, then to a half, and finally to a quarter of an hour, when the brother came in the room and insisted earnestly that the funeral should proceed.

At this critical and important moment to the supposed corpse he opened his eyes, gave a terrible groan, and sank again into apparent death. This, of course, put an end to all idea of burying him and every effort was put forth to bring about a speedy resuscitation. In about an hour his eyes again opened and he emitted another groan, then all appearance of animation vanished. In another hour life returned with more power and complete restoration took place, to the great joy of his relatives and intimate friends and the astonishment of the many who had ridiculed the idea of "bringing the dead to life."

When his strength partially returned he was importuned to tell what he saw during his state of suspended animation.

"While I was conversing with my brother about my doubts and fears as to my future welfare," he said, "I found myself in an instant in another state of existence and under the guidance of a superior being who commanded me to follow him. I was wafted along I know not how, until I beheld at a distance an ineffable glory, and the impression which it made on my mind is impossible for me to communicate to any one on earth. I reflected on my happy change and then thought, 'blessed be God!' I am safe at last beyond all my trials and fears. I saw a great host of happy beings surrounding the inexpressible glory, in acts of adoration and joyous worship; I heard things unutterable. I heard songs and hallelujahs of praise and thanksgiving with unspeakable rapture. I felt joy unalloyed, and my soul was filled with the glory of the infinite. I then asked my escort to permit me to join the happy throng, but he said: 'You must return to earth again.' This seemed like a sword piercing my heart. In an instant I saw my brother standing before me disputing with the doctor. The three days during which I had appeared lifeless did not seem to me more than a few minutes. The idea of returning to earth gave me such a shock I fainted repeatedly. The ravishing songs and words of praise are not out of my ears a moment when awake."

Mr. Tennent had to begin his studies again as soon as his strength permitted him to do so, for he had nearly lost all recollection of his past life. He knew his friends and was able to converse, but as to his books he had forgotten their contents. As his strength increased his memory also returned, but for three years his sense of divine things continued so great and everything else appeared so completely vain to him that nothing which did not relate to heaven and its glories could command his serious attention. He seemed as one raised from the dead, and was continually in a condition of mental ecstasy. But in time he recovered and again prepared himself for ordination. He lived many years after and was a faithful minister to the last. He died at Freehold, N. J., aged 72 years.

This very extraordinary event is abundantly confirmed by the best authority. As it happened long before the days of spiritualism nothing of that kind could be connected with it and the integrity of the man was unquestionable.

THE DEESTRICT SCHOOL.

You who are young as well as you who are old are cordially invited to be present at the Opera House, on Thursday evening, March 28th, at 7:30 o'clock, to witness one of the most interesting, as well as the most laughable, entertainments given in this city, in the shape of an old-fashioned Deestricht School. The school master, Mr. Lickhingood, has been hired for the term; and Joe Saltpepper, Jeb Jones, Charles Dickens Vanderbilt, and a host of other familiar chaps are going to school to earn, also quite a large number of lasses. Many of Rensselaer's prominent citizens will be in this school to learn. Don't fail to be present.

FROM WHEATFIELD.

Business improving. Farmers are beginning to sow oats.

Wheat and rye look well. Geo. Stembel has set his presses to work and will continue handling hay.

Mrs. E. E. Bennett has returned from her visit with friends in Illinois.

The youngest son of Benjamin Thornton is down with lung fever. So also is Ray, oldest son of J. A. Hollett.

The C. G. L. C. brakeman, who has been ill at Welsh's hotel, was moved to his home in Logansport last Monday.

Willie, son of John Graves, while playing on a wagon last Monday evening fell and received injuries which may prove fatal.

ANON.

Would you laugh, would you split your sides, would you stimulate your liver, would you sharpen your appetite—attend the "Old Deestricht School."

The Topeka, Kansas, Capital-City has this to say of a former Jasper county boy:

Governor Humphrey yesterday appointed Senator Francis C. Price of Ashland to be judge of the new Thirty-first district, comprising Meade, Clark and Comanche counties. The appointment is undoubtedly the best that could have been made and will be highly satisfactory to the people of the entire district. Senator Clark is probably the youngest man on the bench in Kansas never he less he will fill the position with dignity and ability. Two years ago he served in the house of representatives from Clark county and his services were so satisfactory that the people honored him with an election to the state senate. He made a splendid record during the session which has just closed and his friends believe that the same qualities which made him a good legislator will also make him a success on the bench. He is a remarkably fine orator and altogether one of the brightest young men in Kansas.

A hearty, side-splitting laugh is good for dyspepsia. Then go to the Old Deestricht School, at the Opera House.

Work's squirrel bill is now a law in Ind'a. It forbids the shooting of squirrels between December 20th and June 1st, under penalty of two dollars for each squirrel shot.

Let one, let all—go to the Old Deestricht School, at the Opera House, on Thursday evening, March 28.

Indiana Odd Fellows lodges are getting ready to celebrate the seventieth anniversary of the founding of that order in the United States. Occurs April 26th.
