

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM.

PRESIDENT HARRISON WONT INTERFERE WITH HOLD-OVERS.

Providing They Have Been Good Officers — Spoil-Seekers Receive a Rather Cool Reception — Persons High in Party Circles Alone Have the President's Ear.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 13. Considering that the limited passenger tickets issued by the railroads have all expired some days since, the crowd of strangers who still throng the streets of the city is something appalling to President Harrison and others who are to have a hand in the distribution of the spoils. The manner in which the Chief Executive bore up under the handshaking ordeal of the public was really admirable, but he has now closed his doors, except on stated occasions, to the sightseers, and is devoting his time to the dispensing of patronage, being at home only to Senators and Representatives and Chairmen of State Central Committees and members of the National Committee, and other statesmen of like rank. The first thing to be attended to, however, is a reorganization of the departments in Washington, including the new Lifesaving Service Commission. One of the early appointments, in all probability, will be that of Dudley Foulke, of Indiana, a strong and working Republican, but an earnest civil-service reformer, to be a member of the commission. This will place that bureau in working order, and the third member may be more leisurely chosen. Still it is well understood that the new administration is going slow in the matter of place-filling. The President has fully determined not to interfere with Democratic office-holders who hold term commissions except in rare cases. Moreover, the prospects now are that the Senate will be held in extraordinary session but a few days longer to confirm nominations for the chief department places, the Civil Service Commission, a few local and Federal judges, and one or two diplomatic posts, and that it will then adjourn to come together again, with the House, about the 20th of April. The President has not yet decided upon an extra session of Congress, but a number of the strongest men in the party have urged him to call one six or seven weeks hence. That member of his Cabinet on whom the President could be most likely to lean in a matter of this sort, on account of his experience in public life and familiarity with public questions, has recommended an extra session. Secretary Blaine believes no time should be lost in perfecting organization of the House, and in proceeding with tariff, Southern election, and other important legislation. In this the Secretary is supported by many prominent men, and the belief is now current, from some remarks the President has let fall, that he is of the same opinion.

The throngs who pack the main corridors of the State Department day after day are only surpassed by those at the White House. When the office-seekers become too numerous and importunate, Secretary Blaine has a clever way of disposing of their demands. He simply has the sightseers admitted. They crowd the petitioners out, and when persons of more or less influence are ejected in this gentlemanly manner the political Secretary experiences no trouble in clearing his room of the sightseers, and is then ready for work. Walker Blaine will be his father's assistant, and is said to inherit much of that gentleman's political ability. The new Cabinet officers are settling down to their duties. Wamamaker, about whom the most doubt was felt by the politicians, made a good impression by his courteous manners, which were combined with a business-like aptitude for the detail work of the department. After looking at several desirable residences, the Postmaster General has finally determined upon Secretary Whitney's pleasant house, 1731 I street, formerly the residence of the Frelinghuysens, and at one time the residence of Senator Don Cameron. Mr. Wamamaker secured Mr. Whitney's option to purchase the property. As improved by Mr. Whitney it is valued at $80,000. It is in such good condition that the Wamamakers have already moved in. Three members of the old Cabinet, Messrs. Bayard, Vilas, and Dickinson, are going to take a trip to Cuba in the course of a fortnight. They are likely to be joined by other gentlemen, who are now or will soon be able to take a vacation without any interference with their business.

The President's policy of pacification and unification has met with several serious obstacles. First, there is the rupture among Michigan men over the suggestion by Alger of H. M. Duffield for the position of Solicitor General, and although Palmer, who would have had Uncle Jerry Rusk's place in the Cabinet had it not been for Stockbridge and the left-handed compliment of General Alger, called upon the President, lunched with him, and came away feeling certain that he would be recognized in a marked way by the new administration. When, therefore, it was announced beyond the peradventure of a doubt that the political manager of Gen. Alger, Palmer's life-long enemy, Duffield, was to have the choice morsel awarded the Wolverine State, a party split occurred which even the long personal friendship between Harrison and Palmer is not apt to heal.

Still Michigan is nothing like as unhappy as New York. The trouble is that the rival politicians from that State are not disposed to meet half way the President's kindly spirit. After having solved the Cabinet difficulty Gen. Harrison desired above all things to bring both the Platt men and the Millerites into close relationship with his administration. In accordance with this desire he sent for both Platt and Miller and in a dignified, friendly way made overtures of peace and good-will, and hinted that it was his wish both should attach themselves to the administration in an official capacity, and, together with the Senators and Representatives from their State, control the vast patronage of New York. Mr. Platt stopped here on his way to Florida to hold a consultation with the President, upon the latter's request, and it was for a time believed that the breach in New York had been mended, and that Platt would take the Collectorship of New York, and that Warner Miller would become Assistant Secretary of the Treasury. This adjustment of affairs was received as the happiest stroke yet made in the President's policy of conciliation and harmony. Close friends of the administration were delighted with it, because, as they said, it would give both Platt and Miller a fair chance at the patronage, and make New York a Republican State. Unfortunately, like many another good scheme, it didn't work, and it is now understood that there is not a vacant office in the gift of the Government that Mr. Platt will take. He did want to go into the Cabinet, but failing in that he wants nothing; while it is no secret that Mr. Miller has aspired even to the Presidency, and to drop from such an ambition to an Assistant Secretaryship is most too humiliating, but he may accept the President's offer.

Vice President Morton bears his honors with becoming dignity, and his home will shine more resplendent in society than that of any of his predecessors. He is rich and can afford it; besides his wife is a most charming lady. One of her ancestors, Chancellor Livingston, administered the oath of office to George Washington just one hundred years ago. She is the mother of five beautiful children, all girls, ranging between fifteen and seven years of age. A boy, Lewis Parsons Morton, died several years ago. He would now be eleven if he had lived.

A Terrible Misfortune.

It is a calamity of the direst kind to feel that one's physical energies are failing, in the prime of life—to feel more nervous, more dispirited, weaker every day. Yet this is the unhappy lot of hundreds who surround us. A source of renewed strength which science approves, in behalf of which multitudes of the debilitated have and are every day testifying, and which, in countless instances, has built up constitutions sapped by weakness and infirmity and long unbenefited by other means, surely comprehends itself to all who need a tonic. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is such a medicine—pure, botanic, soothing to the nerves, promotive of digestion and a fertilizer of the blood. By dyspepsia and nervousness—the first cause, the second a consequence of lack of stamina—depart when a course of the Bitters is tried. All forms of malarial disease, rheumatism, kidney and bladder trouble, constipation and biliousness are annihilated by this standard family medicine.

A Russian Fiber.

A new textile has been discovered on the shores of the Caspian by M. O. Blakenbourg. The plant is known to the natives as "kanaff," and grows to a height of ten feet, with a diameter of about a tenth of an inch. By careful cultivation and preparation, a textile matter that is suited for most ordinary purposes, and would be particularly desirable for sacks, tarpaulin, ropes, etc., is obtained. It is lighter, cheaper and much stronger than hemp. It is soft, elastic and silky, and the finer stuffs made from it can be bleached chemically and dyed any shade of color.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury.

As Mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescription from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do are tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine; it is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co.

Moral and Tale.

"See here, Tommy, don't you know it's wrong to tie that kettle to the kitty?"

"No, sir."

"Well, I assure you, it is. Now, to point a moral—"

"I don't want to point a moral. I wanted to adorn a tail!"—Chicago Ledger.

A TRAVELING MAN

Creates Great Excitement in the Empire House.

INDEPENDENCE, IOWA, Oct. 14, 1888. RHEUMATIC SYRUP CO., JACKSON, MICH.: GENTS: Your Mr. Brooks came here tonight and registered as agent for Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup, and he did so it awakened in me an interest never before realized in a guest at my house. You will not wonder at it when I tell you the story. For years I have been greatly afflicted with inflammatory rheumatism, the pain and soreness of the joints at times being almost unbearable; could move about only with the use of crutches. In addition to this, my stomach became badly diseased, and neuralgia set in, which threatened to end my days. A traveling man stopping with me gave quite a history of your Syrup, and the peculiarities of its combination, which induced me to try it. I have taken six bottles, and no act in my life affords me greater satisfaction than in writing you that I am a well man.

It will be a pleasure for me to answer any communications, for I believe it to be the best remedy ever formulated.
