

THE SLAYER OF BOOTH.

A Man Who Knew Boston Corbett Tells of His Habits and Manners.

The writer (R. B. Hoover, in the North American Review) had a personal acquaintance with Boston Corbett, who avenged the death of President Lincoln in so tragic a manner on the night of April 26, 1865.

During the year 1875, while attending a soldiers' reunion of blue and gray at Caldwell, Ohio, I first met Mr. Corbett. The town was small and an immense crowd had gathered. Gen. Sherman, among others, being present. Corbett and I were assigned to the same room for the night. I found him a nervous, excitable man, always the center of attraction, with a keen, but wild, look in his eyes, and an interminable restlessness of body and limb. He was then a preacher, regularly ordained, I think. He led a prayer-meeting in the church while there. He was always well armed, in self-defense, as he explained, and his experience while at Caldwell showed that he had some reason to fear violence. He got into an exciting argument with several men one afternoon over the question as to whether Booth had really been killed at all. Hot words ensued, a rush was made toward Corbett, and in an instant the gleaming barrel of his revolver flashed in the faces of his opponents. It was with considerable difficulty that they were separated and peace restored.

Corbett claimed to those of us whom he considered his friends that he had been hounded for years by men who were high in authority in Washington at the time of the assassination, and that they caused him to lose several important positions after he went into civil life, and had refused to shake hands with him or to answer his salutation on the streets. The only reason he assigned for this was that his bullet had deprived the Washington authorities of an opportunity to make a grand display in the execution of Booth.

Be this as it may, it is certain that Corbett was always on the watch for bodily harm from some source. During the night I shared the bed with him this was exemplified. It was a close, hot night. We slept on the ground floor with the window raised. Corbett walked the floor for ten minutes after I was in bed. He would frequently clasp his hands and exclaim: "The Lord have mercy on my soul!" At last he knelt down and offered a fervent prayer, under which he placed a large revolver under his pillow and went to bed. He then told me the whole history of that dark night in Virginia. He said no words could express the resigned hatred, and yet heroic look, of Booth's face as it was lighted up by the flames of the tobacco barn in which he had taken refuge from his pursuers. To the call for surrender, Booth hurled back words of scorn and defiance, and turned his back on the troops in derision. Corbett said he could stand it no longer, and although his orders were to take Booth alive, if possible, he raised his revolver and fired. The wound in Booth's head was said to have been within half an inch of the location of Lincoln's fatal wound.

Corbett went to sleep, and I followed later on, with a restless, troubled sleep, in which I dreamed of something which made me awaken Corbett. He sat up in bed, drew out his pistol and covered me with it. I assured him it was all a dream, and he calmed down again. For several years afterward I received occasional letters from Mr. Corbett, and he finally drifted to Kansas, where, through the aid of some friends, he was appointed door-keeper of the House of Representatives during the winter of 1887. While there his mind became seriously affected, and he suddenly appeared in the House one morning with a revolver in each hand, and attempted kill the Speaker and others. He was promptly removed to the Insane Asylum.

Queer Ordinances.

Augusta, Ga., has so many funny things in her city ordinances that she has engaged an expert to overhaul and compile them. Some of the passages in the laws are put down as ridiculous, and others are so ambiguous as to be misleading. "It shall be the duty of all green grocers to exhibit the ears of such animals as they offer for sale to the clerk of the market" is one of them. The regulation seemed to anticipate that all sales of animals were to be to the clerk of the market. Of course this stipulation has never been complied with. Here is another: "After the votes have been counted and returns consolidated, as hereinbefore provided, the ballot boxes shall be properly sealed and deposited with the clerk of council, in whose office they shall remain for thirty days, at the expiration of which time they shall be destroyed by the mayor." However, the ballot boxes have never been destroyed, as the law stipulates. The superintendent of streets and drains has to suffer a very peculiar hardship. "It shall be the duty of said officer to remove or have removed all trash, etc., together with all dead animals from the streets, etc., to a place to be designated by the mayor and city council, and there be burned or otherwise destroyed as he may from time to time be directed." Poor fellow!

APOLLONIUS was a geometer who lived about 230 B. C., and whose work in the science has not been surpassed by the most brilliant achievements of others since. Archimedes, a contemporary of Apollonius, first described polygons in circles.

In the Gloaming.

There were a dozen or more of us sitting in Prospect Park, at Niagara Falls, in the evening, and a man whose name was understood to be Smith, together with a woman supposed to be his wife, sat on the parapet at the brink of the cataract. We were hushed and silent, awed by that mighty pour of waters for a time, and then Smith began singing "Rock of Ages" in a low, sweet voice. It was very appropriate to time and place, and a deeper feeling was stealing over us when a woman walked through the group straight to Smith, gave him a plug hat a swipe with her closed umbrella that sent it ten feet away into the water, and taking his ear between her thumb and finger she calmly said:

"Come along with me!" Without a word or the slightest resistance he followed her up the path until we could no longer see them for the darkness. Then we turned to the other woman for an explanation. She rose up, pulled her shawl around her shoulders and bowed gracefully as she backed away with the remark:

"As I am feeling somewhat indisposed, I think I will retire. Good evening, all."

Entirely Helpless to Health.

The above statement made by Mrs. S. H. Ford, wife of Gen. Ford, can be vouched for by nearly the entire population of Cornucopia, Mich., her home for years. She was for two years a terrible sufferer from rheumatism, being confined to her bed most of the time, her feet and limbs being so badly swollen she could scarcely move. She was induced to try a bottle of Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup. It helped her, and two additional bottles entirely cured her. To-day she is a well woman.

First ask your druggist; should he not keep it, we will send on receipt of price, $1 per bottle or six for $5.

She Didn't Have 'Em.

Mr. Jason had just settled himself to read while his wife was washing the dishes after supper, when he heard a crash in the kitchen, followed by a scream.

He rushed in, stepping upon his spectacles en route, and found his better half standing on the table.

"O, Jehiel! A mouse! a mouse!" she screamed, as soon as she could get breath.

"Of all the idiots," said he, with withering scorn, "I think a woman is the—is the— What do you want to raise such a row over nothing but a little miserable mouse for?"

"Well, I don't care," she answered. "I've seen you carry on nearly as bad yourself. Only this was a real mouse I saw."—Terre Haute Express.

The Spartan Virtue of Fortitude

Must be possessed in no ordinary degree by those who bear the pangs of rheumatism without complaint. We have never heard of such an individual. But why not, ere the lifelong martyrdom begins, extinguish the germ of this atrocious malady with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the efficacy of which as a preventive of the disease, as well as a means of relieving it, is well established and amply attested, during the last thirty-five years, over professional signatures? It expurgates from the blood those acid principles which beget the pain and inflammation characteristic of this complaint, which, if should be recollected, is always liable to terminate life suddenly when it attacks a vital part. The Bitters also expels the virus of malaria from the system, remedies dyspepsia, kidney complaint, constipation and biliousness, quiets the nerves, and invigorates the whole physical organism.

Food for Consumptives.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, is a most marvelous food and medicine. It heals the irritation of the throat and lungs, and gives flesh and strength quicker than any other remedy known. It is very palatable, having none of the disagreeable taste of the crude oil.

But, Bill, you haven't got the same feeling in the matter I has; an' if y'er've made up yer mind to enter the place, why, I'll stay outside an' keep watch, an' I'll give a whistle if I see any one comin'!"—Life.

No Cure No Pay.

It is a pretty severe test of any doctor's skill when the payment of his fee is made conditional upon his curing his patient. Yet after having, for many years, observed the thousands of marvelous cures effected in liver, blood, and lung diseases, by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, its manufacturers feel warranted in selling it, as they are now doing, through all druggists, the world over, under a certificate of positive guarantee that it will either benefit or cure in every case of disease for which they recommend it, if taken in time and given a fair trial, or money paid for it will be promptly refunded. Torpid liver, or "biliousness," impure blood, skin eruptions, scrofulous sores and swellings, consumption (which is scrofula of the lungs), all yield to this wonderful medicine. It is both tonic or strength-restoring, and alterative or blood-cleansing.

Sick Headache

Is a very distressing affection, generally arising from stomach troubles, biliousness, and dyspepsia, and we frequently find persons of both sexes subject to periodic headaches for which they can ascribe no direct cause. But the headache is a sure indication that there is something wrong somewhere, and whatever the cause, Hood's Sarsaparilla is a reliable remedy for headache, and for all troubles which seem to require a corrective and regulator. It cures dyspepsia, biliousness, malaria, tones the stomach, creates an appetite, and gives strength to the nerves.

A NEW INVENTION PALMER'S MAGNETIC INHALER Patented June 12, 1888 Price, One Dollar.

Magnetism and Menthol as a Remedial and Curative Agent.

From time to time many inventions and devices have been placed upon the market claiming to cure catarrh, neuralgia, bronchitis, etc., many of which are said to contain electric or magnetic curative powers.

Dr. Palmer is a gentleman who has devoted a life of study to the subject of catarrh and diseases of the head, throat, and lungs, and some time since he commenced a series of experiments with a view to determining whether any combination could be formed which would kill the parasite and act as a healing power at the same time, and at length succeeded in determining that menthol, when combined with magnetism, would do so, but how to arrange these seemingly opposite agents so as to render their use convenient and effectual was a question of some difficulty. At length he succeeded in confining within a vulcanite tube three inches long and about three-quarters of an inch in diameter a perfect magnetic battery in the form of a coil of steel wire. In the interior of this battery is stored a fine grade of imported menthol. The ends of the tube are closed by nickel caps, which, when removed, admit of the free inhalation of the electro-mentholized air. The menthol acts as a germicide, while the magnetism forces stimulating the weakened nerves of the diseased parts into healthy action, forming a wonderful healing power, thereby successfully stopping all further depredations.

The fumes when inhaled are refreshing and cooling, and for the immediate relief and speedy cure of catarrh, cold in the head, hay fever, headache, neuralgia, catarrhal deafness, etc., it is unequalled. It cures headache in five minutes. Sore throat is one of the diseases immediately affected by the inhaler. One purchaser thus speaks of the Inhaler: "New Orleans, La., August 9, 1888.—E. A. Gerlach, Chicago, Ill.: DEAR SIR—Inclosed you will find one dollar ($1.00) to pay for Inhaler you sent me on May 8. I do not know whether it will cure me of deafness or not, but I do think it prevents me from having the headache. I have only had the headache once since I received it; have been very much troubled with headache for two or three years. Wishing you success, and thanking you for your kindness, I am, with respect, yours truly, PHILIP A. BAXTER.

Beware of imitation, as there are unscrupulous persons engaged in the manufacture of a spurious inhaler that strongly resembles the genuine. Full directions, testimonials, etc., sent with each instrument.

If you are afflicted with Catarrh, send $1.00 and get a Magnetic Inhaler, which is certain to afford instant relief and a permanent cure. Address, A. GAVIN, Western Agent, 271 Franklin St., Chicago, Ill.
