

Little Freddie's Remarks.
Little Freddie has a way of saying something every once in a while that has a very forceful though unintentional significance. His father is the manager of a burlesque company, which fact may account for his precocious familiarity with certain institutions.
"Papa," he asked, "it's improper to say 'corpo de ballet' isn't it?"
"Yes, certainly,"
"Is it," he resumed, after a pause, "because people in the ballet never die?"—Washington Post.

Extra Liability to Malarial Infection.
Persons whose blood is thin, digestion weak and liver sluggish, are extra-labile to the attacks of malarial disease. The most telling exposure may, under such conditions, infect a system which, if healthy, would resist the malarial taint. The only way to secure immunity from malaria in localities where it is prevalent, is to tone and regulate the system by improving weakened digestion, enriching the blood, and giving a wholesome impetus to biliary secretion. These results are accomplished by nothing so effectively as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which long experience has proved to be the most reliable safeguard against fever and ague and kindred disorders, as well as the best remedy for them. The Bitters are, moreover, an excellent invigorant of the organs of urination, and an active depurant, eliminating from the blood those acid impurities which create rheumatic ailments.

Made His Apology Ample.
His emotions got the better of his Boston pride, and he kissed her.
"Fabulous Jones," said the agitated girl, "you surprise me!"
"Ethel," he answered, submissively, "I apologize from my heart."
"But, sir, I would rather have it from your lips."
And, like all Boston girls when they are determined on anything, she got it.—Philadelphia Press.

A CELEBRATED TRIAL.

THE MOST SENSATIONAL CASE IN CANADA'S HISTORY.

Trial and Conviction of J. Reginald Birchall for the Murder of F. C. Benwell, His Traveling Companion—Strange Circumstances Surrounding the Affair.

WITHIN the memory of man no Canadian criminal case has attracted the attention or created the interest that has been manifested in the trial of J. Reginald Birchall, which was brought to a conclusion at Woodstock, Ontario, on the 29th of September. The trial consumed ten days and resulted in the conviction of the accused. When asked by the Judge if he had anything to say why sentence should not be passed upon him, Birchall replied simply: "I am not guilty of murder." He was thereupon sentenced to be hanged on Friday, Nov. 14.

HISTORY OF THE CASE.

[WOODSTOCK (ONT.) CORRESPONDENCE.]
Birchall was tried on an indictment charging him with the murder of Frederick C. Benwell, whose dead body was found in a wild and unfrequented swamp in Oxford County, Ont., in February last. The evidence upon which the jury found the murderer guilty, was purely circumstantial.

There are many conflicting and fragmentary accounts of Birchall's identity, but those who ought to know best say that he is the son of an English Church

BIRCHALL, THE MURDERER.

clergyman who lived in the north of England, and once deceased. Birchall was a student at Oxford, and was known as a hard-working, a good-natured spendthrift with pleasure as his principal ambition in life. He is now about 27 years old. He got married a few years ago, and about the same time financial troubles culminated and he was forced to leave England. He came to Canada early in the summer of 1887 to become a farmer, but, finding the work harder and the pay smaller than he had been led to expect, he staid in Woodstock. Birchall talked a great deal about aristocrats

WHERE BENWELL'S BODY WAS FOUND.

In England with whom he claimed to be acquainted or connected. He signed himself Birchall or Burchell, but spoke of himself as the possessor or heir-apparent to the title of Lord Somerset. Many people in Oxford County knew him only as Somerset. He had an inordinate passion for sports. A horse and a gun were the twin objects of his first affection. As a sportsman he sought game far and near and became more intimately acquainted with the country than many a person who has spent a lifetime in it. He spent money freely. There did not seem to be anything vicious about him, but he was simply bent on having a good time. His wife seemed to second him in what he did and was known everywhere as "Lady Somerset." These two disappeared in the fall as quickly as they had come, leaving certain unpaid bills. When a man was arrested in February for the murder of the stranger whose body was found in the swamp near Princeton the people were made aware for the first time that Lord Somerset, or Birchall, had returned.

There had been great difficulty in identifying the body, for the pockets had been emptied of all but one or two unimportant articles, and the name had been cut out of all the marked clothing. But a cigar-case was found having the name of "F. C. Benwell" on it. When this announcement was made in the papers, Birchall came on from Niagara Falls to Princeton and identified the body as that of a fellow-passenger of his on the steamship Britannic, which had landed in New York but a couple of weeks before. It appeared from Birchall's own statement that Benwell had been in his company but a few days before the body was found, so he was arrested on suspicion, and his wife, also, was taken into custody on a charge of aiding and abetting in the murder. There had been a good deal of excitement about the discovery of the body in the swamp, but when it was known that "Lord Somerset" had been arrested for the murder, and that the case, if proven, would be shown to be one of almost unheard of atrocity, the whole country was wild with curiosity and indignation. There was only one person who remained cool, collected and smiling, and that was Birchall. He manifested no bravado, but he simply kept quiet, said nothing except to his lawyer, and seemed to be rather amused at the course events had taken. But against Birchall there were scraps of evidence which, while not making a complete case, were all consistent one with the other and together were certainly very strong. The principal witness was a young Englishman named Douglas R. Pelly, who had come out on the Britannic with Mr. and Mrs. Birchall and Benwell. Pelly and Benwell had made arrangements in England to take an interest in a horse ranch or farm which Birchall claimed he owned in Canada. According to Pelly, Birchall had represented this farm to be a mile and a half from Niagara Falls, the stables lighted with electricity, and the place generally in first-class shape. Benwell's father, a retired British Colonel, was to pay $500 for an interest in this farm as soon as his son should write from Canada that he was satisfied with his bargain. Young Pelly also had paid Birchall a large sum on condition that he was to have employment on the farm, with a small share in the profits. Pelly explained how the party had gone through from New York to Buffalo, thence to Niagara Falls, and how on Monday, Feb. 17, Benwell and Birchall had taken the Grand Trunk Southern Division train to go to the alleged stock farm. That night, Birchall returned alone, explaining that Benwell had gone on further, probably intending to call at London, Ont., upon a Mr. Helmut, a lawyer who had been one of their fellow-passengers on the Britannic. Pelly told with blanching face how Birchall subsequently took him about Niagara Falls, while his (Pelly's) suspicions of his companion grew stronger. In private conversation the young fellow declared that he believed Birchall meant to tip him into the river just below the falls, or otherwise to make away with him, and it was quite evident that he believed he had had an exceedingly narrow escape.

Everything pointed to Birchall as the guilty man. Had the victim been shot in a quarrel or by a tramp, as was at one time suggested, the marks on the clothing would not have been cut out. That was evident, that Benwell returned who believed that if he could prevent the corpse from proclaiming its own identity it would fill a nameless grave and inquiry would soon die out. Birchall and Pelly were the only men who could have known that the man was an entire stranger in the country. Birchall was the last person seen with Benwell, that is sure. He left Niagara Falls with him, and credible witnesses swore to having seen the man whom they knew as Birchall or Somerset in company with a young Englishman whose description answered to that of the victim. They were seen to get off at Eastwood Station and go across the fields in a direction which would take them to the swamp. Birchall was subsequently seen to return alone. He spoke to a Miss Smith at Eastwood Station on his return and stated to her that he was going East, but would be back in a few days. He did not buy a return ticket, but a single ticket, however. He stated when he went to identify the body that he had never seen Benwell in the clothes in which the corpse was dressed. All the testimony went to prove that on the train Birchall's companion wore the very clothes in which the corpse was found.

The swamp is on the edge of one of those strange ponds, of which there are several in this country, which have no visible inlet or outlet and which seem to extend under the swampy land by which their surface is surrounded. Birchall, as a sportsman, knew the place well. When he hunted in this swamp there was access to the lake, but during his absence in England a fire had burned out the spongy, peaty, surface of the ground, causing the small cedars, of which the swamp is composed, to fall or lean so that access to the lake was prevented. The position of the body when found was such as to indicate that when shot the man was looking over the trunks of two trees which had fallen, completely barring the way to the lake. The theory that Birchall intended to throw his victim into the lake, where the undercurrent would tend to draw him beneath the boggy surface or shore of the lake, is completely in keeping with the rest of the story.

F. C. BENWELL.

ler, Queen's Counsel, the leader of the criminal bar, and he was opposed chiefly by George T. Blackstock, Queen's Counsel, a rising man, young and eloquent. The court-room was crowded to suffocation every day of the trial from the opening to the close.

A Progressive Company.
In addition to the splendid passenger equipment now furnished by the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad, the management have arranged to run Vestibuled Parlor Cars on the through day trains, commencing with Sept. 1. These cars are the product of the Pullman Company shops, and are considered by many railroad men to surpass in elegance and completeness any parlor cars which have as yet been placed on the rails.

Before the winter travel commences, all passenger trains will be provided with safety steam-heating apparatus, which is connected with the engines and receives its steam from this source, thereby obtaining an even temperature in the car at all times. These improvements are made for the convenience of the traveling public and reflect credit upon the liberal policy adopted by the management of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad.

A STORY OF THRILLING INTEREST
In a short time one of the most captivating serials ever published, entitled THE GREAT SEABURY CASE;
—OR—
Beautiful Leonore.
By ALEXANDER ROBERTSON, M. D., will appear in that well-known story paper, THE CHICAGO LEDGER. This romance, from the pen of one of the most prolific writers of modern fiction, will create a furor. It is majestic in its plot, its incidents are grand, its minor details are treated with a rare and intense vigor that will at once establish its brilliant character. In this charming story of life, love and intrigue the heroine is brave and beautiful, and her adventures and misfortunes will enthrall every reader, and awaken a sympathetic interest, while the marvelous network of plot and counterplot on which the serial is based is drawn to its magnificent conclusion. Many such stories have been attempted, but few deal with their theme with a more dramatic pen, with higher realistic fervor, or stronger colors of description and contrast. The keenest insight into human nature is given, and there is not one dull line from the opening chapters to the closing scene in this eloquent narrative of woman's love, man's devotion, and the terrible plots of mercenary schemers. The LEDGER predicts a grand reception for this masterpiece of fiction, and an interest in the fortunes of Beautiful Leonore that will endure this rare heroine to every heart. The story of loyal love is sweetly told, and the fine skill in treatment, the originality of conception, the absorbing power of action delineated in every scene warrant us in announcing THE GREAT SEABURY CASE as the story of the year, and one the memory of which will long remain with those fortunate enough to peruse its entrancing chapters.

THE GREAT SEABURY CASE will be published only in THE CHICAGO LEDGER. Remember that, while it is the chief attraction of the week, it is only one of the many that have led the publishers to claim for this popular paper the title of the only story paper in America. Other serials, sketches, poems and departments combine to make its magnificently illustrated eight pages the choicest ever offered in this country in its line. Subscribe now. Begin THE LEDGER with a leading story, which is to be followed by others equally entrancing. The cheapest, the best, the only story paper in America of its class. THE CHICAGO LEDGER will be sent to any address, postpaid, for one year for $1.50.

A sample copy containing the opening chapters of this interesting story will be sent FREE to all persons who send us their name and address upon a postal card. THE CHICAGO LEDGER, Chicago, Ill.

SCOTT'S EMULSION
Of Pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda.
There are emulsions and emulsions, and there is still much skimming with which magistrates are content. Try as they will, many manufacturers cannot so disguise their cod liver oil as to make it palatable to sensitive stomachs. Scott's Emulsion of PURE NORWEGIAN COD LIVER OIL, combined with Hypophosphites is almost as palatable as milk. For this reason as well as for the fact of the stimulating qualities of the Hypophosphites, Physicians frequently prescribe it in cases of CONSUMPTION, SCROFULA, BRONCHITIS and CHRONIC COUGH or SEVERE COLD. All Druggists sell it, but be sure you get the genuine, as there are poor imitations.
