RIOT IN A STATE HOUSE.

NEBRASKA'S CAPITOL THE SCENE OF A PRETTY ROW.

Free Fight on the Floor—The Presence of the Militia Necessary to Preserve Order—Royd Takes the Oath of Office—Legal Papers Served on Lieut. Gov. Melkjohn with Trouble—The Executive Office Harried.

[Lincoln (Neb.) dispatch.]
When it became known yesterday morning that Lieut.-Gov. Melkjohn intended to preside over the joint convention, and that he would refuse to entertain any motion looking to the transaction of any other business than the mere ministerial act of canvassing the returns of the vote, it was apparent that unless Melkjohn could be deposed Royd would be inaugurated without delay. The great struggle, therefore, was over the question of who should preside.

All the doors of the Representative hall were closely guarded, and none but members of the Legislature, State officers and persons having business inside were admitted. All members were on hand promptly, although they found great difficulty in pushing their way through the crowds that filled the corridors and besieged the Capitol at all points. The Alliance members had taken possession of the House at 5 o'clock in the morning. They placed the Speaker in the chair and placed a cordon of assistant Sergeant-at-arms around him. Lieutenant Governor Melkjohn got in through the cloak-room and was served with an order of ejection. Both sides had a force of sergeant-at-arms within call, and any attempt on either side to proceed with the canvass would have precipitated a row. To avoid this a committee from each party was sent with a statement of the case to the Supreme Court, and the House waited several hours in suspense for a decision as to which officer had the constitutional right to preside.

The first and second floors of the State House were crowded with people who were becoming demonstrative. Melkjohn and Elder agreed not to call the session to order till 11 o'clock. In the meantime four Republicans, four Democrats, and four Independents were out as a non-official committee attempting to patch up the trouble. Elder and his Sergeant-at-Arms held the Speaker's stand, while Melkjohn held the Secretary's desk. J. W. Love attempted to go to Melkjohn's side, but the Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms halted him. Love thrust the official aside and proudly marched to the Lieutenant-Governor's desk.

The crowd became so disorderly that an attempt was made to force the doors, but a crowd of Independents held them fast. Gardner of Douglas rushed to the door, followed by a crowd of Democrats and Republicans. A fight ensued. Gardner was seized by half a dozen Independents, and an equal number of Democrats and Republicans went to his assistance. Blows were exchanged. "Pap" Hastings and Marshal McCloy locked arms around each other, and a crowd from the hallway led by "Bud" Lindsey of Lincoln and "Nat" Brown of Omaha, fought their way through the crowd, breaking down the doors and clubbing their way to the Speaker's stand. Gardner was the victim, receiving several painful scratches. As Hastings and McCloy reached the Speaker's stand Melkjohn called the joint session to order. He ordered every member to his seat and the roll was called. Every pane of glass in the two big doors was shattered. The battle at the doorway lasted five minutes only, but it seemed an hour.

The disturbance became so great that Company D of the National Guard was ordered out. The sight of the militia, with breech-loading guns, awed the crowd for a time, but it was not until a squad of forty police arrived that the crowd was convinced that business was meant. The crowd knew full well that the soldiers did not bear loaded guns, and the toes of the militia were trampled on with impunity. The militia finally cleared the ground, but a howling mob still surrounded the Capitol.

The Democrat and Republican members agreed to return if Elder would publish the returns. Elder accordingly canvassed the vote. At 2:30 o'clock the Independents were in their seats, but transacted no business until the full body was present and the Lieutenant Governor appeared and called the convention to order. A number of conciliatory speeches were made, and the Independents seeing that they could not gain the returns, a resolution was then passed receiving the full Alliance vote, declaring that the canvass had been conducted under protest, and that the Legislature in nowise recognized the election of the officers who had been returned as receiving the highest number of votes. The officers, however, were sworn in promptly by Chief Justice Cobb.

The contest will now go on as prescribed by law. There is a prospect that the Legislature will unseat every one of the new officers.

Gov. Thayer has barricaded the Executive office and remains inside with policemen and a company of militia on guard. The result of it all is that after two days' wrangling the Speaker has canvassed the vote in the presence of the two Houses, the contestees have been declared elected, and this evening Royd and the balance of the State ticket filed their bonds and took the oath of office required by the Constitution, and the contestants are out. They say that they will not give up hope and that the contest proceedings will be pushed for all they are worth.

It is understood that the Supreme Court will be asked to pass on the question of Royd's citizenship. This will delay the formal inauguration and may result in declaring him ineligible.

Sorcery in France.

A remarkable case showing how far sorcery is from being stamped out in France was settled at Tours two days ago. It is only two years since a woman, her husband, and two sons were executed at Romorantin for burning the woman's aged mother, who was supposed to have put a spell upon them.

A very short time previously at Cologne a woman was guillotined for the murder of a man by means of love philters which she had given him to cause him to love her. The witch who had compounded the philters was sent to hard labor for seven years.

But now at Tours comes a case which would be amusing if it were not for its tragic ending. A woman named Gerard, a sorceress, persuaded an unfortunate coachman named Jahan that he would discover buried in the earth beneath his stable a box full of gold if he would dig at midnight, after having lit candles and burned incense in a given quantity to render his good genius in a favorable state of mind to fight with the skeleton who had charge of the treasure.

Jahan, who had paid very dear for this revelation, turned up his stable from end to end, working every night, but, of course, never finding anything. Gerard continued to exhort him not to lose patience, and at every new consultation gave him some fresh advice and fresh incantations which he was to use. Jahan at last had paid the woman 4,000 francs, every penny that he owned. When he saw that he was completely ruined and still had found no treasure he hanged himself to a rafter in his stable. Gerard has received eight months' imprisonment for fortune-telling—not a very severe punishment. It is a fact that in every village almost throughout France there exists a sorcerer, who is the evil genius of the place, and a clairvoyant who combats the wicked spell and naturalizes the evil influence of the sorcerer. Both make capital livings out of the stupidity of the villagers.

Disorders Which Affect the Kidneys.
Are among the most formidable known. Diabetes, Bright's disease, gravel, and other complaints of the urinary organs are not ordinarily cured in severe cases, but they may be averted by timely medication. "A useful stimulant of the urinary glands has ever been found in Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a medicine which not only affords the requisite stimulus when they become inactive but increases their vigor and secretory power. By increasing the activity of the kidneys and bladder, this medicine has the additional effect of expelling from the blood impurities which is the peculiar office of those organs to eliminate and pass off. The Bitters is also a purifier and strengthener of the bowels, an invigorator of the stomach, and a matchless remedy for biliousness and fever and ague. It counteracts a tendency to premature decay, and sustains and comforts the aged and infirm."

A Huge Pot.

On a small island in the middle of the South Pacific lives a planter, the only white man on the island—which is full of brown-skinned folk—who cuts and dries the meat of the cocoanut, which he sells to trading vessels. When any stranger stops at his island he will give him of the best that the island affords; he will get up great concerts and dances of the islanders; above all, he will take him out to see his pet, which is, perhaps, the largest and oddest animal that was ever petted by any man. This pet is a sperm whale nearly seventy feet long. He came through the narrow entrance into the little harbor, which is walled by a coral reef, when quite small, and remained until he had grown so large that he could not get out if he wanted to. The great creature comes up to be fed when the planter blows a horn, and after his meal of a barrel of chopped meat or fish performs some ponderous and amusing tricks, apparently knowing what is expected of him.

Changed His Mind.

"Oh, sir!" gasped a boy who ran up to a policeman on Gratiot avenue, "there is an awful fight going on over here on St. Aubin!"

"Who's fighting?"
"My father and another man."
"How long have they been at it?"
"Oh, half an hour."
"But why didn't you come before?"
"Why, because dad was getting the best of it all along up to ten minutes ago."—Detroit Critic.

A Watch in a Salmon's Mouth.

A salmon taken at Astoria, Oregon, had a silver Waltham watch and chain in its mouth. The watch had evidently lain in the water for years, as the steel portions crumbled to dust when touched. Its presence in the salmon's mouth is accounted for by the fact that salmon at this season of the year will bite at any bright object, and the watch and chain had been caught by the net dragging on the bottom. As it was hauled it attracted the attention of the salmon, and he took it in.

Sound Advice.—Don't go around looking for a flaw in your neighbor's eye, but keep your own specks well dusted and watch the corners of your own side of the street. If you feel out of sorts and have a bad taste in your mouth, with headache and constipation, take a few doses of Dr. White's Dandelion, for you are bilious, and this medicine will cure you.

The India Rubber Tree.

Few plants are so well adapted for home decoration as in the India rubber tree (Ficus elastica), and few are so readily grown and cared for, or will produce the same excellent effect if displayed among other plants. Especially attractive are the white, and the golden variegated form, the latter being the best. The gold band about the leaves is an inch wide and forms a beautiful contrast to the dark shining green of the center. A desirable species of this genus is F. stipulata, a handsome climber with small, round, dark-green leaves that will cling tenaciously to any rough surface. It is excellent for conservatory decoration, where it can remain permanently. The leaves of these plants, not being numerous, can be readily kept free from dust by wiping with a moist sponge. This should also be done with palms and all large-leaved plants, at least once a week.—American Agriculturist.
