WHERE YOU CAN'T HIDE.

In Berlin the Police Know the Whereabouts of Everybody.

You can't hire a girl in Berlin, writes Frank G. Carpenter, without going to the police, and you have to make out two statements whenever you hire a servant. One of these statements is for your landlord, and the other for the police. They describe the girl as a passport does, giving her age, size and the color of her eyes and hair. You have to state where she came from, and when she leaves you have to send in another statement saying she has gone. If you say she is a good girl and honest and the reverse is true, and she goes somewhere else and shows herself to be a thief, you are liable to be fined for giving her false recommendations. This is the same with all sorts of servants, and a dishonest person cannot get a place here under false pretenses, nor can a man here easily escape the payment of his debts. One of the curious institutions of the city is an intelligence office, as it might be called, where records of these passports are kept, and where you can go and find out just where any man or woman is stopping. If John Smith, who owes you a bill, moves to another part of Berlin, to escape you, you have only to go to this office, and by paying a few cents you will get a report which will tell you just where he has lived in the city and where you may find him at present. There is no chance for a man to escape or hide here, and the police and the Government are always upon you.

Berlin.

Frank G. Carpenter, the well-known correspondent, is much impressed with the way in which Germany's capital is governed. When he says that the consequences in the United States is yearly getting deeper and deeper into debt, Berlin is making money and is at the same time magnificently governed. Beyond all her expenses the city makes a profit of about $1,800,000 a year. She owns two-thirds of the gas stock and sees that the people get good gas and that the streets are well lighted. On her gas the city realizes a handsome revenue. Then she insists that every house shall be insured by the city, and forbids any other company doing insurance business in the city. This is another profitable source of revenue. These are only samples of many ways adopted to give the people good service and at the same time make money for the city instead of allowing private corporations to make it. Berlin's government is run for the benefit of her citizens and not for a horde of politicians.

The Income of Millionaires.

Less than 40 years ago the American millionaire was considered a rare bird, but now there are more than 4,000 millionaires in the United States, and the man worth from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000 is so common that his presence excites little, if any, comment. To say this nation possesses not only the greatest number of rich men but also the richest of any on the globe. A list of America's ten richest men, with the sums they are worth, would make up as follows: William Waldorf Astor, $150,000,000; J. P. Morgan, $100,000,000; John D. Rockefeller, $90,000,000; Cornelius Vanderbilt, $90,000,000; William K. Vanderbilt, $90,000,000; John Jacob Astor, $70,000,000; Henry M. Flagler, $60,000,000; John B. Blair, $50,000,000; Leland Stanford, $50,000,000; Collis P. Huntington, $50,000,000. The fortunes of these ten men foot up the stupendous total of $790,000,000, a sum the vastness of which baffles human comprehension.

Wales Not a Happy Man.

The Prince of Wales is far from being a happy man. He has waited so long that he has almost given up hope of ever being king. He is already a grandfather, while his mother means destined to live many years yet. He has seen everything worth seeing, met everybody worth meeting, is debarré from mingling in politics, seems to have no mission in life, no purpose to carry out. His position in life prevents his being what a sensible man; he must keep up certain forms, submit to being tumbled to, and be at the beck and call of everybody who has a social ax to grind. Wales is perhaps not a very able man, but he is too many to be satisfied with his present merely ornamental position in life. He is not half as happy as the average American citizen who has something to do and who is not ashamed to do it.

The Center of the United States.

The exact situation of the geographical center of the United States is a surprise to anyone who has not given the subject careful attention. The most eastern point of the United States is Quoddy Head, Maine; the western, Attu Island, Alaska; the most northern, Point Barrow, Alaska; the most southern is Key West, Fla. The center of the quadrangular figure formed by uniting these four points is located at the crossing of 55 degrees north latitude and 110 degrees west longitude, about 420 miles north of the northern line of Montana. It is also true of the United States as of Great Britain, that the sun never sets on our territory, for when it is 9:36 a. m. on Attu Island, Alaska, it is 9:36 a. m. of the following day at Eastport, Maine.

Hard on the Lawyer.

A New York lawyer, distinguished in his profession, owned a summer home in Vermont. His neighbors there told this story about his youngest child, a girl not more than 10. After much coaxing she prevailed on her father to buy her a donkey and cart. The first day of the donkey's arrival he was permitted to browse on the lawn. The child followed the animal about, and thinking his countenance wore an uncommonly sad expression she cautiously approached, and, striking his nose gently with her little hands, said: "Poor donkey! You feel lonesome, don't you? But never mind, papa will be here to-morrow, and then you will have company."

She Has the American Spirit.

Mrs. Ye, wife of the head of the Korean legation at Washington, seems to have been imbued with the spirit of American independence very soon after her arrival in this country. She enters into the American fashion, conforms to our style of dress and has recently joined the Presbyterian Church. She accompanies her husband to all public receptions, not wholly to his delight, although his experience several years ago taught him the folly of objecting. On that occasion, it will be remembered, the lady climbed through the kitchen window and followed her husband to a reception after he enjoyed her to remain quietly at the legation.

IN A MASS OF SNAKES.

Thrilling Experience of a Farm Hand in a Well in Connecticut.

The long drought in the Connecticut valley, during which the farmers have been compelled to get their water from the river, induced Farmer Alexander Fenfield, living near Middletown, to dig a well on his farm. For this purpose he sent his hired man, a Pole, to the bottom of it in a bucket. The Pole had not labored long before he was disturbed by a singular buzzing sound like the humming of swarms of bees, and a moment later he began to see snakes. From every crevice in the stone curb of the well serpents thrust forth their heads, hissing loudly, then advanced their bodies, little by little, into the well, which were followed instantly by still more snakes, all crowding on the frightened workman and tumbling on each other into the bottom of the dimly lighted shaft.

There were black snakes, water snakes, striped snakes and adders. For awhile the Pole waged a desperate battle against the serpents with his shovel, simply to protect himself from their attack, but in a few moments he was completely invested with a hissing, writhing, squirming, tossing tangle of serpents in the bottom of the pit, while a shower of snakes was continually falling upon him from the walls above his head. Finally he called for aid and was hauled to the surface. Subsequent examination revealed the fact that he had killed thirty-four snakes with his shovel.

A Disagreeable Complaint.

The affection known in hot climates as "prickly heat," is not confined to the tropics. Certain occupations induce it. For example, on a hot day, a person who is working in a brickyard, or a washerwoman who is in a very painful and serious degree sometimes. It is a non-contagious disease of the skin, characterized by the appearance of small, hard papules, slightly red, accompanied by severe itching. The disease appears on different parts of the body, but generally on the front of the forearms and hands, the sides of the neck and face. It is often due to irregularities in diet and habits, the best treatment is simple, unstimulating food and drink, and proper attention to the general health. A daily cold or tepid bath should be resorted to. This affection is the cause of the peeling of the skin of the hands and the itching of the feet in the fall, apart from the effects of sunburn.

He Wanted No Sympathy.

The milkman gathered himself up from the ruins of his demolished wagon, scraped the whitish-gray mud from his clothing, smoothed out the dents in his hat, wiped from his whiskers the dripping mud that had dripped down his face when the catastrophe came, gave one glance at the runaway horse disappearing down the street, surveyed the dirty-white puddles that represented the stock people in the mud, and turned to the crowd. "All I've got to say," he observed, rolling up his coat sleeves and speaking in the tone of a man accustomed to calling cattle, "is that the first son-of-a-gun that says a word about this being my fault, I'll give him a good spanking. All I've got to say is that I'm going to get his blamed head punched."

It Weakens the Brain.

Imprisonment tends to weaken the brain, says a Philadelphia police official. This places a released criminal, especially one who has served a long term, at a decided disadvantage in his efforts to bury his past and begin life anew. It is not believed that these so-called homes for reformed convicts wield much influence, if any, in molding the future of criminals. The tendency, it occurs to many would be to bring together a dangerous class of criminals who might improve the occasion to concoct schemes of outwary.

One of Nature's Queer Freaks.

A local shell dealer in Atlantic City, N. J., while going over a consignment of imported shells recently, found a specimen of nature in the shape of a shell on which was plainly decipherable the word "Paris." The letters forming the word were very irregular, and a close examination showed them to be natural and a part of the shell. The shell on which it is to be seen this strangely formed word, is a native of the Islands of Mauritius. It will be placed in the Academy of Natural Sciences in Philadelphia.

He Has Clothes for a Lifetime.

If the Emperor of Germany should retire from the ruling position to-morrow he would have clothes enough to last him his lifetime. It is said that he has a thousand suits, besides twelve dozen suits of underclothing and fifty dozen socks and handkerchiefs. Some of his suits are uniforms which would not be available if he became a private citizen, but there is no doubt that he could keep his stock of underwear replenished from the sale of these extra uniforms, and retain a little pocket-money besides.

An Absent-Minded Man.

There is a very absent-minded attorney in Auburn, Me. Some time ago he went to a lively stable and hired a team. When he had finished his drive he took the team to another stable and left it. He was well known and at neither stable was any question made. Discovery came after eight days and from each stable the attorney received a bill—from the former for horse hire and from the other for boarding the animal. He resolved to keep his wits about him in the future.

Eaten by a Panther.

A report from Deep Fork, Oklahoma, says the wife and baby of a settler living near there disappeared some time ago. The other day the head of the child and portions of the body of the mother were found in a panther's lair. A large force of armed men are looking for the panther.

Had to Eat the Shells.

One night this week two well-known New York printers sat down to a remarkable feast. One ate the meats of a quart of peanuts while the other ate the shells. It is needless to say that the feast was the result of a wager, and the fellow who fed on husks bet on Harrison.

He Locked Up His Verses.

It is a singular fact that when the late Lord Byron wrote a poem he invariably had it put in type and locked it up for a number of years. At the end of the allotted time he still liked the verses he corrected them and had them published, if not he destroyed them.

THE LARGEST BABY EVER BORN.

The baby which for general size, height and weight, takes the cake as being "the largest on record" was born in Ohio on the 12th day of January, 1879. The "average baby" weighs from six to nine pounds. This giant infant's weight was exactly 232 pounds. He (it was a boy) was 24 feet 8 inches long, his head measured 19 inches, his little pink foot measured 5 1/2 inches and was as thick as the end of the average eighteen-months-old child. About six years prior to this extraordinary event the same woman gave birth to an eighteen pound baby which was 24 inches in height.

Although this may be thought to be a wonderful story by those not informed as to the real facts, it will be shown of some of its seemingly Mulhathonic marks when it is known that the parents themselves were two of the largest people in the United States at the time of the occurrence. The father, a man named "Nova Scotia Giant," and the mother as the "Kentucky Wonder." Mrs. Bates (if memory is not at fault, she died five or six years ago) 7 feet 3 inches in height, the father of the baby giant being about two inches less in stature.—St. Louis Republic.

ILLITERATE SCHOOL TEACHERS.

Here is an item that will interest school teachers generally:

The eighty-five teachers in the schools of Lockport, N. Y., had a spelling contest the other day, to the great delight of their pupils, because some of the teachers did not altogether cover themselves with glory. Of the eighty-five only five spelled "Rensselaer" correctly, and 74 per cent of the whole number misspelled the word. "All of the following words were wrongly spelled by more than half the teachers, and several of them by more than fifty: 'Supersede,' 'respective,' 'excellent,' 'pretentious,' 'millinery,' 'pretensions,' 'gaseous' and 'concede.'"

NEW FISH COMMISSIONER.

GOV. MATTHEWS DECIDES TO APPOINT P. H. KIRSCH.

Gov. Matthews has decided to appoint P. H. Kirsch state fish commissioner, to succeed Colonel Dennis. Prof. Kirsch is at present superintendent of the public schools at Columbia City, and is esteemed an authority on ichthyology. Since his graduation at the state university, where he studied under Dr. Jordan in this branch of natural history, he has done considerable creditable work for the United States Fish Commission, in researches in the rivers of Kentucky. He is an ardent lover of fishing and has been of much assistance to the retiring commissioner in prosecuting violators of the seining law. Dr. Jordan recommended him very highly. In making the appointment, Gov. Matthews paid Col. Dennis a high compliment for having elevated the office to a high plane of efficiency. Col. Dennis joined in urging Prof. Kirsch's appointment as one eminently fit to be made. It is believed he can do more for Indiana waters in getting supplies from Washington than almost any other man.

Not many years since Prof. P. H. Kirsch was superintendent of the public schools of Rensselaer, and his many friends here will be pleased to learn of his advancement.

INDIANA'S POLYGLOT SENATOR.

Senator Turpie, who has been re-elected by the Indiana legislature is said to have eight languages at his tongue's end. He reads Latin, Greek and Hebrew almost as readily, it is averred, as English, and he has a fluent command of French, German, Spanish and Italian.—St Paul Daily Globe.

The Russian extradition treaty was ratified by the U. S. senate a few days ago. Senator Turpie led the opposition to it. He introduced a resolution giving the U. S. courts the right, under any treaty, to determine whether or not an offense is political under the law of nations.

Bro. Swim, of the Hammond News, has added a new press and a gas engine to his establishment, and now has power furnished with-out steam and without fire. We are pleased to note this evidence of prosperity, and trust he may reap the increased reward due his labors and enterprise.

The Roby Investigation.

Chicago Dispatch.

Tuesday was a busy day for the officials of the Indiana Racing association, as the committee appointed by the Indiana legislature to visit the Roby track put in an unexpected appearance during the early morning, and had they picked a day in which to witness real winter racing they could hardly have made a better selection, as the mercury had dropped below the zero mark, while a keen and bitter north wind swept across the prairies. The committee consisted of M. N. Johnson, of Marion county, as chairman; W. W. McMahon, of Fulton county, and M. R. Sulzer, of Jefferson county, Jerome Dinwiddie, the member from Lake, and Senator Hobson, of Park, accompanying them as invited guests. The early morning was spent in an inspection of the stables, and the lawmakers were greatly surprised when shown such noted turf performers as Guido, Lorenzo, Hercules and Tobe Bell, the last named being David Waldo's American Derby candidate for this year. They had no idea, evidently, that such high-class performers were on the ground. The stable accommodations were a revelation to them, and Chairman Johnson did not hesitate to say that the horses were better cared for, as a rule, than were the family horses owned anywhere in the state. The saddling paddock and weighing room were also visited and the methods of doing business there were explained. The afternoon was given up to questioning the management and the horsemen regarding the racing and the care of the horses, with an evident view of ascertaining whether or not the racing was on the level, whether other gambling games were also being allowed on the grounds and whether or not winter racing was cruelty to animals. Among those questioned were John Condon, the track's manager; Tom O'Hara, owner and trainer; George W. Poole, David Waldo and J. G. Reynolds. The testimony of the horsemen was all to one effect, viz: that racing horses in the winter did not hurt them, that on the contrary it did them good, while at the same time it opened up a larger market for breeders of racing stock and prevented the market from being glutted. The pool-selling and bookmaking came in for a large share of attention from the visiting solons, and Representative Sulzer managed to pick several winners during the afternoon. The examination of the track manager brought out the fact that several notable improvements had been planned in the vicinity of the track, and that the building of a large summer hotel and several handsome pavilions on the lake front had been contemplated; also a pier where boats could land all through the summer months. Representative Sulzer said before taking his departure for Indianapolis: "The track and the management have been badly misrepresented by the press of the state, and as a result public opinion has been worked up to a high pitch against it. We had been told that games of all kinds were in full blast here and that it was frequented by only the worst classes. We found nothing of the sort, but, on the contrary, a well-managed race track, while the crowd was one that would compare favorably with any to be seen at other public places of amusement. It will be hard to make people see things that way, however, I am afraid."

Don't fail to take in Ben Hur at the Opera House, next Friday evening.

Our old democratic friend John B. Lefler, of Frauncesville, is an applicant for the postoffice at that place. He would be the right man in the right place.

WINTER RESORTS OF THE SOUTH.

Jacksonville and Tampa, Fla., and other South Atlantic and Gulf coast resorts can be reached with but one change of cars from Chicago and that at Louisville or Cincinnati, where the Monon makes close connection the L. & N. and Q. and C. Vestibule trains, running through to Florida.

The Monon's day trains are now all equipped with beautiful new Parlor and Dining cars, while its night trains are made up of Smoking Cars, Day Coaches, and Pullman and Compartment Sleepers, lighted by electricity from headlight to hindmost sleeper.

The Monon has gradually fought its way to the front, making extensive improvements in its roadbed and service, until today it is the best equipped line from Chicago to the South, offering its patrons facilities and accommodations second to none in the world, and at rates lower than ever before.
