Valuable Voice.

There are heights to be reached in every profession, and it is not to be wondered at if those of his own profession are considered superior to those of any other by the enthusiastic artist. Martin, the popular French singer, found food for reflection in an experience which he had with a cab-driver. The incident is related by the author of "Souvenirs d'un Chanteur."

Martin had a voice of great compass and most agreeable sound, of which he was decidedly proud. He had a weakness for drawing out compliments upon it.

One day, as he was being driven through the streets of Paris in a cab, he saw some one passing carelessly in front of the cab, and in danger of being run over.

"Whoa!" he cried in his most sonorous tones. The coachman turned around excitedly.

"O, monsieur!" he cried, "what a beautiful 'whoa'! Ah, if I only had a voice like that!"

"Well, what would you do if you had?" asked Martin, with a smile, believing that he had been recognized, and pleased at the idea that his reputation extended even to the drivers in the streets.

"What would I do, monsieur? Faith, I should become the first coachman in Paris!"

House-Cleaning Work Him Out.

The man of the house took to the sofa in the sitting-room, with a newspaper, directly after breakfast, while his wife went on with the house-cleaning. She was dismantling the front room, and while he pursued the sporting column she carried past him, in turn, seven chairs, three tables, a desk, four foot-stools, all of the pictures, a piano stool, a bookcase and the rest of the furniture.

Then she lugged in a pair of steps and a big pal of water and began to clean.

"Maria, do you want any assistance?" said the man just then, rising and folding his newspaper.

"Not just yet, dear," said Maria.

"Well, then, I think I'll leave you," said he, and he started for the office.

On the way down he told three men that if there was anything that wore him to the skin and bone it was the confounded house-cleaning. Said he: "We are in the midst of it now, and I tell you I'm about used up."—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

How Rosewood Received Its Name.

Many people suppose that rosewood takes its name from its color, but this is a mistake. Rosewood is not red, nor yellow, but almost black. Its name comes from the fact that when first cut it exhales a perfume similar to that of a rose, and although the dried rosewood of commerce retains no trace of this early perfume, the name lingers as a relic of the early history of the wood.

They Must Drink.

Bats can be driven out of any house by depriving them of water. They can live almost indefinitely without food, and when hard pushed will not hesitate to eat each other, but no rat can go twenty-four hours without drink, and if every possible means of obtaining water is taken from them they will desert the vicinity.

These Are Fine Threads.

If your nerves were steady enough to handle the silk worm's threads, and you were to take a carpenter's rule and lay such threads side by side until they covered the space of an inch, you would find, after you had completed the task, that you had handled exactly 1,000 threads.

A Spider's Web Newspaper.

Among recent novelties that of a newspaper printed on the web of a second white spider is chronicled. It is a sheet about 1 1/4 inches, contains two columns of matter, including an English story, and is excellently printed.

There's more philosophy in a woman's little finger than in a man's big hand.

There's more philosophy in a woman's little finger than in a man's big hand.

There's more sympathy in the divine woman's heart.

There's more sympathy in the divine woman's heart.

MASCULINITIES.

Men who lay wagers hatch disappointments.

"Many happy returns," said the wedding guest to the Chicago bride.

The man who claims to be clean in heart ought to have a clean mouth.

Do not forget your children while you are worshipping your ancestors.

Nine tailors may make a man, but they are also pretty sure to break him.

A Brooklyn inventor proposes to tap the earth's interior for heat, and thus save fuel.

The physician is the man who tells you that you need change, and then takes all you have.

The man who has never done any harm has always had to live where he couldn't get an opportunity.

The objection to most perfect people is that they spoil their perfection by knowing how perfect they are.

Never expect women to be sincere so long as they are educated to think that their first aim in life is to please.

When a man can't make a fool of you in any other way, he can do it by repeating in earnest what you said in fun.

The happiness of married life depends upon the power of making small sacrifices with readiness and cheerfulness.

Her: "Can you keep a secret?" She: "Yes, but I don't want to. What's the good of having a secret that you can't tell?"

Why is a young lady just from boarding-school like a building committee? Because she is ready to receive proposals.

At an English wedding recently the bride, in default of a male relative to perform that office, was given away by a younger sister.

HENRY B. MURRAY, Auditor Jasper County, Ind.

March 17, 1893.

DO YOU WANT TO ADOPT A BABY?

Maybe you think this is a new business, sending out babies on application; it has been done before, however, but never have those furnished been so near the original samples as this one. Everyone will exclaim, "Well, that's the sweetest baby I ever saw!" This little black-and-white engraving gives you but a faint idea of the exquisite original.

"Not just yet, dear," said Maria.

"Well, then, I think I'll leave you," said he, and he started for the office.

On the way down he told three men that if there was anything that wore him to the skin and bone it was the confounded house-cleaning. Said he: "We are in the midst of it now, and I tell you I'm about used up."—St. Louis Post Dispatch.
