THE Daily, Weekly and Sunday Issues.

The Sentinel in its several editions reaches more readers in Indiana than any other newspaper published within or without the state.

It is read in every city, town and hamlet.

The Daily is an eight to twelve-page paper of 56 to 84 columns and contains the very latest market reports, in addition to all the important news of the day. It has a special news service from New York, Washington and Chicago.

The Weekly is a mammoth issue of 12 pages and 84 columns, and in addition to the cream of the news of the week includes an invaluable farm and home department, with a variety of special features for all classes of readers.

The Sunday issue contains regularly 20 pages of 140 columns of reading matter, and frequently 24 pages or 168 columns. This issue is much like the Daily, but political topics except as items of news are allowed but little space and the additional columns are used to meet the tastes of those who desire clean, wholesome and entertaining miscellany.

D. P. Baldwin, of Logansport, the other day received the following letter from United States Senator Turpie regarding the passage of the Wilson bill in the Senate:

We are as anxious about the passage of the tariff bill as the people can be at home. Sometimes I think our friends do not realize the difficulties of the situation here. We have but one majority in the Senate. A single vote adverse or absent may defeat the measure or any portion of it. It follows that differences among the friends of the measure must be adjusted before it is reported to the open Senate. Dissent there might be fatal; discussion between the friends and enemies of the measure will do no injury, though we shall participate very sparingly in that, because action now is better than debate, and of debate there has been sufficient, but intestine quarrels between the friends of the measure must, if possible, be prevented. No friend of the measure wishes any delay. All favor dispatch, but the differences in detail require time. Every one is at work upon these differences. We must, in the nature of things, have a close deliverance, but I think the result will be unanimity and that the bill will be passed as it came from the House, with its primary policy untouched—that of taxation for revenue.

We reproduce the letter of Senator Turpie this week in order that some who may have overlooked it may understand where the trouble lies, and be patient. With but one majority; Hill hell-bent on thwarting every reform proposed by Mr. Cleveland, and Brice and Gorman, mine owners, seeking to secure their personal interests, it will readily seen that the Senate must move cautiously and considerately to procure the passage of the Wilson bill.

WHAT IS SAID ABOUT IT.

A Washington special to the Indianapolis News, referring to the appointment of postmaster at this city:

"Hanan's appointment" as postmaster at Rensselaer is a case of political reward, long deferred. He was a candidate eight years before Mr. Cleveland's first administration, but failed to secure the appointment.

These are no doubt the reasons given by Mr. Hammond, but they will fail to satisfy. He had every assurance from those who had a right to know that the claim had not even a shadow to rest upon. In fact his chief engineer eight years ago, who labored under the delusion that he had the distribution of patronage in this county, made no such claim. Per contra, our claim on long, continuous and faithful service was voluntarily and cheerfully pressed by that veteran of veterans, Gen. M. D. Manson, U. S. Senator Turpie, ex-Congressman Patton, Senators Kopelke, of Lake and Porter, and Magee of Cass, Chairman and members of the White county Democratic committee, and all the Jasper county committee excepting two or three, bankers and business men of Rensselaer, hundreds of our Democratic fellow citizens, and with one or two exceptions the entire press of the district—and they spoke from personal knowledge. If Mr. Hammond will say that he was overpersuaded by the "rich Irish brogue" of a gentleman outside of this district we may concur with him, although we might not appreciate his susceptibility and pliability.

The Rensselaer Republican seeks to create political capital. We extract:

"* * * McEwen the old and faithful * * * shelved for one whose active part in politics had been comparatively slight." * * *

Again:

"Mr. Hanan had no claim at all in comparison." * * * "His pull is the pull of his church." * * *

The latter clause is all bosh—

We note, with pleasure, that Mr. Banta, the well and favorably known agent of the Dayton, Ohio, Nurseries is making his annual rounds of this and adjoining counties. Mr. B. has been making this route for the past seven or eight years and has made an extensive acquaintance. He is highly esteemed and his mode of fair dealing has made friends of all with whom he has come in contact.

simply an attempt to boom the A. P. A. movement, which is expected to be utilized as a tail to the Republican kite in the coming campaign. Mr. Cleveland makes no religion of test. Our clever young friend, the chairman of the Jasper county republican committee took a deep interest in Mr. Hanan's behalf. The attaches of the office, Mr. H.'s family, republican, too. These things should have been considered by our neighbors before making the onslaught. Besides, he should remember that he has been the recipient of Mr. Hanan's business patronage, something we have not even shared in since we were a competitor with him for the p. o. eight years ago.

"The chairman of the republican county committee was the best pleased man in Rensselaer with the appointment, and our neighbor should keep in line with him. * * * Bro. McEwen, the faithful servant of every democratic administration since Jackson's time, is left chewing the cud of disappointment. Poor Mac! He wasn't recent enough to suit this administration."—Monticello Herald.

Ah, there, Bruce! You are sufficiently well acquainted with us to know that we are not a democrat of the patronage and revenue grade. We are a democrat wholly from principle, and do not hold Mr. Cleveland and his administration responsible for Mr. Hammond's blunder.

ANOTHER OUTRAGE.

Congressman Hammond has recommended Edward P. Hanan for postmaster at Rensselaer. We unhesitatingly pronounce this appointment one of the most infamous of the many rank appointments made by the mis-representative from this district.

Editor James McEwen was an applicant for the position and ever since a few weeks after the election he was cajoled by Mr. Hammond into believing that he was the favored man. Between the two applicants we do not pretend to judge, but for Mr. Hammond to turn down one of the oldest and most deserving Democrats in the district and one of the oldest Democratic editors in the State after keeping him in anxious expectancy for more than a year, is an outrage.—Lake County News, Democratic.

Congressman Hammond has recommended Edward P. Hanan for postmaster at Rensselaer and John F. Major to the same position at Remington. We are sorry that Mr. Hammond could not see his way clear to give the Rensselaer office to our old friend James McEwen who by long years of party service, certainly merits some recognition. Mr. Hammond's appointment at Remington was a knockout blow for Joe Peffy, one of the energetic young democrats of that town and the recognition of an element that has done little for democracy, except to absorb all the official pap that the influence of Dan Voorhees and other friends could throw that way.—White County Democrat.

We do not think Senator Voorhees interfered in the matter, but are rather inclined to believe we see the same fine hand which dictated the appointment at this place.

The Morocco Courier, whose editor is one of the most reliable Democrats in Newton county, says:

"We learn that E. P. Hanan has been appointed post master at Rensselaer. Thus it is that our friend McEwen, of the Sentinel, has again received the 'devil's thanks' for his many years of untiring labor for his party."

"All is again quiet in Carroll county. The war is over. The blue bells blow their blower in the quiet streets of Delphi unmolested. Editor Isherwood got the postoffice. Our old friend and lover Brother McEwen of the Rensselaer Sentinel fell outside the breastworks, as usual and another fellow got the postoffice.—Fowler Leader.

Ah, Johnnie, we were only stunned by the bursting of a hand grenade in the hands of a supposed friend. But we are again at our post doing battle for Democratic principles which are always right. There is a legitimate way and proper place for settling individual differences.

NECK AND NECK.

A few weeks ago the Republican printed what purported to be the creed of the A. P. A., and pronounced it very good. This week the P. Pilot gives it space and also pronounces it good. The Republican and P. Pilot are now neck and neck for the organ ship of the party 'scared at the pope'.

They have an unusually good outfit, and challenge the county to beat their big run of Saturday, March 3d, when they sawed 7,000 feet of lumber.

Chas. Paxton, of Albany, Ind., visited relatives and friends in Rensselaer and vicinity this week.

Geo. W. Burk, becoming tired of city life, has moved back to his farm.

HE STOPPED A PANIC.

Millionaire Armour's Wonderful One-Day Record in Chicago.

Philip D. Armour, of Chicago, is an indefatigable worker. Here is a record of one day's work during the panic time of the summer of 1893. Chicago suffered then as the rest of the country did under the severe stroke of depression. But Chicago had something more than her business reputation to maintain. There was the exhibition. No white feather should be shown for the White City's sake. Still, in that trying time, it was courage like Armour's that saved the exhibition from passing into the hands of a receiver. Chicago stood together, and with true civic zeal saved the threatened misfortune and enabled the World's Fair to pass on to its triumphant conclusion. One morning Armour learned at his office that in the distress of the hour a "run" had set in upon the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank. "This must be stopped," said he. "There were two reasons for his zeal: first, the maintenance of the general credit of the city, which would be shaken in the probable event of a 'run' upon the bank; second, the fact that his eldest son was a director in the assaulted institution.

Armour quietly left his office and mixed with the throng in front of the bank. He went about among the depositors and pledged his own credit to induce them to leave their funds where they were. He remained in the crowded street all day and personally persuaded hundreds of the depositors to return to their homes. At the end of the day he arranged for a meeting of prominent Chicago men, to quietly held the next morning, to grapple with the disasters which threatened the city. He called to London and bought half a million dollars in gold on his own account. Then he drove to the Armour Institute, to inspect the equipment then being put into place, and he serenely asked his usual question: "Is anything wanted?" On the way out he learned that the little daughters of an employee were dangerously ill with diphtheria. He went for his accustomed morning run for his almost daily call at the homes of his sons. Then he went home to dinner, and by 9 o'clock he was soundly sleeping, as if nothing had happened. The next morning he walked to his office and on the way left $50 for the stricken family of an employee. He transacted his own business as calmly as ever; went to the bank again, turned away more depositors; and then left for the Mission Hall to play with the little children there. Meanwhile, his action in the crowd, and his purchase of gold, had set an example for other men; confidence began to set in once more; the tide was turned.

A RUSTLING COLLECTOR.

He Got the Money, But It Took Some Time.

"When I was a youngster of 17," said a successful business man, "I got a job as collector with a man who was about as strict a martinet as I ever saw. He insisted on everything being done just as he said, and there were times when life was verily a burden. But I stuck to him. One day he called me up and handing me a bill on a man I knew, he said for me to take it around and collect it.

"It's one of our standbys," he said, 'and every collector I ever sent to him, and he paid me for it. I don't care how long it takes, but I don't come back here till you see him.'"

"Do you mean that?" I asked, as two or three clerks looked up.

"You know me," was all he said in reply, and I went out after my man. He wasn't at home, the people said, and wouldn't be for six weeks. So I stuck the bill in my pocket and went off up the country for a visit. The old man sent after me half a dozen times, but my folks could only tell I was out of town, and I never paid any attention to the letter got from the house, but went on enjoying myself. Then I came back and had a visit with some other friends, and at the end of six weeks I called on my man again with the bill. I found him at home and told him what I had done, and he paid me for it. I stuck the bill, with interest, in my pocket, and I stepped into the boss's office.

"There, I said, before he had time to gather his wits, 'is the amount of your bill and interest. He was out of town for six weeks, and I couldn't see him before. You told me not to come back till I did see him and I was obeying your instructions. I had a rattling good time and the house owes me six weeks' salary.'"

The old man gasped, got blue in the face and I thought he was going to explode; but he didn't. He gulped it all down and stuck out his hand.

"Young man," he said, 'you ought to have been a soldier. I am going to put you in charge of the collection department and double your salary, and I'll conclude the merchant, 'when I was 25 I was a partner.'"

Taking Life Easy.
"One of the most noticeable changes that have come about in my experience," says a Maine traveler of fifty years, "is in the evening life of the towns and cities. Why, it isn't so many years ago that in any Maine city the places of business would all be open at an evening. Lawyers would be in their offices, the mechanics in their shops, the merchants in their stores, and everybody pegging away busily. Mills and factories even would run until 7:30. Now going through almost any Maine city or other home circle, the club or the theater has the people. Perhaps fifty years hence we'll no longer work afterwards."—Kennebec Journal.

During the Honeymoon.
Mr. Pinks—"My wife has no sympathy with this female emancipation movement. She says woman's sphere is the home."

Mrs. Strongmild—"When were you married?"

Mr. Pinks—"Last week."—Puck.

Warm, Indeed.
"I was very much touched by the warmth of my father-in-law's affection," said the young man who talks about his private affairs.
"Indeed, how was it expressed?"
"By the present of a ton of coal."

A VICTIM OF BARGAINS.

This Man Is a Prey to the Marls of Economy for Good Reasons.

"I am a victim," began the man with the long hair, as he unfolded the newspaper and dropped into a seat on a train beside an acquaintance, says the New York Herald. "I am a victim of my wife's taste, enterprise and economy."

"But, I say, old man, you ought to get a hair-cut."

"That's what I say, but by wife won't have it. She says I look more distinguished with long hair."

"Say, I never saw you with a red tie before. You were always very particular about those things."

"I know, I know," said the other wearily. "I thought I had taste and I think so yet, but what am I going to do? This tie," and he gave it a savage pull with his forefinger. "was purchased at a sale—39 cents it cost—and I have to wear it to prevent a row. My wife says it looks swell."

"See those cuffs? Well, they are twelve, and my size is ten and a half. They came off the bargain counter, too, at the rate of two pairs for 38 cents. Cheap! But I have to put ticks in them, so they will fit inside my coat sleeves."

He gradually warmed up to his subject. "You ought to see my underwear. Job lots, every piece; fragments. Some are too large and some are too small. See this hat? It came home in pink paper and cost $1.98. I wear a seven; this is seven and three-quarters. There is one morning and two evening newspapers in the band, so it will fit."

"But it was a bargain, sure. My hats cost me $5. You ought to be glad you're married. You must be saving money at that rate."

"Bargain? Bah! Don't talk to me of bargains. I'm sick of the word. I hear of bargains from morning to night, and sometimes during the night. I shouldn't be surprised if my wife should pick up a tombstone because it was cheap and would have to be used some time."

"And as for saving money! Whew! All the trouble and cash I get for bargains. She has two trunks full of bargain goods that she says will come in handy some day. I live surrounded by a junk-shop, but for the sake of peace don't dare to say a word."

He leaned slightly forward as he spoke and there was a sharp click. He put his hand around to his back with a pained expression.

"What's the matter? Hurt yourself?"

"Oh, no," he said grimly. "Two of the latest suspender buttons bought at a bargain counter have parted the web and my 2-cent suspender has broken. Say you haven't a safety pin or a couple of feet of cord, have you?"

Well Disguised.

She—"Leander Chumpleigh doesn't look like an actor, does he?"

He—"No; and he doesn't act like one, either."—Life.
