William B. Allison figured in Oakes Ames' little red memorandum book which momentarily shattered the reputation of many a professedly Christian republican statesman. He received ten shares of the stock of a corporation organized for the purpose of making enormous and illicit profits out of the construction of a road built through liberal land grants and large subventions from the United States.

But the fact will not, it may be presumed, disturb in the slightest Mr. Allison's standing in the republican party nor take from him one iota of his chance for the nomination at St. Louis.

Other gentlemen of the republican party figured in the Credit Mobilier. Mr. Garfield was a shareholder, but Mr. Garfield, nominated at Chicago in 1880, overthrew republicans who never held a share of Credit Mobilier stock, was elected President of the United States by the republican party and immediately chose for secretary of state James G. Blaine, another Credit Mobilier statesman. Mr. Colfax was vice president of the United States from 1872 to 1876. Mr. Colfax was also a Credit Mobilier statesman. Mr. Blaine was nominated by the republican party for the presidency in 1884 and narrowly escaped election, yet Mr. Blaine was the member of the house who urged the passage of the bill, opposed by E. B. Washburn, postponing the government's first lien upon the construction to the second place, a maneuver imperative as a condition precedent to the carrying out of the Credit Mobilier scheme, which involved the necessary authority to give a first mortgage bond on the construction, for it was proposed to pay the construction company in bonds. Oakes Ames pointed the way to operations of many a construction company that, having public grants given it of one kind or another, have taken their profit from shareholders and the public through the operation of a Credit Mobilier. Chicago has repeatedly witnessed the operation.

Were the standard of American honor higher no party would dare to present to the entire electorate of the United States as a presidential candidate a man tainted at all with prostitution of his place or his vote to sordid selfishness. But the republican party thinks nothing of choosing as its standard bearers men who have been proven recreant to that rule of honesty which ought to be maintained as of course by every American statesman.

Few of these reach the high standard of Bayard, who when approached by this tempter of Massachusetts with his offer of Credit Mobilier stock, declined to discuss the proposition in any other view than that the corporation had no application to make to congress on which he would be fitted to act officially, as he could not consistently with his views of duty vote upon a question in which he had a pecuniary interest.

How often republican statesmen are found furthering their own interests as senators or representatives of the people. When Wainwright Miller was a senator from New York he was particularly looking after the tariff on wood pulp, in the manufacture of which he was interested. Sawdust Sawyer of Wisconsin as a senator was more concerned about the tariff on lumber than about any service he could render to the people of the United States. Leland Stanford sat not as a senator of the United States, but as a senator of the Pacific railways, the very same out of which and the public contribution to which, now in arrears, grew the scandalous Credit Mobilier.—Chicago Chronicle

Senator Billee Chandler, of New Hampshire, now confesses that he assented to a cowardly compromise by which McKinley's name was placed beside Reed's in the republican convention of his state. He is now in sorrow. "I acquiesced," he says, "in such an act of cowardice once before, when we allowed a resolution to pass at the New Hampshire convention in '77 that Hayes' administration was good and pure rather than have a bitter controversy over the question whether its conduct had been dishonorable in surrendering to the democratic usurpers the local government of Louisiana and S. Carolina, whose title was as good as that of Mr. Hayes."

Very true. Fraud Hayes had no title. Billee belonged to a gang of thieves at that time.

LA FAYETTE, IND., May 2, 1894.

Lyon Medicine Co., Indianapolis, Ind.

GENTLEMEN—It is with pleasure that I can conscientiously say a good word for LYON'S SEVEN WONDERS. For more than a year I was troubled with indigestion and stomach disorders. Various remedies which I tried gave me no relief, until one day last summer I was told by a brother drummer of the virtues of LYON'S SEVEN WONDERS. I concluded to try it, and am happy to say one box, costing only one dollar, entirely cured me. To those who suffer as I did I would strongly advise them to use LYON'S SEVEN WONDERS.

Yours truly,

Your Uncle Benny will be the nominee. He proposes to have the lightning strike him, apparently against his wishes. Benny is cold, shrewd and tricky.

There is plenty of money in this country for all legitimate purposes. The trouble is that through republican legislation it is not well distributed. The work of concentration has been going on until half the wealth is held by a few individuals.

J. no. Wanamaker, who raised the $400,000 corruption fund for Harrison in 1888, from the Pennsylvania manufacturers alone, and was made postmaster general therefor, has been convicted of violating the contract labor law, and heavily fined.

Shiriff Dobbins, of White county, visited Rensselaer today.

A fire broke out today in Spitler & Kight's laundry, which for a time threatened serious results, but was finally subdued by the fire ladders.

Sam Lee, laundryman, was fined, cos'ed and jailed the other day for indulging in a cutting bee.

George, fourteen year old son of T. A. Crockett, a few days since had the end of a finger taken off by a wheelbarrow.

Colleen Bawn drew one of the largest throngs to the Opera House Tuesday evening that ever assembled there, standing room being at a premium. The play, which abounded in comical and dramatic scenes, pleased and interested all. The company was a strong and capable one, each player exhibiting marked talent and ability. The realistic cave scene, wherein Danny Mann attempted to drown Eily O'Connor, was a most interesting feature.—Carroll County Citizen.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS.

Monday, April 20th, 1896, being the third Monday in April, is the last day for the payment of the April installment of the taxes of 1895. All taxes not paid on or before the above day, will incur the penalty of 10 per cent.

Those having taxes to pay are requested to call early and avoid the delay of the last few days of tax-paying time.
