An Object Lesson in Tin-Plate. The growth of the tin-plate industry in the United States during the last two years emphasizes the superiority of a moderate tariff over a high protective one in increasing manufacturing prosperity. While the McKinley schedule of duties was in existence the American tin plate company at Elwood, Ind., was a four-mill plant, employing 300 men, with a pay-roll of $3,000. After an experience of a little over a year of the Wilson bill the same concern has been enlarged to a sixteen-mill twenty-one-stock plant, employing 1,369 men, with a pay-roll of $12,000 per week, and its pay-roll is increased to $15,000.

If the Republicans keep on as they are going now it will only be a few years until they will be quarreling among themselves as to who among them was the first to advocate free trade.—Logansport Pharos.

Get Your Vouchers.

The new pension law goes into effect at the next drawing, May 4, and it involves a condition that should be known beforehand to every veteran that he may have no difficulty nor delay in getting his money. The purport of the law is that every veteran shall draw his money by mail. None can go to Indianapolis and draw. To draw by mail every veteran must send his voucher in. Those who have been drawing by mail will have these vouchers, but those who have not, will have to send in previous to the draw and get them. It is anticipated that a great number over the state will not understand this previous to their attempt to make their draw and will consequently be delayed for ten days or more.

The Republicans are quarreling among themselves over the authorship of the reciprocity clause in the McKinley tariff. It was known at the time who the author was. Blaine was the man and he said that without reciprocity the McKinley law would not provide a market for another bushel of wheat or barrel of pork. Reciprocity is nothing more than free trade in spots, and the more reciprocal trade we can have with the nations of the earth the greater and richer will our own nation become.

The more goods we can sell abroad the more work for the millions of people coming to our shores. We now produce of farm products 25 per cent more than our own people can use. In many lines of manufacturing our facilities for production are ample to produce a year's supply in six months. The more reciprocity the more markets for our surplus productions.

If the Republicans keep on as they are going now it will only be a few years until they will be quarreling among themselves as to who among them was the first to advocate free trade.—Logansport Pharos.
