Representative Richardson of Tennessee, stirred up the republican manager in the noise of the other day by repeating the minister and man's joke about the only two things he ever saw that were exactly alike—the love and the Mc-Kinley boom and when the republicans started in to talk "prosperity," they were asked what "prosperity" had brought about a strike of 125,000 cotton mill operatives in New England, and made quite a mess of their attempts to explain that unusual accompaniment of "prosperity." Grosvenor, of Ohio, got himself so tied up that he sought to escape by a bit of personal blackguardism, calling Mr. Greene, of Nebraska, a backwoodsman. He and his party will find lots of backwoodsmen of the same sort next November, and every one of them will cast an anti-republican vote.

This is what Senator Teller said of this era of "prosperity": "I do not know, perhaps, but have tried to learn. I have given this question hours of study that few men have, and I believe that this is the greatest question that the money question threatens not only this people, but the enslavement of mankind throughout the world. I said in 1893, to my countrymen: 'You are entering upon an era of industrial slavery such as the world has never seen.' Mr. President, it is here now. With all your boasted prosperity you are closing the mills of New England, and deducting from the wages of the laboring man 10, 15 and 20 per cent, and making it impossible for him to perform the duties of citizenship, and then you tell us that all these things are done in the interest of honor, and labor must stand it. But the bond holder gets the bounty."

The annual catalogue sent out by the old reliable seed establishment of James Vick's Sons, comes to hand in a dainty cover of blue, pink, yellow and orange. The Golden Lily, the Pink Daybreak Aster, a brace of blue birds, and the artistic lettering in black, blue crimson and gold, all in harmonious combinations, make a cover of exquisite design and appearance. Many of the illustrations are fine half-tones. Four handsome colored plates of begonias, dahlias nasturtiums and sweet peas add to the attractions. The list of seeds and plants covers a large and varied assortment, including nearly everything that can be desired for the garden, the lawn, the greenhouse, and the stable new varieties are as well as the thoroughly tried and proved standard sorts. Vick's novelties are noted for their uniform excellence. In vegetables the Grand pea is a great advance over all other "extra early" varieties. The Jones Wax Bean is an essential gain in that line. Potato growers are off-red the "White Beauty" as a new variety with model qualities, combining size, high quality and great productive-ness. But it is impossible here to note the many valuable offerings of this firm in fruits, flowers and vegetables. If you are not a customer of this firm send for their catalogue. It is free to all applicants. Address Jas. Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y.

THE CONQUEROR'S GRAVE.

William I. Was So Disliked That His Body Was Refused a Burial.

Duke William of Normandy, whose sturdy rule in England imparted to the Anglo-Saxon race much of its thrift and enterprise, was a native of the little town of Caen in Normandy. About 1000 he was illegally married to Matilda, a princess of Flanders. To obtain papal interference on behalf of the dual pair, Bishops Lanfranc and Bee were dispatched to Rome. They soon returned to Caen bearing with them a dispensation which ratified the illegal marriage. But so great a favor could not be granted without corresponding penance on the part of the illustrious sinners. Accordingly with the dispensation came the command for each to rear and maintain a monastery for the education of religious persons of their respective sexes.

While the masons were at work erecting the monasteries the shipbuilders were building the great ships which were soon to carry to England the victorious troops of Duke William, after he had subdued Britain with his iron hand, he returned to Normandy to punish the King of France, who had been encroaching upon the rights of the vassals of the Norman duke. It was during this expedition that William fell from his horse, sustaining injuries which subsequently caused his death.

At the time of his death he was so thoroughly disliked even by those who had gained his position for him that his body remained upon the ground for some time before anyone could be found who had enough regard for the dead duke to give his body a decent burial. At last, through compassion, Herwin, a rustic knight, but perfect gentleman, took possession of the neglected, half-naked corpse of William, and conveyed it to the Caen upon the waters of the Orne. Here he sought to find for it a last resting place in the abbey which the dead monarch had built years before. A serious fire broke out as the procession was forming on the quay, and again every one rushed away to look after his own, and the body was left to the almost solitary care of Herwin. Once in the abbey and the dignitaries resembled, things seemed to go a little smoother.

However, the funeral oration extolling the virtues of the deceased had come to an end when Ascelin, a knight, raised himself upon a stone and cried: "This ground where ye stand was the site of my father's house, which the man for whom ye pray, while he was yet but Count of Normandy, took away by force from my father, and in spite of law and justice, built this church upon it by his might. I therefore claim the land; I challenge it as mine before all men, and in the name of God I forbid that the body of the robber be covered with my mould, or that he be buried within the bounds of mine inheritance."

Naming a Texas Boy.

A strange communication was received by Congress last previous to its last adjournment. The letter came from a small settlement in Northeastern Texas, and was addressed to "The Congress of the United States in Washington Assembled." The writer, who had penned the lines in an entirely earnest spirit, related how a boy had been born to him and his wife Amanda and they could not agree on a name to call the youngster. "Now, what we want," concluded the Texan, "is to have a document passed through your hands naming him a handle." The letter was the private secretary of Congress, and he came to him. Calling several of the employes around the House, after he communicated the contents of the missive to them and they agreed to place the matter before a committee of the House and accordingly a name. Accordingly a formal resolution, sticklers in their formalities, were drafted, with seal and signature properly fixed, and the letter was forwarded to the writer. They informed the Texan that the Congress had taken cognizance of his communication and acted accordingly. "The Congress," exercising a noble self-satisfaction, said the resolutions, "has designated, denominates, and names your offspring after the manner of the Lone Star State, and is known that his name shall be Bailey Chilton Mills."

Reclaiming Wetlands. Large tracts of sand wetlands now being reclaimed along the coast. Series of parallel levees, built up seaward, closely interwoven with wires and furze, and spaces between these posts are filled with earth and road scrapings. In these various trees, such as sycamores, willow, pine and alder, are planted, while the ridges are sown with gorse and broom seed and planted with hedges.

A Croup Cure

Is what many a mother is looking for; something absolutely safe and reliable, that will disarm her terror of that dread rattling, strangling cough, so fearful to the mother, so fatal to the child. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is a croup cure that can be relied on. Thousands say so.

Mrs. W. J. DICKSON ("Stanford Evelett") writes from Truro, N. S.:

"That terror of mothers, the startling, croupy cough, never alarmed me so long as I had a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house."

"We have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in our family for years. Once when our boy had a severe attack of croup, we thought that he would die. But we broke up the attack by using Ayer's Cherry Pectoral."

FEAR IN BATTLE.

The Colonel Says No Man Went Through the War Without Experiencing It.

They were talking about a soldier's feelings in battle and some expressed the opinion that man men went through the civil war without being frightened at any time by their personal danger. It was the colonel, who had gained honors on the battlefield, who answered him as follows:

"When I started out I felt sure that I would never know what the feeling of fear was, and experience taught me that all soldiers went forth with the same impression. God, how I changed my mind during my first skirmish! We were behind an embankment and I was in command. It just rained lead across our heads. Every time a man raised his head above the breastworks it came whizzing off his shoulders as sure as shooting. I got scared. I could feel myself growing colder. I couldn't articulate. My arms grew rigid, and to save me I couldn't have put in a load. All of a sudden it came to me that the men under me knew that I was scared. This thought loomed up my tongue and joints a bit. Then it flashed over me that it would never do for me to let my men know that I was afraid, and that I must do something to prove that I was not. What could I do? The man next to me poked his head up at that point and a minute ball took him right between the eyes. A cold sweat broke out on me, and I was ready to collapse, when all of a sudden it came to me that all would be lost; that I should be ruined if I let my men go on thinking that I was a coward. I seized my field glasses and with a shout leaped to the top of the breastworks. I raised those glasses to my eyes, and for a second our enemy almost stopped firing they were so astonished. I looked from one end of their lines to the other."

"Come down from there, you d—d little fool!" said a rough voice behind me, and I was jerked back into the ditch by a powerful force. "Do you want to get killed?" It was my colonel's voice and his hand that saved me. What did I see through the field glasses? Not a thing. I was too scared. A blind man could have seen more. But I saved my reputation. Many times after that I was frightened in battle, but never so much so, and I never shrank. From that day until the war closed my men adored me, and they thought I never knew what fear was during the whole of those four bloody years."

Devious Definitions.

Cipher—Something that a man can always get for nothing.
Jackpot—A vessel sometimes used for the cooking of "greens."
Ignorance—Sometimes it's bliss, and sometimes it's blisters.
Ambition—The feeling that you want to do something that you can't.
Clove—A scent sometimes used to disguise the breath of suspicion.
Cheat—What the other fellow does when you get the worst of the bargain.
Compromise—An agreement by which both parties get what they don't want.
Elope—Something that a hen lays when she is unable to stand it on.

Miss—Something that is better than a mile if she is neither too old nor too young.

Rapid Turn of Fortune's Wheel.

Good fortune has come to James Wilson after eleven years of penniless wandering on the face of the earth. Wilson was the son of a wealthy New York banker and broker. In 1873 he married a nurse in the family, in spite of parental objections. He went to Australia and lived there for several years with his wife. In 1884 his father died, cutting him off without a cent. He tried to break his father's will, but was unsuccessful, and since 1886 he has led the life of a tramp. He has recently received news in San Francisco that the United States Supreme Court has decided in his favor a suit that will give him a good portion of a $250,000 estate. Wilson is particularly bitter against his relatives, who, when he was sick and hungry, refused him money or food. He is 62 years old.

A Chance for a Match Company.

The Papuans of the Malay coast of New Guinea are still in the most primitive state. They are wholly unacquainted with metals and make their weapons of stone, bone and wood. They do not know how to start a fire, though fire is used among them. When a Russian asked them how they made a fire they regarded it as very amusing, and answered that when a person's fire went out he got some of a neighbor's and if all the fires in the village should go out they would get it from the next village. Their fathers and grandfathers had told them that they remembered a time or had heard from their ancestors that there was a time when fire was not known and everything was eaten raw.

A Straight Tip.

Trainer ("the track")—Bet every cent you can raise on Tippec. He'll win in a walk.

Friend—But the track's muddy. Does he like mud?

Trainer—Does he like mud. Why, that horse positively refuses to eat unless he's standing in it.

HOBBIES FOR ROYALTY.

The Empress Elizabeth of Austria is an accomplished horsewoman. She also delights in her fame as a parricid, and her daughter, the Archduchess Valerie, is proud of her accomplishments in the methods of ancient and modern cuisine. Queen Victoria, whose especial hobby is music, has educated her daughters to be useful as well as accomplished women, and they may all be said to be efficient and artistic. The queen herself likes to study Hindoostanee and to see her favorite dogs and ponies. The queen of the Belgians is a clever nurse and a good doctor, having frequently applied her knowledge in emergencies. The queen of Greece is at the head of an association of women whose object is to the moral regeneration of criminals. The queen of Portugal is more frivolous, having the reputation of being the "most dressy" lady in Europe. Her pale complexion and her auburn hair permit any colors, and she often appears in astonishing colors. The Princess Waldemar of Denmark ranks among the most fashionable of royal ladies.

About the Size of It.

He—The sum of woman's happiness may be put into three words—"I love you."
She—And the sum of man's happiness may also be expressed in three words—"Pay to bearer."

It is hard to convince a schoolboy that summer vacation days are longer than winter school days.
