HENRIK IBSEN.

The Great Norwegian Writer was 70 years old the other day. Ibsen clubs and various other literary and dramatic organizations the world over recently celebrated the 70th birthday of Henrik Ibsen, the great Norwegian writer. Few foreign men of letters have attracted such universal attention as this retiring and frequently almost inaccessible writer. Of his works much is known; of his personality, little.

Ibsen was born in the little town of Skien, in a mountainous region of Norway, and his early life was passed under restrictions that were far from having a tendency to develop the latent genius of the boy. His education was received in a private school under the conduct of two theological students, and later in the university of Christiania. While at college, and even before, he had done considerable writing, and his plays were so well received that, at the close of his college career, he was engaged as dramatic manager of the principal theater of the country. He continued here until the Danes got into trouble with the Prussians in 1864. Then he became disgusted at his own countrymen for not joining the Danes, and began to write caustic epigrams criticizing the spirit of the Norwegian masses. His writings accomplished nothing, but he himself became so disgusted that he left the country and remained in Rome and Dresden about twenty-five years. He wrote many books, and for each there was always a ready sale. His writings have been translated into several languages, and when it becomes known that Ibsen has a new book coming there is a great stir among all classes of people, and the wonder is what the book is to be about.

This is a secret that is withheld from the members of his own family. In his home life Ibsen is a bundle of peculiarities. He has a wife and son, a perfect coast defender at the Water-gate arsenal. The weight of the ingot is ninety-nine and two-tenths tons, and its length will be 126 tons. The length of the gun will be forty-nine feet, and its range will be sixteen miles. This gun, one of six, will be six tons heavier and five feet longer than the biggest gun ever made. It will need a charge of powder weighing 1,000 pounds to fire a projectile weighing 2,500 pounds. This projectile will fly at the rate of 2,000 feet per second. The gun, when erected for business at Roper shoals, New York harbor, will have cost $500,000.

INGOT OF STEEL FOR A BIG GUN.

To My Left Hand.

I envy you your life of rest. You live in luxury. You've never known a care. You've always lived apart from strife—existence sweet and rare.

My right has e'er my writing done, while you have stood aside. You've had your full share of the fun, and yet in peace abode. You've never known a care. You've always lived apart from strife—existence sweet and rare.

And yet, dear friend, I cannot say the time will ever be that there will be the dawn of day when you're not dear to me. My right hand is more useful, yes, but my left hand is more true. You are a friend, I must confess, I cannot do without.

EMBRYONIC TORNADO.

Singular Phenomenon Witnessed at New Orleans, La.

A singular phenomenon recently met the eyes of the good burghers of New Orleans, La. Some excitedly called it a cyclone, others called it a waterspout, and still others dubbed it whirlwind and tornado. Whatever it was, it was, at all events, very active and menacing for a quarter of an hour, and kept a large portion of the community in painful suspense until it disappeared. The whatever-it-was appeared dramatically over Lake Pontchartrain, darting down in a livid, sulphurous haze, and hanging down like a great black icicle from a heavy black ball of clouds. Although a great distance from the center of the city, it could be seen that the cloud cylinder was revolving at a terrible clip in space. For a while it hung gracefully pendant, then by force the centrifugal action began to lift at the bottom until it had assumed the shape of an enormous

His study is a cozy little corner, stored with a collection of well-selected and well-marked books, affording ample conveniences and comforts within, and looking upon a panorama of magnificent scenery without. He is a man of moods. If you can catch him in the humor, you can get from him readily one day what no amount of persuasion could wring from him the next. In the throes of composition he is absolutely inaccessible. He never goes to church, and does not believe in church organizations. He thinks well of Americans, and frequently talks of making an American tour.

Pictureque Costume.

The Princess of Montenegro, the beautiful mother of the Crown Princess of Italy, has been visiting Rome and startling the Romans by wearing her picturesque national costume. When driving she wears a bright scarlet silk cloak thickly embroidered with gold, and on her head a diadem of black velvet glistened with gold coins and gems. For the opera she dresses in cloth of gold.

His Northern Brother.

Yes, sir, I just make it two, old fellow; I want to stand once more beneath the old flag of yore. As in the days of yore, I didn't shrink from Sherman. As I galloped on land and sea, and the battle fierce, I made one more gun for me!

TAKES THE PLUM.

Probably the queerest highway robbery on record.

Of all the unique stories of robbery ever told to the police that which concerns Night Clerk Arnold, of the Somerset Hotel, William Hall, and a few others is awarded the plum. Arnold was approached Saturday night by a dark-faced, good-looking young fellow, who produced a revolver and demanded money.

"I have only 25 cents," answered the night clerk, as he tried to get out of range.

"Got a watch?" inquired the robber, lowering the weapon.

"No, I haven't; this quarter is all I have. I'm a poor man and it strikes me that you ought to whack up on this deal."

"Well," remarked the hold-up man, in a kindly voice, "I'll go with you. Just wait a while till I get some change."

The intruder shoved the pistol into his pocket and departed, and Arnold sat down to brood over his misfortune. He didn't expect for a moment that the despoiler of his pin money meant what he said. He waited—five minutes, ten minutes, and still no robber with the promised rebate returned. He concluded that it might be well to notify the police, when a cherry voice remarked, as a door slammed shut:

"Hello, old man; think I wasn't coming back? Here's the dough—had to go quite a ways down the avenue, but by a simple household remedy, in the morning, you know. I finally woke up a waiter in a restaurant and here's your share of the proceeds; and a dime's enough for coffee and rolls."

After saying this the gentlemanly footpad laid 15 cents on the counter, shook hands cordially with his victim, and in the spirit of the thing did not unkindly toward him, and then departed—Chicago News.

Railroad Building in China.

For more than a year work has been going on for fourteen miles of railroad from Shanghai to Woosung, and the grading has not yet been finished. Not a rail or a rail has been laid. Only Chinese workmen are employed. About a month or two ago the first sod was turned at Hankow for the Hankow-Peking Railway, but its further prosecution depends upon the success of the Belgian syndicate in securing a proposed loan for its construction.

A WORD WITH HUSBANDS.

Give Your Wife a Little Praise and See How It Works.

"If husbands only knew, or, if knowing, only cared, how very much their words and manners affect the temperature of the home world, they would never, by word or deed, leave it enshrouded in gloom," argues Mrs. A. M. Marriot, in Woman's Home Companion.

"To most wives the husband is the sun around which every thought revolves. There is scarcely an instant in which his presence is not felt as she goes about her work, or even when at rest. If she is preparing the meals, the way John looks this or that, or some remark he has made about some article of food is recalled to mind; if she looks about her she sees his hats and coats hanging on the hooks, and the hats invariably wear the same expression John's face wore when he left in the morning; a jolly, good-humored look, if even a way pleasant; if angry, a gruff, defiant, attend-to-your-own-business air takes the place of the so lately gentle pliant shapes in felt, and fairly bristle with wrath over some trifling, but still enough to obscure the sun in the little world for many a weary day, perchance, ere it is seemingly forgotten.

"There is no true woman but will repay her husband over and over again for kind, thoughtful treatment. He is ready to call her childish, and she may seem so to him; but one thing is sure—a woman never forgets. All little deeds of love or thoughtfulness sown by her hand yield a certain and abundant harvest. She may love her home better than any other spot on earth, yet she sometimes gets so weary of the daily routine of never-ending duties that fail to her lot that she cannot help an occasional feeling of envy for those who have more time for recreation, for going abroad, for all the little things dear to the heart of every woman, but which the stern hand of duty most effectually debar her from enjoying. Still, for all that, she would not for the whole world exchange places, even if she could, with any other woman, leaving home and John—dear old John—as the price of her freedom from care."

"If you wife has been a faithful and true wife to you, tell her so. Do not think it lowers your manliness any to let her know that she still has a place in your affections. She has toiled early and late for you and your children, through sickness and health, and self-denial has grown to be her motto. It takes but little from her loved ones to make her happy, so do not begrudge her a word of praise now and then as her just reward, and of far more value to her starving heart than gold. There are some things which money can never buy, and which it is not worth the while to level at obstacles, overcome all difficulties, and immeasurably sweeten life."

INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM.

From St. Lawrence Placidville, N.Y.

To suffer for years with a prevailing painful ailment, yet which was cured by a simple household remedy, in the morning, you know. I finally woke up a waiter in a restaurant and here's your share of the proceeds; and a dime's enough for coffee and rolls."

THE SECRET OF A GOOD DISPOSITION.

Mrs. Pinkham Says a Careful Regard for Bodily Health Makes Women Sweet and Attractive to All.

The world is filled with sweet women who are held back from usefulness by some trouble of the stomach or organs. Prefatness and nervousness rapidly destroy sweet dispositions. Sickly all-worn-out women cannot live happy lives. Nearly every woman may be well and happy if she will follow Mrs. Pinkham's advice. See what Mrs. Craig says:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and think it is the best medicine for women in the world. I was so weak and nervous that I thought I could not live from one day to the next. I had prostrated uteri and leucorrhoea, and thought that I would die. I had dragging pains in my back, burning sensation down to my feet, and so many miserable feelings. People said that I looked like a dead woman. Doctors tried to cure me, but failed. I had given up when I heard of the Pinkham medicine. I got a bottle. I did not have much faith in it, but I thought I would try it, and it made a new woman of me. I wish I could get every lady in the land to try it, for it did for me what doctors could not do."

—MRS. SALLIE CRAIG, Baker's Landing, Pa.

That Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a safeguard of woman's health is clearly proven by the thousands of letters constantly being received. Here is one from Mrs. W. P. VALENTINE, 566 Ferry Ave., Camden, N. J.:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Before writing to you I felt very bad, had terrible sick headaches, no appetite, gnawing pain in stomach, pain in my back and right side; was tired and nervous, and so weak I could scarcely stand. I was not able to do anything, had sharp pains all through my body. Before I had taken half a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I found myself improving. I continued its use until I had taken four bottles, and felt so well that I did not need to take any more. I am like a new person."
