

DAILY NEWS

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 31, 1880.

THE CITY.

NOTICE.

The public will take notice that all bills due to and from the DAILY NEWS up to March 31st, will be settled by Seaman, Lewis & Co., and that on and after March 31, 1880, E. P. Beauchamp alone will be responsible for business contracts in the name of the DAILY NEWS.

SEAMAN, LEWIS & CO.
E. P. BEAUCHAMP.

→ This issue of the DAILY NEWS has been gotten out so hurriedly that it does not present the neat appearance it has heretofore. By to-morrow everything will be regulated, and it will look like a "daisy."

→ A splendid Republican meeting was held in Otter Creek township last night. Col. Nelson made one of his characteristically good speeches. L. A. Burnett, and Isaac N. Pierce of this city and Fred Lee, of Riley township attended.

→ The Indianapolis Herald says of J. W. Riley: He is an inimitable imitator, and can mimic tones, language, gesture, as no other man can that we ever saw, and he can do better; he can put himself into character and BE it, as well as imitate it.

* * * Nothing so exquisitely funny was ever seen on the stage of the Park. It is not farcical. There is no low comedy in it. The humor is as delicate as that in Charles Lamb's account of the Origin of Roast Pig.

* * * His perception of character is as keen as Joe Jefferson's, and more sensitive to delicate traits.

Notice.

Seaman, Lewis & Co. owe a few dollars in the city. And a few dollars are owing S. L. & Co. We want to make exchanges. Will you who owe us pay, so that we can ditto?

A printer's widow in Germany, while a new Bible was printing at her house, one night went into the office to alter the sequence of subjection to her husband pronounced upon Eve in Genesis iii, 16. She altered the sentence, "And he shall be thy lord" (Herr) to "And he shall be thy fool" (Narr.) For this liberty she lost her life. Copies of this edition have been bought at enormous prices. An edition of the Bible is known to book collectors as the "Vinegar Bible," from the error which changed the reading "Parable of the Vineyard" to "Parable of the Vinegar."

A San Francisco correspondent of the Baltimore Sun writes: "Mules are much used here packing goods over mountains impracticable for wheels. They are driven loose, often twenty in a lot. To prevent straying, a white horse with a bell is put in the lead. The herd accepts his lead; they listen for his bell and never stray. But put a colored horse in his place and he is not noticed. Put any kind of a fellow-mule there and they treat him with contempt. This dogged superstition seems founded on some dogma to which all mules are wedded. If your team passed on a dark night, a white horse at pasture, they are sure to see a ghost, snort, tremble and be off."

A Zandam "Fire-Woman."

A good many of the children in the street were carrying painted iron or stone buckets, with a tea-kettle on the top. After proceeding some distance up the street, Will and Martin saw some of them coming out of a basement doorway, still with the buckets in their hands, but clouds of steam were issuing from the tea-kettle spout.

"What place is that?" asked Will. "It is the fire-woman's," said Greta. "And who and what may she be? I have heard of water-women, sometimes called mermaids, but never before did I hear of a fire-woman."

"She don't live in fire," said Greta; "she sells it. What do the poor people in your country do in summer without a fire-woman? Come and look in." By this time they had reached the place. Over the door was the sign "Water en vuur te koop." It was not necessary for the children to go inside. They could see the whole apartment through the wide-open doorway. An old woman stood by a stove, or great oven, with a pair of tongs, taking up pieces of burning peat and dropping them into the buckets of the children, and then filling their tea-kettles with boiling water from great copper tanks on the stove. For this each child paid her a Dutch cent, which is less than half of one of ours.

"I understand it," said Will, after they had stood at the door some time, amused at the scene. "This saves poor people the expense of a fire in the summer-time. They send here for hot water to make their tea."

"Yes," said Greta, "and for the burning peat which cooks the potatoes and the sausage for their supper."

"Why don't they use coal?" asked Martin. "It is ever so much better."

"No, the peat answers their purpose much better," said Will. "It burns slowly, and gives out a good deal of heat for a long time."

"And it smells so delicious," added Greta.

It will never do to think too highly of yourself or to imagine that you have some special claim on the respect of men because of your ancestry. The world, which loved your father because it had good reason to, will instinctively, for awhile at least, lift its hat to your father's son; too, but unless you are the worthy son of your father it will soon learn to stand in your presence cooled, and even defiant. Therefore do not look down on people as though they were nothing, and with the feeling that you were made from a different kind of clay. For centuries a morceau has been floating on the surface of Hebrew literature to the following effect;—A copper penny and a gold coin were once lying side by side on a shelf in a mint. The gold coin said scornfully, "Little penny, get out of my way. You are intended for poor men, while I am the coin that kings use." The penny moved away to the other end of the shelf, simply murmuring, "You cannot always tell what destiny may have in store." After awhile a stingy miser came, bought the gold coin and buried it in the earth for safe keeping. The penny was given to a poor man whose brother had just been sold as a slave. He went to the Sultan and pleaded with him for his brother's liberty, promising to give his life and all he had if only his brother could be saved. "Your life and all that you have?" said the Sultan. Then the poor man drew the penny, the bright new penny, forth and answered, "This is all I have in the world. I will willingly give you that and my life, and my gratitude beside." The Sultan's heart was touched. He took the little coin and said, "Your brother shall be saved, and I will wear this penny on a golden chain upon my breast in token of the great love which binds a brother to a brother." So the proud gold coin was hidden in the earth and was lost, while the copper penny adorned the breast of a Sultan. It is better not to be overbearing and proud of your birth, for you can never predict the circumstances by which you may be surrounded.

Before and After.

"Save me, doctor, and I'll give you a check for a thousand dollars." The doctor gave him a remedy that soon eased him, and he called out: "Keep at it, doctor, and I'll give you a check for five hundred dollars." In an hour more he was able to sit up, and he calmly remarked: "Doctor, I feel like giving you a fifty dollar bill." When the doctor was ready to go, the sick man was up and dressed, and he followed the physician to the door, and said: "Say doctor, send in your bill the first of the month." When six months had been gathered to Time's bosom, the doctor sent in a bill amounting to five dollars. He was pressed to cut it down to three, and after so doing, he sued to get it, got judgment, and the patient put in a stay of execution.

Among the young ladies who sat at the receipt of customs in a western church fair, and retailed kisses at the nominal value of ten cents each, was a vinegar-visaged old maid, who had crowded herself in on the gaudy pretense that she felt it her duty to do her share toward helping along the good cause. When it came time for closing, the young ladies turned over to the church treasury from $5 to $10 apiece, while the ancient female handed in a solitary dime, the value of one kiss that she received from a blind man whose taste was so vitiated by tobacco-chewing that he was unable to detect the imposition.

BENEFITS OF LAUGHING.—"He who laughs can commit no deadly sin," says the mother of Goethe. "I am persuaded," said Sterne, "that every time a man smiles—but much more so when he laughs—it adds something to his fragment of life." Douglas Jerrold, the prince of modern wit, exclaims: "Let materialists blaspheme as gingerly and acutely as they will, they must find confusion in laughter." And yet laughter is akin to weeping, for true humor is closely allied to pity, paradoxical as it may seem.

To the Relatives and Friends of Dead Soldiers.

One of the primary objects of the Grand Army of the Republic is to perpetuate the memory and history of dead comrades—those who died in the service, as well as those since the close of the rebellion. To carry out this provision of the association, it is desired by Morton Post, No. 1, of Terre Haute, to have a complete record of the military history of all who may be buried in the vicinity of this city, and particularly those in the city cemetery. The undersigned have been appointed by the Post a committee to compile and prepare such record, and we desire it to be as full and correct as possible, as it is designed for preservation as a permanent record. We, therefore, call on the relatives and friends of any soldier buried in this city to furnish us the following information: Name in full; where born; age at time of death; branch of service, as infantry, cavalry, artillery—company and regiment; rank; date and manner of death—if killed in action, give name of battle; if wounded in service, when and where; and any other information of interest as regards the soldier's military history. If convenient give the section and number of lot where buried in the city cemetery; which will aid us in designating the grave by number on a map of the cemetery, so that our memorial day decoration service can be properly performed. It is to be hoped that this call will be responded to. The men of 1861-5 are rapidly passing away, and we, their survivors, can honor their memory by preserving a record of their services. The military history of every member of our organization is a part of the record of each post, and we want to add that of our comrades who "went before." The information asked for can be given in person to either of the committee, or sent through the mail.

An Appeal for Help.

To the friends of moral and religious progress, and also to the friends of Allen Chapel, A. M. E. church, corner Third and Sheets street, Terre Haute:

We as a church and congregation thank you for the assistance rendered us in getting our house of worship completed, but we are yet in debt $2,970, including interest up to June, 1880. Now, in order to raise the above amount and prevent the mortgage being closed, the trustees and pastor have made out a list of the names of 50 gentlemen whom they believe can and will give $25 each without material injury to himself or family. The pastor of the said church will call on you soon. We hope that you will not forsake us in this time of need, but will help us, for we shall ever invoke the blessings of God upon the cheerful giver.

One gentleman has already headed the list with $25, and others have promised as much as anybody else.

The Daily News Call Boxes and Messengers

To facilitate the collection of city news, as well as to place advertising patrons in close connection with the office, the publishers have placed Call Boxes at different points throughout the city, each of which will be visited several times during the day, from 7 o'clock A. M. till 2 P. M. by the Messenger Boys of the DAILY NEWS. These boxes have been put up for the purpose of affording a place of deposit for information of local news, and we cordially invite any person who has knowledge of any matter of public interest happening in his or her vicinity to write out the facts and place them in one of our boxes. Attached to each box will be found tablets of paper. Sign your name to your communication, for the knowledge of the editor only, as a guarantee of good faith on your part. We insert on this; items not signed by a known responsible name are of the value of waste paper, and will be treated accordingly. The advertising patrons of the DAILY NEWS will also find these boxes a convenience, as they can drop their favors therein, and thereby save a walk to the office. Communications, orders for the DAILY NEWS by carrier or mail, advertising copy, or information of any kind intended to reach the office, can be handed to the DAILY NEWS Messenger Boys, as they pass to and fro through the streets. They will be known by their blue caps with "DAILY NEWS" in white letters on the front, and Message Pouches of light-colored leather. They are, while on duty for the DAILY NEWS, and wearing the badge of the paper, its accredited representatives, and we trust they will, in their business, cheerfully merit the commendation of our patrons, as well as ourselves, for attention to their duties.

The following card is attached to each box:

DAILY NEWS MESSAGE BOX.
This box is placed here by consent of the proprietor, as a place of deposit for local items, society news, or anything of a character that would be of interest to the readers of a Terre Haute newspaper. THE PUBLISHERS SOLICIT SUCH INFORMATION FROM ANY ONE. They only ask contributors to be brief and to the point, and to give the information as concisely as possible. No more than ten chances to one will be no news to-morrow. → Offensive personalities must be avoided. → Write your items on the paper attached, and drop it in the box, which will be visited several times each forenoon, up to 2 P. M. by the DAILY NEWS MESSENGER BOYS, and the contents conveyed to the DAILY NEWS office. A responsible name is required to be signed to each item (for the personal knowledge only of the Editor) as a guarantee of good faith.

→ Orders for the DAILY NEWS to be left by carrier or sent by mail, or copy for advertisements, can also be placed in the box, thus securing early attention to such orders. Local items or ads. can be handed to the DAILY NEWS MESSENGER BOYS, as they pass through the streets.
