THE NEWS HAS THE LARGEST
DAILY CIRCULATION IN THE CITY.

WHY THE SOUTH IS SOLID FOR HANCOCK.

Consider what Lee and Jackson would do were they alive. THESE ARE THE SAME PRINCIPLES FOR WHICH THEY FOUGHT FOUR YEARS. Remember the men who poured forth their lifeblood on Virginia's soil, and do not abandon them now. Remember that upon your vote depends the success of the Democratic ticket. —(Wade Hampton, at Staunton, Va. July 26.)

GOOD NEWS.

The entire Republican ticket county will be elected by a not very small majority. Pierce for Congress will be elected by a very large majority. Porter's majority is supposed to be five thousand; but there is no official return and we can afford to wait the official count and jollify.

THE ELECTION.

The election on yesterday is but a fore-runner of what we can expect in November.

Every good citizen seems to be elected at the turn things have taken in this county and are glad he be Democrat or Republican, that the big Ring has been busted.

No one doubts that we had a fair election and a fair count, and the result is what every good citizen desired.

But we are not done yet. We must keep up the noble work until the November Election announces that Gen. Garfield is the next president of the United States.

We will have the next Legislature, and don't forget it.

SACRED to the memory of the Fat Men's club.

WHERE, oh where is the "Big" ring gone.

PEIRCE and prosperity.

Good enough, boys.

How do you like it.

—Not long since we chanced to pass an apple orchard which was laden with handsome Baldwins. The owner informed us that it always bore the odd years, and for this reason had netted him more profit than had been received from any other five orchards of the same size in town. As nearly every tree fruited this year, while the same kind of trees on the same kind of soil in a neighbor's orchard bore no fruit, it was evident that it was not a mere freak of nature, but the result of some treatment which the trees had received, and which had been lacking in the other orchards. We accordingly asked the owner what he knew about it, and he told us that he bought the farm after the orchard began to bear, but was told that when it was grafted care was taken to get the grafts from a tree which bore in the odd year, and to set them in an even year, and that when the grafts first began to blossom every small apple which set in an even year was relentlessly picked off, while those which came out odd years were left to grow.

Men lose their hearts through their eyes, women through their ears.

HANCOCK CAN'T EXPLAIN

The Inter Ocean says that Ben Hill indorses Hancock's position on Southern claims, and at a meeting held in New Orleans the other night a resolution was passed approving Hancock's letter in every particular. Other meeting in the South have similarly approved the position of the Democratic candidate; but the movement is so evidently the result of a pre-concerted device and understanding that it is likely to excite suspicion rather than allay distrust. There is such a thing as protesting too much.

People are set to wondering also how it happens that the very men who have been introducing bills into Congress looking to the payment of these same claims, and who have defended the South as guiltless in the war, and therefore entitled to the same consideration as the North, should all at once turn round and denounce these claims, and declare that rebels can receive no reward for their iniquity.

There is something rather remarkable about this letter which carefully read and considered. As we have stated before, there is not a word in it that excludes the consideration and approval of nearly every claim of file in Washington. The promise not to approve any bills for the reward of those who were "in rebellion" does not cover the dangerous point at all, and what seemed at first glance an omission of form simply, we now believe to have been purposely kept out of the letter at the suggestion of Mr. Hancock's Southern counselors. If this is not true, it is easy to remedy it. It is easy for General Hancock to say that in promising to veto any bills for the payment of those who were "in rebellion" he meant, any who aided, abetted, or sympathized by word or act with the Southern Confederacy, and place himself on record as opposing that iniquitous scheme for taking millions out of the Treasury—the refunding of the cotton tax.

We challenge General Hancock to make this simple statement. We assert it as our firm belief that he dare not do it. If he dare not, let him remain silent and practically confess that his letter was a cunning device to allay the anxiety of thousands of Democrats in the North who fear this question of Southern claims, and to do so without substantially pledging himself against anything which the South demands.

General Hancock may call this Southern claim question a bugbear, but that will not answer.

The question is one that is bound to come up and to be settled ere long in one way or another.

In 1878 Mr. Conger, of Michigan, introduced a joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution prohibiting the payment of all claims to parties not loyal to the government during the war, and sixty-one Democrats voted against it, fifty-two being Southern Democrats. If these gentlemen were anxious to get this "bugbear" out of politics, why did they oppose its permanent settlement by constitutional amendment?

There are between two and three thousand millions of dollars depending upon the action of the government in regard to these claims. The man who says the South will not attempt to secure this vast sum, or such part of it as she can obtain, ought to be sent to an institution for the feeble minded. The first step, and perhaps the final one, in the payment of such claims will be taken when this country is turned over to the Democratic party. If the business North does not realize this fact now, it most certainly will when both prevention and cure have become impossible.

RESPECTABILITY OF AGRICULTURE.—A clergyman once said to me, "Will farming ever be considered more respectable than now?" My answer was, "No." Farming is highly honored, when we consider that from it flows all the calls for artisans of every name to supply the real or imaginary wants of all mankind. Heaven, as a state, whether it relates to the present or the hereafter, consists mainly in the beautiful. Adam was to dress the garden, which meant to make it look well, and at the same time it would be useful. How is it to-day? A beautiful garden attracts visitors from all the surrounding country. No less does an extensive farm, made beautiful by the diligent hand, by the product of the farm, man and beast survive. All other callings are supported by it; but to the question, "Is it more respectable than formerly, or will it be?" I answered, "It has always had the precedence in respectability." God and good men in former times looked with pleasure and delight upon seed time and harvest; so in this age, professional men extol the beauties of agriculture, and especially every one who is looking for a lucrative office from the honest yeoman, as much as to say, your calling is respectable.—Robert Mansfield

NEW USE FOR SOUR MILK.—A new industry has been started in Mansfield, Mass. It is no less than the manufacture of jewelry out of sour milk. This seems a strange anomaly, but it is a fact. The milk comes in the shape of curd, from butter and cheese-making counties in New York, and looks upon its arrival, a good deal like popped corn; but before it leaves the shop it undergoes a wonderful change, and receives the name of African coral. The secret of making it up is carefully guarded, but it is certain that it has to be heated very hot, during which coloring matter is introduced, followed by a very heavy pressure. Some of it is colored black and called jet, while some appears as celluloid. It makes very handsome jewelry, and is made into all kinds and styles known in the trade.

—Mrs. Bell, the wife of one of the banana men, is going to Europe to astonish the natives, and has provided herself in advance, with a wonderful wardrobe from Worth's, and $250,000 worth of diamonds. She appears, from the descriptions in the papers, to have worn all the diamonds but very few of the clothes at the recent charity ball in New York.

General Hancock's Pledge.

General Hancock, as candidate of the Democratic party, declares that he will oppose the payment of rebel claims, and maintain the principle that disloyalty cannot be recompensed for its own wrong.

The Democratic party, the sponsor of General Hancock, declares that a free ballot is the right preservative of all rights, and that it will maintain that principle inviolate in every part of the Union.

It is only a few months since the party made this declaration in its National platform; but since then we have seen the "right" trampled under foot in Alabama without a word of protest or an effort to preserve it by those who made the declaration; and the world takes notice of the fact that, by a denial of that same right, it is proposed to carry the whole South for Hancock and the Democratic ticket.

The letter of the Democratic nominee regarding these Southern claims is couched in vigorous language, and announces a wholesome principle, and is a gratifying document to read; but the candidate must mean more than the party he upholds, and his professions and promises must be much more sincere than theirs, or this promise to veto Southern claims is a very worthless bit of rhetoric, having no practical value as security against the encroachments of a hungry party flushed and encouraged by a great victory.

That General Hancock does not comprehend the gravity of this claim business is evident from the manner in which he dismisses it as a "bugbear." But the question cannot be met by ridicule or answered by a toss of the head. The proof of the design of rebel claimants is too easy of access. Said Senator Vance the other day in Warren County, North Carolina:

No, fellow-countrymen, the South asks no bold and no unfair thing when she demands her rightful compensation for homes destroyed, farms laid waste and pillaged, property stolen, and slaves released by the Yankee plunderers who lived upon us and then refused us bounty. And it is time that the whole North should understand this. It is time that the North should understand that it must atone, as far as it can, for all the South has suffered in body, pocket or soul. Our time is coming, boys, and the long purgatory that we have gone through will make our paradise the brighter when we get there.

The pigeon-holes at Washington teem with bills having for their object the opening of this question of Southern war claims, and many of them are of a nature not covered by General Hancock's letter and promise. He says "the Government can never pay a pension or reward of any sort for war upon its own existence," and also that he would veto all legislation providing for the "payment of claims of any kind for losses or damages by persons who were in rebellion."

We venture to say there are more than $500,000,000 of claims in Washington filed by those "not in rebellion," but who were disloyal and whose claims are barred by the law as it now stands.

In the first place, General Hancock's assurance does not cover the claim for a refunding of the cotton tax, which amounts to $65,000,000, and which was paid, as a matter of course, by those "not in rebellion." The same is true of the claim preferred by States; of many of those presented by alleged owners of cotton found in Confederate storehouses at the close of the war; of those for supplies taken by our armies while in the enemy's country, and so on through the list.

It is the experience of every person who has had any thing whatever to do with these claims, that there exists no difficulty in always establishing the loyalty of a claimant. Evidence is cheap, as the witnesses from Louisiana and various Southern States abundantly demonstrated a few months ago. Loyalty having been established by the oath of some person, and there being no one individually interested in defeating a claim, there is little to hinder its allowance if once the bars are let down. The years that have elapsed since the termination of the war have scattered witnesses, events have been forgotten, and it being nobody's business the claim goes through.

Already efforts have been made to do away with the present statutory prohibitions. Last winter Mr. Wilson, of West Virginia, introduced a bill declaring that the loyalty of each citizen shall be presumed until his or her disloyalty shall be affirmatively proven, a very good rule in general, but one whose annals can be plainly seen in connection with these claims. Mr. Reagan also introduced a bill doing away with the loyalty test entirely. Mr. Culbertson, of Texas; Mr. O'Connor, of South Carolina; Mr. Thompson, of Kentucky, and others have bills pending in committees, all referring to this one question, and providing for the abolition of the present safeguards against the payment of Southern claims.

Instead of being a "bugbear," this claim business is a living reality, and in connection with the question of maintaining the purity of the ballot, is the most important issue before the people. General Hancock cannot laugh it down, or dismiss all fear by inadequate pledges and promises. The way to stop this threatened flood is to place a granite bar across its course in the shape of a Constitutional amendment, whose legality no one will dare to dispute or question. That Constitutional provision will never be placed there except through the efforts of the Republican party.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

There's nothing to exceed the diabolical satisfaction a man will take in announcing to his wife, after he has got his shirt on, that there is a button missing, and the keen delight he feels in seeing her dance around the room after a needle and thread, while she listens to a lecture on infernal carelessness, approaches ecstasy. But look out when she gets that button on, bites the button off with a snap, and begins, "There now—"
