IN THE VIGO COAL FIELDS.

In Bituminous Coal They Are Among the Richest in the State of Indiana.

PLOWING UP COAL FROM THE SURFACE.

Cropping Out in the Hills, and a Few Inches From the Surface in Creek Bottoms.

LOOK any where on the map of Indiana coal deposits, and you will find several counties claiming greater acreage and quality of bituminous coal than Vigo, but the facts are wanting. Because of the proximity of the block coal fields, the coal resources of this county have never been sufficiently developed to show their value and extent. The block coal region of western Indiana has given to Indiana coal a world wide reputation, and the expected results of petroleum gas have materially interfered with the commerce of coal, its future is a question of uncertainty. The past twenty years have brought about vast changes in the application of natural forces for the benefit of man, and in all probability the next twenty will bring as great advancement in the application of these forces towards the distribution of heat, light and power.

Terre Haute is a great coal center. Not only is it the residence of some of the most noted coal operators in the state, but its fields of coal are almost everywhere. Beneath the city there are four or five strata of good bituminous coal, and in a region of ordinary scarcity of fuel, would be mined extensively. The upper coal of this vicinity, especially that of the Wabash, seems to have been crushed and carried away by glacial action. The best evidence of this is seen in the hills of Sugar creek and Coal creek, where several good beds of coal crop out far above the coal that lies beneath this city.

No one, unless he has examined and prospected the hills west and northwest mining this coal two brothers named Broadhurst, who were practical miners from England, settled in Sugar Creek township, and opened a coal bank a half mile north of the Bennett shaft, and for several years all the coal used in Terre Haute was furnished from Broadhurst's mine.

The settled country along Coal Creek, the city, was not a coal field. A great many workings were patronized by the neighbors but no one thought of charging anything for the coal. There was so much timber to burn in clearing the little farms, that the thought of burning coal never entered the minds of those sturdy farmers. During the early winter the people of that region would mine coal to exchange for corn, and it was no uncommon thing twenty years ago to see dozens of wagons loaded with coal on their way to Mulberry Grove and the region north of Paris to exchange it in even wagon loads for corn.

One of the most remarkable coal fields of the country, and one of which very little is known, is in the Coal creek bottom, northwest of the city. The bed of the creek for nearly a mile, is a coal stratum. It is mined with a plow and scraper; being found at a depth of from one to two feet from the surface. Over the river coal, as it is called by many, is a first-class quality of bituminous coal, and its abundance and easy access affords unknown wealth to the country.

of the city, has any idea of the quantity of coal there is within ten miles. It is safe to say that at least eight different beds of good bituminous coal are found in Vigo county.

The first coal mined in Vigo county for market was taken from the bluff near the Sugar creek bridge one mile from Maxville, in the year 1843, by a Mr. Bennett, who operated a small flouring mill which stood where the bridge is now built. The old shaft and tunnel are almost filled with the wreck of former thrift. Not long after Bennett began

A fact that all men with gray and many shaded whiskers should know, that Buckingham's Dye always colors an even brown or black at will.

Senator Everts' Log Cabin. Senator Everts has erected an old fashioned log cabin on an elevated point of land which he lately purchased on the Potomac, just below Washington. It is much more elegant in its finish and appointments than were the homes of our ancestors in the log cabin days of long ago, but probably not more conducive to comfort.

Outside, it presents the appearance of the typical old-fashioned house of the pioneers, being built of logs hewn in the adjacent forest, and raised and chinked in the olden style. The interior will be finished in native woods, from the place, but, unlike the primitive original, it will be finished in oil.

This is a luxury to which the dwellers in the rude cabins of early days dared not aspire, it being pure luxury, and not adding to the comfort of the domicile. Senator Everts began the log cabin last summer with the determination that if Gen. Harrison were elected, he would reverse the popular campaign axiom of half a century ago, "From the Log Cabin to the White House," to a social axiom of the new administration, "From the White House to the Log Cabin."

Harrison was successful; Senator Everts' new, old-fashioned, log cabin will doubtless also prove a great success. Many a happy day's sojourn from the soiled and hazy atmosphere of the log cabin president will no doubt enjoy beneath its hospitable roof as the guest of the genial, senior senator from New York.

Great as the success may be that attends the introduction of this old-time log cabin to fashionable life, it cannot be greater than the success which attended the introduction of Warner's Log Cabin Sarsaparilla, one of the old time, effective remedies, the use of which, in primitive times, gave our grand-parents health and rugged old age.

Senator Everts' log cabin is but another evidence of the tendency in fashionable life, at present so marked, toward things primitive and antiquated. The new fashion is for things old-fashioned, and a return to the old-fashioned roots and herbs remedies of log cabin days is noted with pleasure, as their common use does not permanently injure the system, as the use of the mineral drugs of modern medical practice does.
