These are the cold figures made public yesterday by the bureau of statistics after critical analysis of the cost of living problem, with particular reference to meat.

"Grandfather" Gwin Remembers About Early History of Monticello.

Monticello Herald—Mr. John M. Gwin, of Rensselaer, now in his 92nd year, climbed the Herald office stairs unaided Tuesday and gave the editor a story of early Monticello which not many people remember. It was in 1852, and he and two of his neighbors were emigrating from Henry county to Jasper county with their families in wagons. They stopped here to replenish their stock of provisions, and on their way down to the flour mill the wagon containing the women and children upset, and horses, wagon, women and children rolled over an embankment about fifteen feet high. All the occupants of the wagon were more or less hurt, and one child, a little daughter of Rev. Lemuel Shortridge 18 months old, was fatally injured, her skull being fractured by striking a sharp stone. Drs. Spencer and Lovejoy attended the child and by raising a piece of the skull which pressed upon the brain, relieved her of the spasms caused by the depression. The families resumed their journey the next day, but the child died about three weeks later at the home of Mr. Shortridge's father on the Monon, where they stopped to care for it.

Mr. Gwin is the grandfather of Mrs. Geo. A. Thomas, at whose home he is visiting this week. He also has a daughter living south-east of town who has recently moved here. Though now in the last decade of a century, he would pass easily for a man of seventy. His hearing is impaired, but his eyesight is good, and for twenty years past he has been able to read without glasses. He has voted at eighteen presidential elections, and his vote has helped elect twelve presidents, from which it may be inferred that he is a republican. That he is a thoroughbred may also be inferred from the fact that of a voting posterity of thirty-six sons, grandsons and son-in-laws, all but one voted for Roosevelt in 1904. One, he says, broke away and "went popocrat."

Parish Literary Club to Present "Tony, the Convict," Monday Night.

In the hall over the Catholic school on next Monday night several young people who are members of the parish literary society will present the very interesting play entitled "Tony, the Convict." The cast has been selected from the most active workers in the society and the rehearsals which have been going on for some time, have put them into first-class shape for the production.

The play is well known and few people here are who have not seen it, but the plot is so interesting and throughout the story, which introduces a very clever line of comedy, there is a pathos that holds the wrapt attention of the audience, while the love tale that is interwoven throughout the plot is of heart interest.

The admission will be only 25 cents and the proceeds will go toward the pastor's new residence fund.
