Chas. W. Bussell is moving Tom Walters old residence back from the new one to be used for a shed. Mr. Walters has a beautiful new residence with many modern conveniences.

The eight-months-old baby of Mr. and Mrs. J. Ross is very sick with some kind of bowel trouble, and the physician thinks it may prove to be an abscess. The child is in a critical condition and the friends and relatives are quite anxious about it.

J. P. Gwin and family left on the eleven o'clock train Friday for their new home near Mammoth Springs, Arkansas. They expected to arrive there about 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Mr. Gwin's were excellent neighbors and their departure, which is probably permanent, was regretted by their many friends.

Mrs. Matilda Smith, who has been sick for several weeks at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Geo. Bond, has been improving quite slowly, and last week had to submit to an operation to remove some puss from the lungs. It was a severe operation but she seems to be getting better as fast as possible, and it is hoped the operation will result in her ultimate recovery.

Misrepresentation A Delight Of Jasper County Democrat.

The following paragraph appeared last week in the Jasper County Democrat:

"Editor Hearn of The Rensselaer Republican went before the county commissioners Monday, we are told, and wanted them to fix the limit for saloons at one to each 500 population—the lowest limit allowed under the Proctor liquor regulation law—but the board ignored his request and fixed it at the maximum, one to the one thousand."

The text of the paragraph is absolutely false. The editor of The Republican did not want the commissioners to fix the limit of saloons at one for each 500 population. The editor of the Democrat says with his contemptible lack of responsibility and disregard of truth, "We are told," and thereby saves himself a direct lie because he is so anxious to hear things that are false and maligning that he is apt to be told almost anything.

The editor of The Republican went before the board of commissioners to see what action had been taken on this matter, in order that the news might be printed. Auditor Leatherman was in the room and the commissioners said that they had not yet taken action on the matter but expected to that afternoon. The matter was discussed briefly and informally and the editor of The Republican said that so far as Jasper county was concerned regulation was probably unnecessary, but that it would be best, no doubt, to take action if a limit was desired, because this was the last crack they would have at it. In a friendly discussion the writer stated that inasmuch as the Proctor law provided for the reinstatement of saloons there probably would be little advantage in limiting the number, and that if saloons were to come to Rensselaer at all, we might as well have two or three as only one. We also stated that the Proctor law, in placing the limit to the number, offered a fine chance for graft on the part of commissioners, and created a monopoly of the saloon business. Auditor Leatherman expressed a view that the best thing from the temperature standpoint would be to go as far as possible to limit the saloons in number and the writer stated that other counties were largely adopting that basis and that Jasper county should probably do the same thing.

The discussion was friendly and informal and no effort was made and no thought occurred of influencing the action of the commissioners.

If the democratic legislature had provided a law by which the limit of saloons was placed at one for every million people it would have met our approval and the owner of a joint of this kind would have starved to death if he depended upon his livelihood of men who follow the total abstinence plan of the writer. But he would wax rich if a certain democratic editor drank as much over the bar as he keeps in the basement.
