79 HUN PLANES FALL

With the return of good weather myraids of airmen are daily to be seen over the battle lines, dropping bombs or in aerial combat. The British, French and German air services are claiming numerous victories for their aviators in fights in the air. During the first ten days of March alone British airmen are credited with accounting for seventy-nine German planes, while the German war office asserts that on Wednesday seventeen enemy machines and three captive balloons were destroyed by German airmen along the France-Belgium front.

THINKING IT THROUGH.

Indiana cities and counties should not lose sight of the primary purpose of the War-Savings campaign in their endeavor to reach the established quota by selling stamps in large amounts and using accumulated funds for the purchase, but if that method is depended upon entirely to reach the quota, the fundamental object of the campaign, namely, to encourage thrift and to lessen competition between the public and the government for the product of labor, will be nullified.

If there were plenty of labor in the country, or if the labor were adjusted to war conditions, the only criticism that could be made by using the Liberty loan plan or organizations for the sale of War-Savings and Thrift Stamps would be that the lesson in Thrift would not be quite so wide-spread. But the fact remains that there is a mad adjustment of labor in the country. The war is the biggest thing before us right now. We have got to win the war to save the country and to save the government and to save business. If we don't win the war we won't have any business and we won't have any country.

In order to win the war we not only must have soldiers but we must have guns and ammunition and food and clothing. In order to have guns and food and clothing and ammunition we must have men to produce them. And every time we buy something which we do not need or when we buy more than the necessary supply of what we do need, we are creating a demand for labor and competing with the government for that labor. We create a demand not only for the labor which transports it and stores it in warehouses and warehouses. We cannot build a bridge of ships to Pershing and keep on buying things which we can well do without.

It is very natural that business men should at first look askance at an undertaking which proposes a reduction in the volume of their business, but when they think the thing through and realize that if we do not win the war they won't have any business; when they realize that unless we get into this thing as a nation there is a very good chance that we will not win the war, then both self-interest and patriotism will dictate their cordial endorsement of the War-Savings campaign. In other words most of them would rather take a little black bread in their business now than to have white bread now and slavery if we don't win.

Upon thinking the thing through further they will realize that they profit most when men do not spend all they have the moment they get it, but save something for the rainy day. When men, as soon as they get a dollar, blow it in, they have nothing but the charity of the merchants to tide them over the rough weather. They are not good customers in the long run.

Then there is another phase of this matter deserves consideration: It is not easy for any one person to say that such and such an article is non-essential to the health or efficiency of anyone. The government itself cannot say that without doing injustice to some person or persons, some business or businesses. Some of the experiences resulting from the recent fuel order amply illustrate that fact. Therefore the government, through the War-Savings campaign, puts it up to each individual to say for himself what is essential to his own efficiency and health.

If this optional plan of reduction of our competition with the government for labor should by any reason not happen to be successful, the last resource the government would have would be to conscript all labor and use it where it thought best in the conduct of the war.

It is not surprising, the further one considers the matter that the War-Savings campaign plan grows in the appreciation and esteem of the general public and particularly of the business men.

The slogan "No profiteering" is intended for little and medium sized businesses as well as big business.

Farmers with maple groves have an opportunity this year to do a double patriotic service: Help furnish the country with sugar from the trees and put the profits in War-Savings Stamps.

GLOSSARY.

Some of Billy Sunday's Nouns and Their Attendant Adjectives. Etc.

A PRUSSIAN—A damnable, rotten, vile, cruel assassin.

THE KAISER—A weazel-eyed, pig-jowled, bull-necked, pot-bellied, God-hating, dirty, stinking cut-throat who will get HIS when we lock the devil's dirty mouth and manure his paws.

OTHER PRUSSIAN—God-forsaken gang of thugs who feed, bathe, and gormandize on the bones of little children and the mangled bodies of innocent women they have left behind them.

A CABARET DANCER—A daughter of Herodias who kicks her foot up to a quarter to 12, doing the hoochi-koochi, can-can, kitchen sink, and tangle wriggle.

A "WET" CITY—An old, whiskey-soaked, polluted city that is going to hell so fast she's breaking the speed limit.

ONE WHO OPPOSES BILLY'S CAMPAIGN—A buttermilk-eyed, white-livered, stoop-shouldered mutt.

A BREWER—Bilious, slant-head, stinkink sot with a half ounce power bean.

A TIGHTWAD—A gink who never gives away 10 cents without singing, "God be with you till we meet again," and who sings through his nose for fear he will wear out his false teeth.

A SOUR-FACED CHRISTIAN—A fellow who thinks he has to look like a hedgehog to be pious, and who would get to heaven lots quicker if he went to a barber shop oftener.

PROFESSIONAL SOCIETY WOMEN—Hags of uncleanness who walk our streets, rest behind rich tapestries, cruise upon their yachts, or flaunt themselves at us from their limousines.

DIVORCE—Something that is legally right but morally as rotten as hell.

BOOZE INTERESTS—A rattlesnake that wriggled its miserable carcass out of hell, where there was a jubilee when lager beer was invented.

PRO-GERMANS—Dirty, smirking pretzels from across the sea who settled on our necks like carbuncles.

DANGER.

We desire to call the attention of the parents of a number of boys who are in the habit of jumping on our trucks while they are moving. This is very dangerous and we have seen a number of very serious accidents narrowly averted. We appeal to the parents and the boys in all kindness to stop this dangerous practice at once.

HANGING GROVE

Robert C. McDonald is substituting for Royal Bussell while the latter is taking his vacation.

There was a very pretty home wedding at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Hitchings Wednesday, March 6. The contracting parties were Mr. Fred Stath of Barkley and Miss Mabel Putt, who is a sister of Mrs. Hitchings. Several relatives and friends were in attendance and after the ceremony, which took place at exactly 12 o'clock, a beautiful three course dinner was served. Mr. and Mrs. Stath left on the afternoon train for Roachdale for a few days visit, after which they will be at home on the Stath farm in Barkley township.

Chas. Bussell has his car of goods loaded and will start them to Hammond this Monday morning. He began moving a week ago, but on account of car shortage, was unable to get a car until Friday night, consequently had to store the goods, this making double work moving. Mr. Bussell is not taking any live stock except his wild geese and some chickens.

Chas. Reed and family have moved onto the farm recently vacated by Charles Bussell.

Emil Johnson and family have moved onto the G. H. Lowman farm, recently purchased by Mr. Johnson.

Gaylord Parker took dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Royal Bussell Sunday.

E. E. Baughman has moved onto the R. B. Wetherall farm south of George Parkers' farm. Mrs. Baughman has been sick for the past few weeks with pneumonia and was unable to assist much with the house work.

Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Jacks entertained the County club at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Parker last Friday evening. They will meet with Mr. and Mrs. Marion Large on March 22nd.

Paul Randle and Edd Cook have the mumps.

Misses Florence and Ella Bussell visited at the Virgai Holson home Saturday night.

Borne, March 10 to Mr. and Mrs. I. Widner a girl.

OUR CHOCOLATE CANDY IS DELICIOUS

We recommend them highly. They are the best quality and most deliciously flavored. We make the most superior chocolates in town and the proof of this statement is in the eating of them. Stop in and buy a box and you will be convinced of their goodness.
