"WHO'S AT FAULT?"

Who is at fault? You or your car? K. T. Rhoades Co., Battery Experts of Rensselaer, says: "You can't drive a car all winter and expect perfect service all summer too. The car is all right, but they do need a little thoughtful care. One of the parts of a car which is put to hard service in the winter is the electrical equipment and particularly the battery. Cold engines and long winter nights mean a heavy drain on its resources and sometimes it can't regain its strength in the spring all by itself. That's why we recommend that our customers come in and have us look at their batteries. If it's all right, we say so, but often we can save it by getting hold of it in time to prevent a break-down. It may only need recharging, but regardless of what it needs, when it finally leaves our place, it's ready for a summer of happy touring and satisfactory worry-free service."
