A GREAT CITIZEN.

To hear Gen. Wood is to come under the spell of that elusive thing we try to describe as a great character. With none of the professional orator, with none of that studied grace and polish which men so often utilize instead of solid worth, he gives one the impression of a sober thinker, a wise administrator, a true patriot in a word, a great citizen.

It is hard to think of him as a candidate for this or that, as a self-seeker of any kind; but he appears as a brave and honest man who has given much thought to the problems of the nation and whose services should be utilized, as indeed they have always been utilized, for the stupendous tasks of peace or war. He may not be President, but he must be a heroic figure of our public life, whose counsel is worth seeking, whose qualities of leadership must not be despised or dispensed with.

Few men have so correctly sensed the needs of the time or the spirit of the age. He sees the new ideas that are moving among men, but he clings passionately to the old and homely virtues, the gospel of liberty and law, the constitution, the ancient landmarks. He is willing to make progress, but he requires to know beforehand the steps in question will lead. He is intensely practical in application, but immovably wedded to the true and tried principles of our historical development. He is a man to be trusted and followed in whatever capacity his duty calls him; and from his past we know that whatever that duty is, it will be well done.

A Man to Man Policy that Wins

THE Standard Oil Company was a pioneer in the petroleum industry. From the day of its organization to the present moment the Company has put forth every effort to make and sell goods of the highest quality and always has been satisfied to work on a small profit. It has made money for its 4711 stockholders by reason of the volume of business done.

In its dealings with the men and women who make up its working organization, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has maintained a policy of fairness and liberality which has held its men and inspired them with the high ideals of service which have been the key to its prosperity.

Today the 22,000 employees are working as one man to increase production and decrease the cost of manufacture and distribution, for they know that their every effort is appreciated in terms which are substantial.

The working and living conditions of the men and women employed by the Company always have been matters of major interest to those in authority. Under the plan now in process of organization, the employees will be given an ever-increasing voice in the management of their affairs.

The spirit of fairness which animates both the Company and its employees, in their relations with one another, has again proved that all that is needed to increase production and insure industrial peace is to make it possible for the employer and employee to sit down and discuss all phases of their problems man to man.
