THE production of crude oil is, in itself, a highly specialized business.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) recognizes this fact and leaves to others the drilling of wells, the operation of pipe lines, and the other activities incident to the production, storage, and transportation of petroleum.

It buys its requirements of crude oil on the open market and pays the market price.

The business which engages the attention of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is the manufacture, distribution, and sale of the products of petroleum.

The Company goes into the oil fields and buys the Crude it wants from whoever has it for sale. In this way the Company is able to select with care the raw material it uses, and is not hampered in its endeavor to render greater service by being tempted to use crude which is not exactly suited to its needs.

By devoting all of its time to the business of refining and marketing, the Company is able to fulfill its obligation to the public by supplying petroleum products of the highest known standards—to maintain at all times a uniformity of quality—and to manufacture in such volume and in such variety of forms—as to enable it to sell these products at a low price.

Thomas Britton a Curious Anomaly
In English Social Life of Time of Queen Anne.

One of the most curious anomalies of the social life of London during the time of Queen Anne—called the Augustan age because of its great literary men—was a retail dealer in coal, named Thomas Britton, who was buried in Clerkenwell churchyard, London, on October 1, 1714. He exercised a humble craft, and occupied a habitation and wore a garb corresponding in plainness to his trade, and yet this singular man contrived by his various talents, and more especially his musical tastes, to assemble around him the most aristocratic company in London, and to be admitted into their society on equal terms. According to the practice of the time, he sold coal in small quantities, delivering it himself each morning. It is related that having finished his rounds, he joined a distinguished company that met each Saturday at one of the booksellers to discuss literature and exchange opinions respecting the latest books. This company contained such distinguished and powerful persons as the duke of Devonshire and the earls of Oxford, Pembroke, Sunderland and Winchelsea. Britton's house in Aylesbury street, Clerkenwell, was the meeting place of leaders in the fashionable society of London. On the ground floor was the warehouse for coal, and above, reached by breakneck stairs from the outside, was a low narrow room, in which the musical coalman entertained his grand and elegant guests. A portrait of this remarkable man is in the British museum.

NOTHING UNREAL ABOUT THIS

Only an Idealist Would Have Expected Anything Else From the Modern Gilded Youth.

Editor George Horace Lorimer was talking in a Philadelphia club about realism.

"I've got no time for realists," he said, "because they paint human nature worse than it is. Here's a typical realist story for you:

"A pretty girl was engaged to two young men simultaneously, and one evening the parlor maid came to her and said in a scared voice:

"Oh, Miss Bessie, them two gents what you're engaged to has called together, and somehow they've found out about both engagements."

"The pretty girl threw her cigarette into the fire pettishly.

"What the dickens shall I do?" she exclaimed.

"But the parlor maid smiled joyfully.

"I'll tell you what to do, Miss Bessie," she said. "I'll go downstairs and say you're crying in your room because your pop has lost all his money. Then you can be engaged for keeps to the gent what stays."

"That seems a good plan," said the pretty girl, and she lit another cigarette and waited.

"The maid was gone about three minutes. Then she returned with a frightened look on her white face.

"Miss Bessie, both on 'em has gone," she said."

A Preacher Fisherman.

He couldn't get rich preaching, so he gave it up and went fishing. After a season's work with a salmon fishing crew he had enough money to buy tickets to Norway for his wife, their four children and himself. Now Rev. H. B. Nyoen, former pastor of the Norwegian Baptist church of Tacoma, Wash., is on his way to Norway where he says preaching is more lucrative than in America.

His desire for money was due entirely to his longing to return to Norway. When his earnings as a fisherman were sufficient to buy the tickets he was willing to quit fishing. He will go to Harstad, Norway, where he will receive as pastor about $1,500 a year, with house and fuel. He received only $800 from his little church in Tacoma.

Expenses Low in Australia.

It is hard to imagine in this country, but, according to Mark Sheldon, Australian trade representative, his country is in a class by itself, so far as the cost of living is concerned.

Living costs have increased but 30 per cent, and a four-room cottage rents for from $20 to $25 a month. There is no I. W. W. and employers and labor unions are forced by law to arbitrate.

There is no new tax to pay the war debt, and the country has three crops of wheat, to put on the market, according to Mr. Sheldon. Soldiers are paid $10 a week by the government until they secure jobs.

Admonishing Them.

"Looky here, now!" sternly said Constable Sam T. Slackputter, the redoubtable sleuth of Petunia. "This diabolical practice of matching pennies on the sidewalk has got to stop! Why, dod-blast it, every few days when I come along walking my beat, with my head high like an officer of the law, to carry his'n, I fall over a bunch of yot' infernal young cusses and get my uniform all dusty!"—Kansas City Star.

The Notable New Six

It's the Cleveland Six. Not really new, either, for the factory began deliveries last Summer and since then the Cleveland has gone out over the country into the hands of thousands of owners. And these owners say they are delighted with it. There is every good reason why they should be delighted with it. For the Cleveland Six is really an extraordinary car.

We cannot tell you how good the Cleveland Six is. You must ride in it and drive it to know.

This experience will convince you of the power and pick-up and speed and flexibility of this exclusive Cleveland-built motor.

It will convince you of the comfort of the car, contributed to so much by the low underslung spring construction and the wide soft seat cushions.

You will be amazed at the ease of handling your Cleveland, how lightly it steers and shifts, and at the instant positive action of its brakes.

There isn't any other light car that will give you so much of all that you wish, and at such a fair price.

Come let us show you what a car the Cleveland is

WASHINGTON NEWS IN BRIEF.

Washington, D. C., March 23. Billions of dollars are being exacted from the people in taxes to keep up the administration's pay roll and support the civilian war machine in almost the same magnitude as during the progress of actual hostilities. There has been a reduction of only 2,840 civil employes in Washington since Oct. 31, 1919, and there are now 100,110 employes, as compared with a pre-war force of 37,908.

The senate finance committee decided to recommend the building of a high tariff wall around America's infant aircraft industry to save it from destruction by British and French competition.

The National Association of Railway and Utilities Commissioners protested to the interstate commerce commission against the adoption of the property investment accounts of the carriers as the basis for the return of 5 1/2 per cent prescribed by the new transportation law as had been urged by the carriers.

Gov. Lowden of Illinois will be the first presidential candidate to be placed in nomination at the Republican national convention in Chicago next June, according to the Lowden campaign managers in Washington.

One of the first acts of Bainbridge Colby after he assumed the office of secretary of state was to request of the senate Foreign relations committee to lift the lid of secrecy surrounding the investigation of his fitness for the post and to make the record of the hearing public.

Directors of the interchurch world movement announced that "big business" and "Wall street" are behind the nation-wide movement to combat bolshevism and the Reds and that various multi-millionaires are pledged to support the campaign of education and relief directed against radicalism.

Arrangements were completed today by the senate subcommittee on privileges for recounting the Michigan ballots to determine whether Truman H. Newberry or Henry Ford was elected senator in 1918.
